Disorders which Affect the Kidneys

Are among the most formidable known. Diabetes, Bright's disease, gravel and other complaints of the urinary organs are not ordinarily cured in severe cases, but they may be averted by timely precautions. A useful stimulant of the urinary glands has ever been found in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine which not only affords the requisite stimulus when they become inactive, but increases their vigor and secretive power. By increasing the activity of the kidneys and bladder, this medicine has the additional effect of expelling from the blood impurities which it is the peculiar office of those organs to eliminate and pass off. The Bitters is also a purifier and strengthener of the bowels, an invigorant of the stomach, and a matchless remedy for biliousness and fever and ague. It counteracts a tendency to premature decay, and sustains and comforts the aged and infirm.

THE MAN HE WANTED.

How a Bright Young Fellow Won His Employer's Heart.

Old Simmonsly advertised for a secretary, and when a young man presented himself the old fellow looked at him sharply and in a gruff voice asked:

"Well, sir, what can you do?"

"Don't know, exactly—haven't sized myself up in a complete way yet, but I think that I can manage to hold my end up."

"Yes, you think so. Now, sir, I want a man to do my writing, and I want him to be a man of judgment. Do you understand?"

"Yes."

"I don't want any namby-pamby fellow about me. I want a man to catch my ideas at once, and in expressing them to my correspondents to use as few words as possible."

"Think I'm your man, sir.

"I don't want any soliloquy, understand. I want plain words—want a spade to be called a spade."

"All right, sir, and if I don't suit you I don't think there is any body that can."

"What is your name?"

"Spires."

"Very good, Mr. Spires, you may go to work."

When the old man took up the first letter that Spires had written, he looked at it a moment and then uttered an angry exclamation. "Why, what do you mean here? After signing my name you have put the word 'Sweats.' What did you do that for?"

"Why, to carry out your idea of calling a spade a spade; for, instead of saying per Spires, I have simply added Sweats, which, you know, means the same thing, expressed in a simpler way."

"Mr. Spires," said the old man, and his voice trembled, "I shall take you into full co-partnership at once. Mr. Spires, I have a beautiful daughter, sir. Come with me to my home."—Arkansaw Traveler.

McKinley's Gracious Act.

"I yield the gentleman from Pennsylvania fifteen minutes of my time."

It was one of the most dramatic scenes ever enacted in the House of Representatives. The sick, feeble and failing gentleman from Pennsylvania, respected and honored by all men of both parties, Hon. Sam J. Randall, was asking fifteen minutes' extension of his time, in order that he might deliver the concluding portion of his brief speech, which was in favor of the policy of his party. Mr. Mills, of Texas, the leader of his party, darted down the aisle and shouted, "I object," and that seemingly prevented the unanimous consent which was needed by Mr. Randall. The speaker did not turn his head to look at the sufferer, nor appeal for consideration at his hands, but quietly took his seat, humiliated, but unprotesting. The next speaker on the list for the day was Hon. William McKinley, of Ohio. He immediately arose and said in a clear ringing voice: "Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, fifteen minutes of my time." Immediately there broke forth a storm of applause from all over the House, both on the floor and in the galleries. It was one of the most generous deeds of McKinley's life. Mr. Randall proceeded with his speech and finished it, after most eloquently expressing his appreciation of the courtesy of the young gentleman from Ohio.—N. Y. P.
