After the ballot was taken the vote stood: For conviction, 35; against, 19. The count only fell short of the consitutional twois a falling off of over 2,725,378 quite. The ceventh republican was Mr. E. G. Ross, then senator from Kansas. He was recently governor of New Mexico. What would have happened in case Andrew Johnson had been found guilty is summed up by ex-Governor Ross in his modest letter:

My great hope, for the past twenty years, has been to live long enough to see my action indorsed by the American people, and that hope seems now likely to be realized.
