HER MAJESTY VICTORIA.

Madame Albert W. Victoria, Empress of the British Empire.
Mrs. Albert in the New York World: A good deal has been said lately in the newspapers concerning Queen Victoria, but as much of it is calculated to give false impressions with regard to the Queen that I am tempted to send you a few notes about her, and, as I have had the honor for a long time past of personally being acquainted with her Majesty, I hope you will believe they are true.

With regard to the Queen's public capacity it is needless for me to speak, as all the world knows how she has fulfilled her numerous and arduous duties, and I shall therefore confine myself to endeavoring to give some idea of her private life, and especially of her in her Scotch highland home, as it is there that I have seen her most and have had the best opportunity of judging.

The Queen rises early in the morning, and after breakfast reads and answers her letters and transacts business. She is fond of the open air, and if the weather be favorable often has her papers taken into a tent or summer-house upon the lawn, which commands an extensive and most lovely view of Loch-nagar, its surrounding mountains and the valley of the Do.

After this comes a walk or a drive in a pony carriage, and then luncheon, at which no one is ever present except members of the royal family.
During the afternoon the Queen takes a long drive, often extending to over thirty miles and always in an open carriage. She rises late, never before 8:30 p.m. An hour spent in the drawing-room talking with the guests who may have been invited finishes the day, and the Queen retires to rest.

The Queen is faithful to her old friends and thoughtful for every body with whom she comes in contact, remembering the smallest details about them, their families, and their occupations, and giving evidence of this at most unexpected moments. A circumstance which happened to me justifies strongly the truth of this. Four years ago I was singing at the Royal Opera at Berlin, and was not even aware that the Queen knew of my engagement there. I soon after my debut, was at a large dinner party at the English Embassy, and sitting next to me was one of the gentlemen of the Crown Princess's household. During dinner he put into my hand a telegram, telling me to read it. This was from the Queen to her daughter (now the Empress Frederick), recommending me to her and desiring her to do all she could for me. Needless to say that after this I was so excited that I could not eat dinner, and I insisted on keeping the telegram, one of my previous souvenirs.

Her Majesty is fond of music, and is a good musician. She studied music with Mendelssohn and singing with Lablache. As a consequence of this teaching she prefers the old Italian music to any other, but at the same time she can appreciate any thing that is good in the modern music. This I know from experience, as I have sung all kinds of music to her, the new and the old. The Queen is much touched by a simple, homely ballad, and after I have sung to her some like "Robin Adair" or "Old Polly at Home" I have seen tears in her eyes.

She has been in retirement for a great many years, and during that time has not been present at a single operatic performance, yet she remembers well the old artists and the manner in which they rendered the various well-known roles. For instance, when I told her that I was studying the "Huguenots," and was going to sing it in America, she said that was one of her favorite operas; that she thought Mario was superb as Raoul, and that although Grisi sang the music splendidly, she never realized the full character of Valentine.

The Queen herself looks after the welfare of all her tenants and servants, and if any one of them is sick she is the first one to pay them a visit and take them little comforts.

During her stay in Scotland she takes a pleasure during her drives in stopping at various cottages to ask after the welfare of the inmates. When so occupied the Queen is as kind and simple as any ordinary lady could be. When she paid me one of her best visits and took tea with me my little boy was so much struck with this that he said to me after she was gone: "O mamma, what a little woman for such a big Queen!" It is all this that has made the Queen so beloved by all her subjects.

I have endeavored in these few jottings to give a slight idea of Queen Victoria and of her life, as I have included in itself too much of it because I can not help it, the above being my personal experience of her Majesty.

HIS FRIEND'S SON.
That's why the Lawyer was Glad to Oblige His Client.
A young man visits the office of an attorney, says the New York Herald, and gives him a claim of $100 to collect.
"Your name?" asks the disciple of Blackstone.
"Elijah Simpson," is the reply.

"Not the son of my old friend Lige Simpson?" Yes? Well, you don't know how glad I am to meet my old friend's son. Give me your hand, and he strings the young man's hand with the utmost effusion, adding: "I hope you will come in and see me often. It will be a treat for me. I assure you, to have an opportunity of conversing with you about your father."

A week later young Elijah calls again. The lawyer rushed forward to greet him, seized both his hands and shakes them, repeating his good wishes over and over, and expressing his great pleasure at having had it in his power to serve Lige's son.
"Then you have the money for me?" suggests Simpson.
"Certainly, certainly. Here it is," and he hands an envelope carefully sealed to the young fellow, who tears it open and finds five hundred dollars.
"Where's the rest?" asks Elijah.
"Oh, my fee is $25," is the reply.
As Simpson edges toward the door he says to his father's friend: "I guess I'm lucky to get $25. I'm awfully glad you didn't know my grandfather!"
