(Journal Special Service.)
PENDLETON, Aug. 12.—A shooting scrape occurred at John Anderson's ranch about nine miles north of this place Monday morning over a question of wages. John Anderson, rancher, took four shots at Matt Kasori, laborer. It appears that while Kasori was hitching up a team in front of the house Anderson and he got to quarreling. Anderson attempted to assault Kasori, who is a very large man and the latter caught and held him. He finally released his hold with the understanding that the trouble was settled. According to Kasori's statement, who has sworn out a warrant for arrest of Rancher Anderson, the latter appeared in a few minutes on his verandah and took four shots at Kasori from a revolver, missing every shot. Anderson has been arrested.

A physician was quickly summoned and the wound dressed.

LAWTON, Aug. 12.—Last Tuesday George Kelly drove his team on the rounds and had a smash-up on the grade above Alamo, with no serious damage.

Thursday Mr. Stewart, Sr., had a rather serious time on Ruby Creek, in which his physiognomy was disfigured in a rather serious manner, and after which one of the horses was condemned and left at Alamo. Next day he concluded to bring the refractory beast to Lawton and tied it with a long leading rope behind his wagon. When opposite the Red Boy the animal ran alongside the vehicle, and, wishing to get rid of a little superfluous energy, it is supposed, began kicking, and before reinforcements arrived totally demolished one of the rear wheels. Mr. Stewart promptly cut the leading rope and turned the horse loose declaring he would never attempt to drive it again.

Waterbury, who has a band of sheep in his charge on Upper Long Creek, had his camp demolished a few days before by unknown parties. Report has it that a couple of gentlemen came to his camp during his absence helped themselves to what they wanted and then moved on, leaving a note to the owner to have certain things in readiness for them on the following day or suffer the consequences, signing it "Merrill and Tracy." Lawrence thought it was a joke and paid no attention to the demands.

Definition of News.

The Buffalo Commercial says that Charles A. Dana once defined news in this way: "If you see a dog biting a man, don't write it up. But if you see a man biting a dog spare no pains or money to get the details to the Sun office." This is a poor paraphrase of a good story. When "Doc" Woods was night editor of the Sun a young reporter asked him: "What constitutes news?" Mr. Wood considered for a moment and then replied: "Here's an illustration which will probably give you a correct idea of what I think on that subject: If you should see a dog running down Broadway with a tin can tied to his tail, it isn't worth a line. But if you should see a dog with a tin can tied to his tail, walking down Broadway, it's worth a column."

An Incident of the Confederate Reunion at Dallas, Tex.

"Right after the reunion of confederate veterans at Dallas, Tex., I witnessed a rather comical, and yet a rather pathetic thing on one of the trains which pulled out of the city on the day after the celebration had closed," said a visitor from Texas in the New Orleans Time-Democrat. "All the coaches were jammed to the windows. Men and women were even packed into the aisles, and there was of course a heavy sprinkling of the old fellows in gray uniform. When night came on the veterans began to make themselves as comfortable as possible, many of them pulling off their coats and shoes. It was some time after midnight when a gray bearded and stooped man roused from his sleep and began to look around for his shoes. He did not have on the uniform of the confederacy, and had not been to the Dallas reunion.

"Up and down the coach he went in his sock feet, looking for his shoes, but it was to no purpose. He was about to despair, when a young gentleman, who occupied a seat near him, remarked that he had seen an old gentleman take a pair of shoes from about that place in the aisle, and suggested that he had probably gotten hold of the wrong shoes. He said further he thought he could identify the man. Forthwith they went in search of the man who was supposed to have gotten the shoes.

"They found him. He was a grizzled old confederate, and he, too, had been playing in bad luck so far as his shoes were concerned. 'Partner,' said the old man who was not uniformed, 'you've got my shoes who's yo' born,' and sure enough, on closer examination, the old confederate soldier found that he had made a mistake, and he proceeded to unshoe his feet. He handed the old fellow his shoes, and began to pace up and down the coaches again, in his old, white, home-made yarn socks, looking for his shoes.

"The man who had recovered his shoes became reflective. 'These coaches, air all filled plum up with rebels,' he said, 'an' most of 'em have their shoes off, an' it looks awful funny to me that my shoes should be picked out when they ain't as fine as some of the other shoes. Of course it's just a mistake, a kinder curious caper of fate. I guess, that an old rebel should look over the shoes of his comrades, an' jest by accident take a pair that belongs to a feller on the other side.'

"And the old fellow, who was on the way to the G. A. R. encampment, lapsed into silence. A little later, when he saw the old confederate soldier, still in his sock feet, hobbling across the platform at the station where he had to change cars, he straightened up, his eyes moistened and glistened, and he said, with infinite pathos: 'I guess I ain't as good a soldier as I used to be, for in the sixties I guess I'd seen my right arm cut off plum up to the shoulder before I'd made that old fellow give up them shoes if they was mine.'
