CROSSING THE RIVER.

A Pathetic Little Story Based on a Railroad Accident. Ben went to sleep first, but his faithful Rachel followed him quickly—both were ready to meet their Maker and to receive their reward.

Engineer Dimmick, of the Chicago express, said he had been in nervous dread of an accident from the moment he pulled out of the Lake Shore Depot in Chicago, writes William H. Mober in the Toledo Blade. This had made him unusually careful, but as he reached Sherman's crossing a little behind time he began to lose his fear.

When the engine stopped a part of the wagon was on the head of the horse, which was distributed along the track and two old people were lying near the fence. Dimmick was the first to reach them. They both breathed. Was there a physician among the passengers? Yes, two.

They were tenderly carried to Mr. Richards' house nearby, and the physicians were told that if they would stay until the local practitioner could be found a locomotive would be sent back for them in an hour. They agreed to stay. The bell rang; travelers hurried to their places; some with white faces at the thought that it might have been themselves; others full of the importance a participation in the event would give them and their story, and others, forgetting themselves, thinking only of the sorrow brought to others.

Mr. Richards placed his house at the command of the physicians. Stimulants were administered, and when the family doctor and the children of the sufferers had arrived the father was moaning, but the mother had opened her eyes. Late in the night, after hours of faithful and incessant labor over them, the mother expired.

Lord Lytton, British Minister to France, is said to resemble his father, the novelist, in personal appearance, having the same long face and looking eyes, full, straight hair and prominent nose. While literature has been his avocation, he has made diplomatic his vocation and has served at many of the courts of Europe. His most important positions have been that of Viscount of France and his present one. As Minister to France he receives $90,000 salary and a palace to live in.

White or polar owls are frequently caught in Eastern Oregon. They come from the mysterious north; where it may be they have perched on the north pole, and "mightily complained to the moon" of the scarcity of mice in that land of snow and ice.

Mr. Andrew Young, the writer of the religious song, "There is a Happy Land, Far, Far Away," is still alive, a man 80 years of age, vigorous in mind and body, and having all that sympathy for children without which it is impossible to influence the little ones to do good.

John W. Burdette, for many years editorial writer and business manager of the Burlington Hawkeye, is a younger brother of the famous humorist. He says: "Bob always bubbled over with fun, and his stock of stories was inexhaustible, even when a child. He could make us a good fairy tale or story of adventure at a moment's notice, and his younger brothers were always after him for just one more story, Bob, whenever we got him alone. At best time we were especially annoying to him. After we were all undressed up for our night in a bed, Bob would tell us a score of stories, and we constantly begged for one more until he would become weary. I guess that some of Bob's best stories were told to us in those days. I would not like to say a thousand times for fear of exaggeration, and if I said less than a thousand times it might not be up to the number of occasions when Bob was obliged to kick me both out of bed and roll himself up in the blankets and go to sleep in spite of us, for we never tired of hearing him, no matter how sleepy and tired he might become. Yes, if one hundredth part of the fanciful, whimsical and inventions which Bob entertained his little brothers with could be printed, the world would call him the genius of the most marvelous kind; for the thousand tales of the Arabian Nights were never more interesting than those those winter nights' tales of my good brother Bob. There never was a better brother."

China is threatened with another famine. Baker City will be the first town in Eastern Oregon to have street cars. The $150,000 paper mill at Oregon City is being pushed to completion. Cattlemen at Reno estimate that nearly 100,000 head of beef cattle are now being fed at Reno for the California market. Gladstone thinks that if an election were held to-day in Great Britain the country would return a home rule majority. The flour moth, a terrible pest that has long cursed the milling interest in the Levant has at last effected a lodgment in American, and the milling fraternity in the east are watching its progress with much apprehension. There are over three thousand Japanese reported in San Francisco and vicinity, of whom only two hundred and fifty are under religious influences. There is need for mission work among them. By a vote of 22 to 18, the Presbytery of Cincinnati concluded that "all infants dying in infancy are saved." Bless their dear little hearts, how they must rejoice at this declaration! But let them pause a moment and reflect upon the solemn fact that a change of only three votes would have daunted them forever. Great Britain has become alarmed at the inadequacy of the defenses on the Canadian Pacific coast and proposes to send a military force there which shall be paid and maintained by the dominion government but controlled by the imperial authorities. The dominion refuses, however, to submit to any such arrangement and insists that Canada must control any force which it has to maintain. The Argentine Republic imports 100,000,000 feet of lumber each year. A single lumber and planing establishment employs 500 hands. M. Francis, a former citizen of Portland, Oregon, who has been superintending this large establishment, thinks this coast could drive a profitable trade in lumber with that far-off South American republic. As soon as the Nicaragua canal is completed, the lumber of this coast will find a ready and profitable sale in the treeless land. It will not be many years until trees now growing on the banks of the Rogue river will be made into homes on the banks of the Rio de la Platte. Thus it is seen how deeply interested are the Rogue river people in the construction of the Nicaragua canal. When a mining man finds fault with a newspaper for not mentioning his operations, says the Idaho World, the mining man, in the language of Bill Nye, is to blame for the omission, "ten times out of nine." The newspaper man is not endowed with the supreme power of divination nor a sixth sense by which he can penetrate, at long range, the operations of an individual, when that individual keeps his business to himself. If he makes a trip back east and disposes of mining property, or interests capital in any way in his operations, how is the newspaper man or anyone else, to know it if he keeps his mouth sealed? Generally, too, the man who desires to see, in print, an account of his operations, and that, too, without a revelation from headquarters knows just what the paper contains, and what it does not contain, and his name is not on the subscription list of the paper. A word to the wise, or the unwise, for that matter, is sufficient. The Chamber of Torture is the apartment to which the unhappy sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism is confined. If, ere the crisis of pain is reached, that fine preventive, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is used by persons of a rheumatic tendency, much unnecessary suffering is avoided. Nervine, anodynes and sedatives, while having none but a specific effect, are yet very desirable at times. Yet can they produce no lasting benefit upon rheumatism because they have no power to eliminate from the blood the rheumatic virus. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does this, and checks at the outset a disease which, if allowed to gain a headway, is next to impossible to dislodge or to do more than relieve. Rheumatism, it should be remembered, is a disease with a fatal tendency from its propensity to attack the heart. A prompt, dyspepsia, kidney complaint, malaria and nervousness are relieved by it.

Be Sure. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla be not induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below.

To Get. "In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me that Hood's was long gone; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other."

Hood's. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, suffering from dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." Mrs. ELLA A. GORR, 41 Terrace Street, Boston.
