Rank badges are practically unchanged, but some of the corps insignia have been altered. That of the medical corps is changed from the Geneva cross to the "Caduceus," the winged wand of Mercury entwined by two serpents.

Officers caps are to be materially changed. They will be larger at the top than at the bottom, and will hence resemble the caps now worn by the British and German officers. For full dress they are to be heavily ornamented with gold lace. The visor is to be embroidered with gold oak leaves.

The orders go on at great length to describe the new service uniform, which is officially described as to be of "olive drab woolen or cotton material," and it is to be noted that all officers are to wear russett leather leggings of the "strap puttee" pattern.

An absolute innovation is made in the adoption of a special uniform for evening wear. This is to be cut on the pat-Wooden Piles in Trestles Must Go tern of civilian evening dress. This proved a most trying experience to some of them, and they have not yet fully recovered from the effects of it. They say they traveled for 40 miles through some of the finest timber ever produced in the Northwest. One tree measured 46 feet in circumference, and it is estimated that one quarter section there will yield from 6,-000,000 to 8,000,000 feet of lumber. It is also figured that three of the largest trees, if worked up into lumber, would be sufficient to load an ordinary barge. The trees are described as being straight at an arrow, and the lower limbs are from 50 to 100 feet from the ground. One

There are now 120 patients at the farm, averaging in age from the inmates work around the place more than enough to pay for their keeping. while others, of course, are unfortunate county charges. Many old timers that we knew around town even four to ten years ago, are now comfortably enscanced at the farm; for example, Judge Ralph Dement, who, a few years ago, tossed dollars around the barrooms as if they were peanuts. The judge is in the bakery department, and apparently happy as when he was the law partner of Oregon's senior Senator, flush with the bloom of youth upon his cheek. At the farm Superintendent Hanson
