GEER ON OREGON FRUIT.

Hon. Judd Geer, Commissioner of Horticulture for the Eastern Oregon district, is enthusiastic in his praise of fruit conditions in his district, and in fact, throughout the state. To a Journal representative he said, "When seen at the Imperial today: "Since Oregon has been engaged in surprising the world with her fruit crops, there have never been such satisfactory conditions as there are today. Throughout Oregon, so far as I have investigated, crops are first class in quantity and quality. Winter apples are superb. It is almost unreasonable to tell of the amounts that will be gathered this fall from the various orchards in my district. One needs to be sworn when telling strangers the naked facts about Oregon fruit. I am afraid many people not acquainted with the truth will think I am boasting town lots or timber claims when I unobscure to them the cold facts gathered from my observations." "How about the various pests which have infested our orchards of late years?" was asked Mr. Geer. "I am glad to say that orchardists are taking every advantage of the discoveries and experiments of our Board and are literally exterminating every fruit pest known in our orchards. In very few localities the codlin moth is still found, but in the fruit belts the orchards are almost free from it. It only requires a small degree of carefulness on the part of fruit growers to get rid of these pests. It is not an abstract scientific question. It is just plain painstaking system, care and labor. As the fruit shipping interests advance in Oregon, and men become more settled and methodical in their manner of growing, cultivating and marketing fruit, these pests will all disappear."

"Where is the greatest increase in orchard acreage in the state, Mr. Geer?" "In Grande Ronde Valley. Within the past three years the orchard acreage of that locality has more than doubled. Many farms, upon which immense wheat crops have been grown for years, have been divided up and planted to winter apples. The facilities for handling and marketing fruit has greatly improved and a greater increase in acreage will take place in the near future. It is one of the fixtures along with wheat and sugar beet growing and is contributing its share to the prosperity of the state. The new settlers in Eastern Oregon are turning their attention to this industry and many of our little valleys are veritable orchards."

When asked in regard to markets for the vastly increased fruit production of the state, Mr. Geer replied: "We are sending winter apples right into the greatest fruit producing sections in the United States. Every day we see car load after car load going into New York, St. Louis, Kansas City and other great markets of the East. The demand for good fruit will never diminish. The Northwest which supports a large population and produces no fruit that we have no fears of an overproduction." Speaking of the Hood River Fruit Fair, Mr. Geer said it was a very difficult matter to award prizes to any one exhibitor in the bewildering displays of that event."

RHODES' MONUMENT. Cecil Rhodes' mausoleum, the plaster model for which has just been completed by John Tweed, in London, will be of black granite at a cost of $100,000. It is rectangular in shape, much simpler in design than the Grant monument in Riverside Park, New York, and will be entered by four massive doors of copper, one on each side of the four sides.

THE JOURNAL MONK. The Monk has just been holding a conversation with the President concerning Secretary Shaw's idea of evading the tariff laws and getting coal in free duty, and also as to Secretary Moody's statement that the tariff on anthracite was "sneaked in in a cowardly manner." The President freely confessed his mistake concerning it being on the free list, but said he, "You know I had to pay some attention to geography in selecting my cabinet, and I have not what I would like, but what circumstances, political pull, and desire for re-nomination has forced on me. Unfortunately, some of them are dumb, but not speechless, and I have troubles enough of my own to make the strenuousness of cow-boy life seem like a flower fiesta in Los Angeles. Come on and console me and have a smoke."

SMITH AT THE BAT.

Ex-State Senator Wm. Smith, of Baker City, is at the Imperial this week and to a Journal representative, grew reminiscences. "The baseball game today," said the gentleman, "reminds me of pioneer days in Eastern Oregon. Before I ran for Congress several years ago, I was an expert with the bat. I have split many a Grande Ronde Valley zepher at one masterly stroke, in search of the ball which was wandering about the mazes of a new curve. One game at La Grande I particularly remember. We had a good 'team' in the Cove and as teacher in the schools there I had prided myself upon drilling the boys into good ball players. We had beaten La Grande, one game at Elton and were going to La Grande to play them the 'rub.' The boys had done so well that I felt confident of beating the professionals on their own grounds. I took very much interest in the game and looked forward with enthusiasm to this 'event of the season.' On the evening before the day of the game I received a message from J. W. Shelton, the pioneer attorney of Union, stating that he had a very important law suit in Cove the next day and that he wanted to engage me without fail, to assist him in conducting the case. Incidentally he mentioned that there would be a $10 bill in it for me. As there were several spots about me that were not plastered over with ten-dollar bills in those days, I accepted his offer. The ball game stood 29 to 0000 in favor of La Grande, even now, we won the lawsuit. At times, even now, the baseball fever breaks out upon me and while it is not serious it causes the loss of some lung power which might be utilized in praying for my enemies."

"What do you think of the political situation as viewed from present indications?" "I think," replied Mr. Smith, "that it is the most opportune time in the history of the party, for Democrats to sit still and hold their peace for about two years. Let matters take their natural course. The tariff revisionists among the Republicans are fighting the Democratic fight. Let them do the work we have been trying to do for 20 years. The result will be almost as satisfactory and they will pay the bill. Just sit still and think."

