One lady writes and says: "It cured me of falling for a year, and I can now go to school." Address: H. G. ROOT, M. D., 182 Pearl St., New York.

"It may not be generally known," says Joaquin Miller, "that the Columbia river and the Sacramento river were once one and the same stream. But this is the fact. To say nothing of the assurance of geologists and the Indian tradition, you can easily trace the links of connection by the chain of lakes reaching from the head waters of the Sacramento river to a point near where the Columbia river burst through the Cascade mountains and made its way into the Pacific ocean near where Astoria now stands instead of flowing on down by Mt. Shasta and out of the Golden Gate."
