A Moral Community.

The little island of Heligoland, in the North sea, has a necessarily moral community. Offenders against social decorum are forced to self-banishment, and criminals from without are quickly discovered and punished, because they find no place to hide on this little dot of land. Two burglars from the mainland not long since made a rich collection of treasures by breaking into numerous houses by night. But, to their great chagrin, no boat was found to leave the island before high noon, by which hour their crime had been discovered, the booty returned to its owners, and punishment inflicted on the robbers.

A NOVEL FREIGHT STEAMER.

She Will Float Easily in a Foot of Water When Loaded Down.

A freight boat drawing but eight inches of water!

The craft was built for the Mexican trade and will be used in the shallow waters of the Mexican country, says the New York Continent. It is built of quarter-inch steel plates, is fifty feet in length over all and is three feet in depth.

At the trial held recently she was propelled by two six-inch high pressure horizontal engines, which are placed on brackets attached to the frame of the vessel at the extreme corner, so to speak, of the stern. The engine worked satisfactorily and gave the boat a speed of twelve miles an hour, which was more than was expected, as she was not built for fast traveling.

She is fitted with an Althouse boiler of the most improved fashion. Her bow is semi-circular, while her bottom is flat. The pilot house on the forward part of the deck is 7 feet wide, 10 feet long and 7 feet 4 inches high. The rest of the deck is perfectly clear, with the exception of the small boiler, which occupies a space of only about 2 by 3 feet, which will remain uncovered. The vessel will easily float in a foot of water, as she draws only eight inches.

The craft, instead of having a keel, is furnished with a centerpiece which is made of steel and runs the entire length of the vessel.

The rudders (two in number) are placed in front of the wheel and are eight feet apart.

At present a gang of workmen are employed in taking her engine and boiler apart, and when this is done she will be towed down the East river to the ward steamship Orizaba, when she will be placed on the steamship's deck, complete, and conveyed to Vera Cruz.

HISTORIC BORGO.

A Curious Old Town in Finland That Has a History.

Borgo is an old town about forty miles from Helsingfors, and ranks as the most characteristic of the small towns of Finland. By the side of the old town, with its quaint, irregular houses and its tortuous streets, there are square and unpicturesque quarters, with houses painted with yellow ochre, and resembling one by their shape of cheese boxes. Situated at the mouth of a little river, and prettily set in a frame of hills and ancient fortifications, covered with venerable pine trees, Borgo presents a most curious aspect. The old white cathedral, the strange houses of the old town, painted red, ochre and orange, the sheds and cranches on the shore along the river, with their tumble-down jetties into the water itself, and every object in the interval between these and the old town, whether the fresh green of the trees which make this little town a continuous forest, or the many of the wooden roofs, are those of the Finnish cabin, this little town is the most Finnish-looking place I have visited.
