

THEY GO Why, of course, they go. Why shouldn't they? They are new and with the best of works, fully warranted, and at prices that make them so.

Do You Sleep Soundly

And find it hard to wake up in the morning? That is easily overcome, if you have one of my alarm clocks. They never fail to do their duty. Perhaps your old clock or watch needs repairing. For a little money it can be put in first-class order.

MAN KILLED

By Carelessness of Portland City & Oregon Road.

Fasquale Condante was killed last night on the Madison street bridge by the derailment of a car of the Portland City & Oregon Railway. He was crushed between two cars and died soon after being taken out. Condante was an Italian, residing at 22 Salmon street, and was an employe of the road that killed him. The accident was due to the fault of the road in not seeing that the tracks on the draw were in perfect alignment, and it is a wonder that several people were not killed.

SPRING POETRY.

Journal's Contest is Fairly Booming.

The Journal's poetry contest is a success. Spring poetry, so well written that anybody has but to close their eyes to imagine they can hear the trill of skylarks, the hopeful twitter of the robin or the gentle bleating of spring lambs (without the mint sauce), is rolling in to The Journal. It is evident that the Portland school boys and girls have wandered not in vain through grassy meads and verdant dales; it is clearly to be seen that they have not vainly watched the lowering herds that wind slowly over the hills. Their juvenile minds are filled with beautiful fancies and they know how to express them.

Remember, boys and girls, that here is a chance for you to earn a $5 gold-piece. The only conditions are that each production must be original, must consist of not more than 24 lines, must be signed by the author, and must use "Spring" as the subject. The contest closes April 15. Address all poems in this contest to Spring Poem Editor, The Journal.

THE HOP INDUSTRY.

The hop industry in the Northwest is growing year by year in importance. The number of acres cultivated is not increasing so much, but the farmers are getting more familiar with the product and their lands produce more hops than formerly.

There is quite a controversy among hop men as to whether the farmers who pooled their last year's crop and shipped it to London in charge of a representative received any additional money for their product that would have been offered by the local dealers. Some say that they received quite a large advance over the prices offered by local men, and others insist that the local quotations at the time the pool's product was sold was about 2 cents more than the London figures.

Some hop growers insist that if they had not shipped their product away, that the local market would not have advanced.
