Discuss Measures Likely to Come Up in the Fifty-First Congress.

SENATOR MITCHELL'S VIEWS.

Washington Post. Senator John H. Mitchell, of Oregon, was asked by a reporter of the Post for his views on the questions likely to come up in the Fifty-First Congress. "Will, in your opinion, the approaching session of Congress be one of any more than ordinary importance; and, if so, why?" inquired the reporter. "I believe the first session of the Fifty-first congress will, by reason of the many important questions, national and international, that must necessarily come up for consideration, be the most important of any since those sessions during which the great reconstruction measures were enacted. Why this will be so, in my opinion, is in a measure because of the prodigious growth and expansion of the country in respect of population, wealth, commerce (internal and external), the extension of government lines by the creation of new states, the just claim of these new states upon the general government for national aid in various directions, the marvelous extension of railroads, of transportation and commercial avenues of various kinds throughout the vast empire of the West and South, the changed and still rapidly changing trade relations between the different sections of the country and between the United States as a whole and our neighboring countries, north and south of this continent, the great increase in the number and importance of legal controversies in the Federal courts, and the consequent inadequacy of the Federal judiciary machinery to meet the demands of the people, to say nothing of the many new and important subjects that must come up for consideration, such as the irrigation of the arid lands of the West and South, the protection of our forests and fisheries, the fortification of our coasts, legislative restraint of trusts, the curbing of the unreasonable and unjust aggressions of quasi public interstate transportation corporations, the organization of a tribunal for the adjudication and appropriation for the payment of long deferred Indian degradation claims of Western pioneers, to say nothing of the approaching Centennial Exposition—all these things will, in my judgment, necessarily compel congress to consider questions of more than ordinary nature, and, I may say, of infinite importance to the people of this country, and many of which is of a character so new, complex, and intricate, requiring careful construction as to questions of constitutional power as well as mere matters of policy, as to command the exercise of the very best judgment of congress, both in a constitutional and political sense. Among the important subjects that must be dealt with are, of course, many old and ordinary ones, such as the revision of the tariff, the subject of coinage and regulation thereof, and of the currency generally, the regulation of commerce between this and foreign countries, and among the several states—the latter through interstate commerce legislation, by way of proper amendments to the present interstate commerce act, and the former in such reasonable constitutional restrictions as may not be reached by treaty stipulation and which still may be deemed wise and necessary to the proper protection of American interests, such as the absolute exclusion of Chinese laborers and other objectionable immigrants, the ordinary and extraordinary appropriations of the government, and so on. But even these old subjects must, by reason of the marvelous growth and radically changed conditions, territorially, commercially, and otherwise, not alone in the United States, but in all the civilized nations of the earth with which we are brought in closer contact from day to day, and which congress must not lose sight of, must be approached in a somewhat different manner, with more enlarged vision and with a disposition on the part of congress to get, in a measure, out of the old ruts of legislation, through and along which congress could very properly and safely move when our population, trade, occupied territory, number of states, commerce and business of the country generally, legal, political, and otherwise, were but one-half or one-third of what they are at the present day or what they were even ten years ago."

Editor Hendricks, of the Salem Statesman has been indicted by the grand jury for having advertised the Louisiana State Lottery contrary to the laws of this state.

A 16 year old girl has been arrested in New York for the atrocious crime of stealing her father's trousers while he slept and pawnning them. Notwithstanding she was young and pretty she was sentenced to four months imprisonment.

The postmaster general has established a new postoffice in Uinta county, Wyoming, and called it Grover. The postmaster's name is Thurman. Grover and Thurman go together gracefully, but it is regarded as an extraordinary combination for Mr. Wana-maker to set up.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis reside at Stayton. Last Friday night there was a dance at Melama. Mr. Davis attended against his wife's wishes, leaving her at home. The next morning she made up her mind that it was on account of a certain young lady, and, oh—well she hunted up some poison and took it. Then she concluded not to die, a doctor was sent for, and she is now alive. Husbands and wives should have a better understanding with each other.—Albany Democrat.

There are 3,000 medical women in the United States whose incomes range from $5,000 to $20,000 a year. The number is increasing every year, and the supply of "lady doctors" bids fair to be as great as that of the male physicians. Austria is the only civilized country in the world which prohibits women from entering the medical profession. Russia and China permit them and the Queens of Italy and Roumania employ women physicians.

