Who would have thought that 10 cents on every barrel of beer brewed in New York City in one year would aggregate $46,000? There are it seems 4,400,000 barrels of beer sold by the New York brewers every year, or about three barrels for each man, woman and child living in the city.

The custom has prevailed with a certain Episcopal church in a California diocese of presenting each scholar of the Sabbath school with an egg during the exercises at the celebration of Easter. On one occasion of the kind, when that point in the service was reached which had been set apart for this interesting ceremony, the clergyman arose and made this announcement: "Hymn 419, 'Begin, My Soul, the Exalted Lay,' after which the eggs will be distributed."

 Proofreader—"Why, what's up?"
 Editor—"What's up? Why, in this account of the Comcoff's hall, in the description of Miss Tetatote's dress, the copy she gave me read 'trimmed with a jabot of pale areaphane,' and you let it go 'trimmed with a job lot of pale areaphand.' Go on down stairs and commit suicide—I'll write up a good account of your death."

A few weeks ago a peasant at Oroz-Volya, in Hungary, had a terrible encounter with a famished wolf. He, with his daughter, was driving pigs to the neighboring market, when suddenly a wolf jumped out of a roadside thicket and attacked one of the swine. The girl, taking it for a dog, began beating it with a stick. The infuriated animal turned on her, but her father interfered in time, and with a blow of his cudgel drove back the wolf half stunned. It quickly recovered, however, and raising itself up on its hind legs, bit him savagely in the face, the sturdy peasant, though badly hurt and bleeding profusely, seized the brute by the throat and plunged a knife into it. When picked up by the villagers afterwards, complimented on his courage (he is an old man) he was merely observed: "Why, that was child's play for me old hussar."

A Valuable Medical Treatise.
 The edition for 1890 of the sterling Medical Annual, known as Huestetter's Almanac, is now ready, and may be obtained, free of cost, of druggists and general country dealers in all parts of the United States, Mexico, and India, in every civilized portion of the Western Hemisphere. This Almanac has been issued regularly over one fourth of a century. It contains, with the most practical advice for the preservation and restoration of health, a large amount of interesting and amusing light reading, and the choicest astronomical calculations, chronology, and other facts of general interest. The issue of Huestetter's Almanac for 1890 will probably be the largest edition of a medical work ever published in any country. The proprietors, Messrs. Huestetter & Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two-cent stamp will forward a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood.

CARPET WOOL--DECISIVE TESTIMONY.

(Published by request.)

Evidence on one disputed point is accumulating rapidly, and, as usual, the facts when ascertained go against the Free Trader. For years it has been affirmed, and as positively denied, that a large part of the wool imported as carpet wool was in fact used in the manufacture of cloth. Free trade advocates have denied it, in order to be able to say that the duties on carpet wool were of no use whatever, benefited no American wool growers, and could be repealed without hurting any. The Tribune has often submitted evidence to show that wool thus imported was used in cloth manufacture, but has been met with insolent denials in the "You-don't-know anything" tone, and once or twice with an array of figures purporting to prove irrefragably that no imported carpet wool could be so used.

Two witnesses have just testified from opposite sides of the tariff question. Messrs. Justice, Bateman & Co., wool merchants, of Philadelphia, support the protective tariff, while Robert Bleakie & Co., manufacturers, at Hyde Park, Mass., openly declare their desire that clothing as well as carpet wool should be made free. After arguing and occasionally threatening for some months in favor of free wool, "The American Wool Reporter" of September 26, publicly asked Mr. Robert Bleakie as a manufacturer especially competent and trustworthy, to testify "whether any wools imported as third-class or carpet wool are used to displace first or second class wool in the manufacture of cloth for clothing purposes." His reply may have been a surprise, for he says:

"In reply, I will state that I am satisfied that many millions of pounds of third-class or carpet wools are used in making cloth for clothing purposes. Three years ago, the firm of Robert Bleakie & Co., of which I am a member, placed upon the market a line of Scotch cheviot goods made from domestic clothing wool. We were surprised to find goods similar to ours offered and sold by Philadelphia manufacturers at prices less than the cost of our goods at the mill. Upon investigation, we discovered that the Philadelphia goods were made from the fine edge of carpet wool, that is to say, the finer sorts had been taken from the carpet wool, and the beautiful cheviot goods, for making which Scotland is famous, had been degraded by the substitution of cheaper wool to reach a price satisfactory to the buyer of cloth. We were obliged simply to withdraw the goods which we had made from our domestic wool, and follow the example of our more enterprising competitors, some of whom I know to-day are making a business of producing clothing goods, using nothing but carpet wool. Our firm has used of the e carpet wools, during our last run on chevots, about 150,000 pounds equal for cloth making purposes to over 200,000 pounds of Georgia wool, owing to its lighter shrinkage."

This seems to be testimony not easily controverted by cloth orists or free-trade organizers, and the statement that some competitors "now make a business of producing clothing goods, using nothing but carpet wool," deserves their especial attention. Meanwhile Messrs. Justice, Bateman & Co., in their latest circular to customers, remark:
 One not engaged in the sale of low grades of American wools, such as are known as one-quarter blood and common, cannot realize the extent to which carpet wools are being used for clothing purposes, to the exclusion of the low grades of domestic. One-quarter blood wools that brought from 29 to 31 cents in June, are now difficult to sell at 26 to 27 cents. In canvassing the mills with samples of American one-quarter blood wool, the fact is revealed that in almost every direction the better grades of carpet wools are being used for clothing purposes. The descriptions most used are Bagdad

East India, selected portions of Turkey, Syrian and Persian wools. It is the custom abroad to sort out the better grades of these carpet wools, such as are suitable for clothing purposes, ship them to America and enter them at the carpet rate of duty, the poorest portion being left in Europe and resold there. The large use of these wools in clothing causes American one-quarter blood wools to be neglected, and the decrease in the sheep in the United States during the last few years has been almost exclusively in those yielding coarse wool; they are what are known as mutton sheep, and the decrease in these flocks is thus also decreasing the wool supply of the United States.
 This is the testimony of a seller of the raw wool, who finds that the manufacturers do use "in almost every direction" wool imported as carpet wool for the production of cloth. The testimony of two such witnesses, one a seller and the other a manufacturer, both speaking from personal experience and knowledge, is enough to settle the question for catid men. There can still be argument regarding the expediency of protecting American growers of one-quarter blood and common wool, but among people who respect the truth there can hardly be argument in future on the question whether such wool is in part displaced and driven from use by the use of imported third-class or carpet wool in the manufacture of clothes for clothing purposes.
 The words "common wool" tell a story by themselves. It is the "common wool" of this country, which is most affected by these fraudulent importations, and yet the Free Traders insist that no wool is or can be grown in this country which serves the same use as the imported carpet wools. Clearly enough, the wool called "common" is grown to some extent. Since the change of duties in 1883, from 3 and 6 cents to 24 and 5 cents, there has been little inducement to grow such wool in this country. Hence millions of sheep of this class were slaughtered. The question is whether it is not better to grow the wool in this country than to import it fraudulently.
