Governor Dockery of Missouri understands the art and value of advertising the "mule" resources of his state. Asked by a news association representative if a British government supply camp existed at Lathrop. Missouri, the Governor evasively replied that he knew nothing of the operations of the British more than that "a market has been operated at Lathrop by private individuals for the past by years; it is the largest horse and mule market in the world, and it supplies the United States government as well as the British government with horses With these remarks the Governor's advertisement of Missouri mules was as complete as it could be. And he ought to be well rewarded for his servives in once more directing the attention of the world to the "sad-eyed songsters" of the corncob section of Uncle Sam's domain.

Increasing to $514,000 the appropriations for improvements in the Columbia river at the dalles at Celilo, as recommended by the committee on commerce, ought to rage the friends of an open river that some time in the dim, mystic future mething may be accomplished in that direction. The end is not yet in sight,

When Chicago read the market quotations on aldermanie votes in St. Louis, as disclosed by the state grand jury, and found them rated at from $100 to $100,-000, the hig Lake City first looked weary, and then wandered back to the rear end of the Hall of Fame, where it is still looking for a seat.

Has Senator Mitchell succumbed to the "influence" of the railroads? He is outing very lustily in behalf of the Nicaragua canal of late. Of a truth, he is not shouting for it at all.

It must be remembered that the Democrat who gets disappointed at today's wention can stand it better than anybody. He is used to that sort of thingbut never grows weary of standing up to be hit again.

Nearly Eight Billions of Life Insurance It is almost impossible to secure the the life insurance business. Even if possible, the figures are so huge that their significance is hardly comprehended. There is none, moreover, with which the medical profession is so intimately asclated, and, to a large extent, responsociated, and, to a large category. bal the figures of 77 companies for the year ending December 31, 1901, are as follows: The assets of these companies unt to $1,912,201,227, and their surplus to $277,089,525. They received in premiums last year $360,181,575, and receipts sources increased that amount to $451,297,512. The companies disbursed on policy holders' account the sum of $187,431,697, and, after providing all expenses, there was laid by for the policy holders' future protection the sum of $154.844,478. In volume of new business written the year 1901 was the greatest in the history of the business, for, after deducting not-taken policies, the total new ordinary issues are found o aggregate $1,378,777,515. ### HINTS FOR WOMEN

GURGEOUS TABLE LINEN. The hostess who would lead today must be a person of ideas, and nowhere are her inspirations more enjoyed and flatteringly copied than in the decreation of her luncheon and dinner table. This has been the experience of the fashionable woman who spreads a great banquet for her guests upon a table covered with superb white linen, damasked in gold. Her ntention was to arrange a suitable back ground for the splendid gold-plated tableware she had recently received as a wedding gift. Her idea was carried out successfully by a noted French linen firm The cloth, when it got over to this side, experienced some difficulty in getting through the custom house, but the lady found it worth the trouble and expense she was put to, for the French looms had wrought wonderfully. The cloth is very large, and on its sating white linen surface glittering wreaths of golden roses are damasked with the owner's initials worked in gold in the center. Bullion fringe edges this royal piece of napery, and when the gold plate is disthereon the effect is gorgeous enough to have pleased the most extravagant of Roman emperors.

MONOGRAMMED CHINA. Much of the handsome china used nowadays is marked with the monogram or crest of the owner. It is a distinctive mark that differentiates the china from all other ware, and the lettering is an ornament in itself. It is usually the more simple china that is ornamented in this way and an attempt is made always to put the lettering upon the side of a plate, as the professional will say, to prevent wear. Old-time china was frequently marked in the center of the plate, and the marking was worn away with knife and fork. In some instances entire sets of china for different courses are marked and always each piece of a dish-the cover, the dish itself, and, if soup tureen, the piece upon which it rests. The letters for the marking are always the initials of the mistress of the house, and are put on in script in preference to the black letters. The lettering is usually in gold, but occasionally one letter will be put in color and the others in gold. The gold may be flat or raised, and upon this will depend largely the cost of the lettering.

EMPIRE DESIGNS AND PATTERNS. Empire patterns in lace are taking the lead, and very pretty some of them are, such as a half oval wreath of laurel leaves, having an inner festoon of flowers, tied with ribbon bows. In the thin Summer frocks it really does not seem as if there were going to be any great change from those of yesteryear. Full flowing trailing skirts, bodices with large falling collars, and draped fuchus will be the most appro ed style for making up the muslins, foulards and printed crepe de chine, while for those who incline toward the Louis XV styles there are the richest brocades interwoven with designs in gold and silver; these will, of course, be worn with soft, rather full with a steady and a golden light that is exceedingly agreeable, and one of the modes of the moment is for one or two, gentlemen, who rise from the table as the ladies leave, to seize candelabra from the table or sideboard, and holding back the portleres, lift the flaming tapers high to light the fair ones on their way to the drawing room. In nearly every house this Winter where an entertainment was given, the hostess, a few moments before her doors were opened to admit the first guests, lighted her perfumed oil lamp. This oil comes from Italy, where sanctuary oil is made for the shrines and cathedrals. Into the liquid enough myrrh is put to shed abroad a mild and delicious perfume when the oil is touched by a flame, and this perfume is successful in eradicating any possible odors of cooking food.