Asked in regard to local affairs in Baker City, he said the improvements had come so rapidly in the past two years that a busy man had to hire an extra assistant to help find out just where they were "at."

PLAN TO SECEDE

Many East Portlanders Are Kicking.

STEPS FOR ACTION

May Ask Legislature to Create Separate City—Say Taxes Are Too High.

Trouble is brewing on the East Side. This statement is not remarkable in itself because there has been more or less trouble in that district since it was created.

But this time East Siders have a kick—and they are not unwilling to embrace the opportunity. They claim that they are not properly treated by the city officials.

CLAIM SMALL BENEFITS. The trouble dates back to the day of the consolidation of the former cities of East Portland and Albina with the City of Portland. Under the old regime, East Siders say that they were prosperous, while today prosperity is not so evident.

Efforts are being made throughout the Eastern section of the city to form a secret organization having for its sole purpose the seceding of the territory from within the jurisdiction of the consolidated city.

In a word, East Side residents contemplate forming a separate city by themselves, free to improve its own streets; have its own city government and likewise make its own laws.

Just whether the proposed organization will become strong enough to get the desired action is a question.

The new city directory now gives the East Side a majority of the population of the City of Portland.

GROWTH OF EAST SIDE. At the time of consolidation, East Portland had a population of slightly over 10,000, while the City of Albina numbered within her borders a fraction over 5000 people. Portland at that time claimed a population of about 6,000 souls. Now everything is changed—the East Side now houses the majority.

WILL ASK LEGISLATURE. Should the secret organization now forming have within its membership a majority of the voters, "Then," said one of the organizers, "we will present a petition to the Legislature to leave us out of the city and also to create the new town."

A prominent East Side business man in talking on the subject said: "Just whether it would be the proper course for the East Side to secede from the City of Portland, I am hardly in a position to say. Of course I recognize the fact that our section committed business suicide when we voted in favor of annexation."

"In the old days of the City of East Portland we had in the first place a model city government. Our streets were in a very passable condition and our water supply could not be excelled."

HAD BUSINESS HOUSES. "In the good old days we had large business houses. Merchants were making money and improvements were being made everywhere."

"Since that time we have been without proper police protection—then we had one of the finest departments for our size on the Coast."

"In the last 10 years we have not gained a particle in fire protection. Every old resident of our section will tell you that East Portland's fire department in those days was up to date. Here we are paying large taxes, but deriving no additional benefits."

"What has been the result of consolidation? Our elevated roadways are about to tumble down, poor police service, the loss of the city's prestige as a business center, and inadequate fire protection."

FREE BRIDGES A FARCE. "Portland has always claimed that by taking East Portland and Albina into the corporation," said another prominent man, "that the city was bankrupted on account of buying ferries and bridges. That is about all that East Portland ever received for her exchange. If the bridges had not been free the majority of the business section would be on the East Side."

BROTHERS AGAINST BROTHERS Frank and Richard Lese, of the firm of Lese Bros., have commenced a suit asking the Court to issue an order restraining the First National Bank, from honoring the checks of Emil Lese, another brother, who is a member of the firm. The brothers allege that Emil is dissipating and drawing the firm's money from the bank for his individual use, and that if he is allowed to continue they fear the credit of the firm will be impaired.

Plans Adopted.

The plans of the shaft, base and foundation of the proposed monument for the Veterans of the Civil War, Indian and Spanish-American Wars, as prepared by D. D. Neer, were adopted at a meeting of the Lone Fir Monument Association yesterday afternoon. It was decided that the foundation would be constructed of concrete, and would be 11 feet 4 inches square. It will be laid at a depth of four feet. It has not yet been decided as to the character of the statue for the monument. The next meeting of the association will be held at 24 Grand avenue next Sunday afternoon.

MANAGERS' ANNOUNCEMENTS.

"The Liberty Belles." Frank Hennessy's company will present Harry B. Smith's new musical comedy, "The Liberty Belles," at the Marquam Grand Theatre tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday nights. The story concerns the adventures of two school girls—Margery Lee (Nevada Heffron) and Dorothy Grey (Gertrude Wellington). The first act seems to be a girl school at night, and the girls get together for a midnight supper, taking advantage of the absence of the teacher. Miss Nevada Heffron has a congenial role—that of a stage struck girl, and Harry Lyons, as the eccentric inventor, will have opportunities to naturally introducing his remarkable specialty. As Jack Everleigh, the popular light comedian Harry Stuart has one of the best roles that he has ever played. Frank Hennessy has engaged a company of 20 exceptionally attractive young women to take the place of the conventional chorus. Each one plays a distinct character and, in fact, "The Liberty Belles" may be said to be a musical comedy without chorus. In putting together the musical score of "The Liberty Belles" Frank Hennessy has departed from the stereotyped custom and instead of having all or nearly all the songs composed by one man he has thought a greater variety of styles might be secured by calling on different musical geniuses.

"King Dodo."

The brilliant "King Dodo" will be at the Marquam Thursday and Friday nights and Saturday matinee. The advance sale of seats will open tomorrow, Tuesday, morning. "King Dodo" is thought to be one of the best attractions that the Marquam will have on the boards for many a week. It will draw record-breaking houses.

If You Can Spare the Time.
