DEAF DEACON JONES.
He Wakes Up the Prayer-Meeting with a Semi-Humorous Story.

Out in one of the Worcester County hill villages there used to live, and for all the Listener of the Boston Transcript knows lives still, a locally prominent man and a pillar of the church who was very deaf. He was also a very complacent man. One night this man—Deacon Jones we may call him—came into the prayer-meeting and sat about gossiping a little, all on his own account, while he was waiting for the meeting to begin. At last the meeting was opened by one of the brethren, who knelt and began a prayer, but Deacon X did not hear a word.

"Well," said he, presently, breaking with a loud voice into the other's prayer, "I guess we're goin' to have quite a good meetin' after all, spite o' the rain."

The brother went on with his prayer as soon as the interruption was over, but Deacon X was inexorable. After waiting a few moments longer he turned half way round and said: "Well, brethren and sisters, we might as well begin."

The Swiss Boniface.
Considering the shortness of the season hotel keeping in Switzerland is a decidedly remunerative industry. There are as nearly as possible 1,000 of these establishments in the country, making up a matter of 58,000 beds in all, and their total receipts each season are calculated at $8,400,000, of which sum $2,640,000 may, according to the most moderate computation, be set down as clear profit, showing an average of $2,640 for each house.