SKIRTS STILL LONG. Despite various forecasts to the contrary, all of the newest costumes for day wear are made with trained skirts, which, after all, are much more graceful and be-coming to most women than shorter ones, and are easily held up. No well dressed woman permits her long skirt to trail over the dirty pavements. The art of holding the train up prettily and comfortably is easily acquired. An untrained skirt made to all but touch the ground all around can not be elevated out of th mud, but is sure to dab with distressing consequences either at the back or at

NEW SILKS ARE LOVELY. After open-meshed wooly fabrics the next dressmaking interest centers about the Spring silks. Foulards, of course, we have always with us, with taffeta roveuse and crepe de chine: Half weight peu de sole has been accorded this year the position as a popular novelty that we gave 12 months ago to louisine. Louisine was worn and found wanting, and those who proved it inadequate are now sure the half weight peau de soie possesses every admirable quality. It is soft, rich, light to carry, but very durable, and it comes in very lovely colors.

TRIMMINGS AND FABRICS. Valenciennes lace insertions are combined with cross pieces of baby ribbon velvet and studded with tiny steel beads to form an effective band trimming. Silk embroidered roses and petals in colors to match the fabric of a gown will be generously employed with other adjuncts. Voiles, canvasses and etamines will continue to be the leading fabric for dressy Spring gowns. In graduated circular flounces it is a favorite skirt design, either plain or fornamental, with applique or braid.

Yesterday for the first time this story was printed and it was announced that Miss Burns would join the company at New Haven next Monday night, postponing for personal reasons her metropolitan debut until a later date.

Mr. Daniels read this announcement at to interview his managers, Kirk La Shelle & Co., on the subject.

Mr. La Shelle is in England at present, but to his representative Mr. Daniels said

"I see you have engaged Miss Florence Burns for the 'Miss Simplicity' company and that she is to open in New Haven on Monday night. I'm afraid that this will give you very little time to rehearse a new star in my role, for, of course, you understand that the moment the young woman joins the company my contrac with you will be broken and I stop playing at once. I can stand a great deal in the pursuit of my calling, but I won't

It can consequently be taken for granted that Miss Burns will not illuminate the New Haven or any other stage in Mr. Daniels' company.

TWO SONGLESS BIRDS.

A canary that refuses to sing, when he hasn't got any other purpose in life except to eat and sleep, is an unreasonable creature. He is as useless as a watch that will not run or a horse that consumes hay at $40 a ton and then balks every time one tries to drive him. When a songless canary won't do business it's bad enough, but when there are two of him it becomes unendurable. Colonel L. L. Hawkins, custodian of the City Museum, had troubles of this kind. Three months ago he procured these breakfast yesterday morning and he at thankless vagrants. He opened up his once proceeded under a full head of steam heart and gave them a soft snap in the way of a home at the City Hall. He used to dream o' nights of the happy days when they would split their little throats with joy; when they should hurl out trills of melody that should cause even the elk at the Thompson fountain to turn his head and listen.

Just a little oratorio, a silvery solo, a duet, now and then, planissimo. But those birds wouldn't do a thing but sit and look pleasant. Life to them was one eternal and golden afternoon. They were having a good time with the dolce far niente-the pleasure of doing nothing. The worthy Colonel became tired. He exchanged them for two others at the City Park and hopes that he may now have a little feathered vocalization once in a CORDRAY'S-"The Denver Express," which received its initial presentation at Cordray's Theater last night, was greeted by a fair-sized audience, The play is really a very good type of melodrama, perhaps much above the average. There is plenty of excitement and a piquancy and dash to the piece that makes it enjoyable. The company is very good, indeed. If any criticism is made at all, it should be on the part of Tommy Tucker, a rallroader, presented by Ralph Ravencroft. He rather overplayed the part. If he tones down a little he will be as acceptable as the rest of the company,

Shoe Trade Increasing.

The career of the wholesale shoe house, Messrs. Krausse & Prince, 87 and 89 First street, is a good sample of the prosperity of Portland and its tributary commercial region. This firm moved its headquarters to this city about two years ago, and since its advent here has been pushing a vigorous selling campaign. The firm yesterday said that during the last year its business had actually doubled, and that the increase in trade is constantly going on. Krausse & Prince are large wholesale dealers. They import from the manufacturers and job to the trade. Being a substantial concern with ample capital, they contract for goods in large quantities, and the retailers are benefited both as regards prices and convenience in getting goods. The retaflers in towns tributary to Portland can get their goods right here in this city instead of being subjected to long waits for goods to arrive from the East. It is interesting also to see the completeness and artistic cnaracter of the literature illustrating boots and shoes sent to Krausse & Prince by the various manufacturers of America. and it is a distinct advantage for the retallers to be able to make their selections for stock near at hand here in Portland, where everything necessary is collected for them.

Her Funny Story.

"I want to tell you such a funny thing," she said. "When I heard it I laughed till I nearly died. You know the Fergusons have a new coachman. Well, day before yesterday Nell and her mother wanted to make some calls, so they told the coachman to get the coupe ready, and they made eight calls from 1 o'clock until 5."

HIDDEN LOVE TOKENS.

A lady, having expressed a great liking for peaches, was pleased to receive a box containing a dozen choice specimens from a gentleman who had listened to her conversation. Two of these the lady ate, but the third proved slightly bruised, crushing between her fingers into pulp, and revealing in place of the peach-stone a brilliant emerald ring of rare beauty. Wishing to give his sweetheart a pleasant surprise, a young officer inclosed a necklet of small but valuable pearls within a large beanpod, the edges of which were afterward sealed and the tip gilded.