"Prisoner, have you anything to say before the sentence of the court is passed upon you?" "I have, your honor." Turning to his lawyer: "You slick-fingered, smooth-jawed puddin-head! You lilly-head-slamm'd hunk of soap fat! You said you would clear me for twenty dollars, and took the money in advance. You hain't got sense enough to be assistant janitor of a corn crib, you don't know as much law as a Texas horned frog, and you hain't the principle of a blind owl! Go ahead judge!"

A well known citizen, who is something of a performer upon the piano, recently passed an evening at the house of a young lady. The company was agreeable, and he staid somewhat late. As he arose to take his departure the young lady said: "Pray don't go yet, Mr. H—I want you to play something for me." "Oh, you must excuse me to night. It is very late, and I should disturb the neighbors." "Never mind the neighbors," answered the young lady, quickly; "they poisoned our dog yesterday."

Why is it that some people seem to think that the sole aim and object of a newspaper man's life is to boom his fellow men and live upon the knowledge that he is doing good in the world? An editor's space is his stock in trade, it is worth so much and is generally sold for a very small per cent. of its actual value. A banker makes his living by using his money. How would it look for any well to do business man to run into the bank occasionally and ask for a quarter? Curious feelings would promenade through the brain of the average man were one of his wealthy neighbors to come into his store and ask for a sack of flour as a personal favor. Yet the average newspaper man takes pleasure in giving his patrons an occasional puff. It is when he is censured for not blowing up some man who says that money spent in advertising is money thrown away, that patience ceases to be a virtue, and his habitual reserve and modesty falls from him like claff before the whirlwind as it were.—Ex.

Catarrh

Is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which working through the blood, cures the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanent cure. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed. Hood's Sarsaparilla also builds up the whole system, and makes you feel renewed in health and strength.

Catarrh

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, and received great relief and benefit from it. The catarrh was very disagreeable, especially in the winter, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effect to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I am never without Hood's Sarsaparilla in my house as I think it is worth its weight in gold." Mrs. C. B. Goss, 1622 Eighth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Sold by all druggists, $1.00 per bottle. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apthecaries, Lowell, Mass. 100 Doses One Dollar $10 REWARD.

Strayed or stolen from Parkers station, on or about the first of May, 1889, one sorrel mare, weight about 8 or 9 hundred pounds. Branded (no connected) on right shoulder. Little white in forehead, also saddle marks. A reward of $10.00 is offered to the finder, who will deliver said animal at Babcock's barn, at Prairie City.

John L. Sullivan is said to have spent all his money and is now dependent on his friends. He is $15,000 in debt, yet within six years he has made from benefits and fights nearly $250,000.

According to a decree published by the minister of education no clergyman can in Italy be an inspector or director of a state school. This is based upon a recent law to the effect that the local control of schools should be in the hands of heads of families, who would naturally take a deep interest in their welfare.

The English language is undoubtedly destined to prevail throughout the world, and may, a few hundred years hence, become the universal language. It is seriously proposed to adopt it as the national language of Japan. It is the tongue already most widely spoken excepting possibly the Chinese, and has elements of progress which that can never have, on account of the lack of energy and civilization of that people. In Egypt the English occupation has mostly superseded the French language. Twenty-five years hence the United States will have nearly one hundred million people, and Australia will have thirty millions or nearly as many as the British Islands now contain. At the beginning of this century only about twenty million people spoke the English language, and they lived mainly in England.

IN THE FIELD.

We publish to-day the first of a series of advertisements of one of the largest advertising houses of the country, under yearly contract, and the line of fine work of which this one is the initial display, will wear an old, familiar face to a large majority of our readers. Those not familiar with such kindly announcements, may be considered as belonging to the uninitiated, who, due time, for their own future welfare, will become acquainted with the merits of so good a thing, so universally known. Annually, with a system like the rising and setting of the sun, these greetings, which bear health and happiness to the people, make their show. It is a good sign of the standing and influence of a paper—if we say so—to have its columns graced by the attractions of such reliable matter, and to have dealings with a house of such a character. With the newspaper fraternity such transactions are known to be always attended by fairness, promptness and unfailing integrity on the part of the proprietors towards the publishers. Nor do the mutual relations between the two end with these considerations. It is a pleasure and satisfaction always to know that what they say as advertisers is as reliable as their word of honor which, in turn, is as sound as gold. We give place therefore and make our column rules a frame to the picture of the good, old monk, and to all that may be said in behalf of the great remedy for pain, St. Jacobs Oil, with a surety of its truth and with a surety of the virtues of the compound. Their advertising this season is beyond their standard always of the strongest and most effective kind, and the testimonials for the year 1889 to the efficacy of this far-famed preparation, are as convincing as ever.
