Edward and His Queen Participate in the Postponed Functions Today.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—A man standing beside St. George's Church along the route of the royal progress was arrested by the police this morning, because it was believed he was an anarchist. A package containing a considerable quantity of powder was found near him. After being taken to the station house it was learned that the man was George Martin, an unemployed clergyman of the Church of England. He objected to the erection of one of the grand stands on consecrated ground and intended to blow it up with gunpowder. He denied most emphatically having any designs against the King or Queen. He has been remanded for trial. It is believed the arrested minister is named.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The royal progress through the streets of London, which have been one of the great spectacular features of Coronation week, but which was abandoned for the time being, because of King Edward's illness, took place today and proved to be the most brilliant street pageant Londoners have seen since the Diamond Jubilee. It was scarcely 48 hours ago that the people awakened to a realization of the fact that the affair was to be a state procession in all its grandeur and not a mere drive of the royal family through the metropolis. Public buildings and business houses began to blossom out in holiday attire, grand stands were hastily erected at points of vantage and in many instances the original plans for the Coronation pageant were fully carried out. The decorations have been exceeded before on several occasions.

STARTED BY CANNON.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the booming of cannon from an artillery detachment stationed in St. James' Park, immediately in the rear of Buckingham Palace, announced to the assembled thousands that their Majesties had entered their carriage and that the royal procession was prepared to move. The state carriage in which their Majesties rode, and which was a veritable dream in artistic gold and blue enamelling, was drawn by eight cream-colored horses, with outriders in uniforms of scarlet and gold. Trumpeters in magnificent uniforms and mounted upon black chargers cleared the way for the procession. Behind the trumpeters galloped a squad of the Household Cavalry. Then came eight carriages containing members of the royal family. Included among the members were Princess Beatrice, the Duke and Duchess of Argyll, the Duke of Connaught, Princess Victoria, Prince and Princess Christian, the Duchess of Albany and the venerable Duke of Cambridge. Immediately preceding their Majesties were the Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince and Princess Charles of Denmark.

THE ROUTE.

The route from Buckingham Palace to Guildhall was through the Mall, Marlborough yard, Pall Mall, Trafalgar square, Duchesne street, the Strand, Temple Bar, Fleet street, St. Paul's Churchyard, Cheap side and King street. The entire route was lined with troops, reinforced by the Metropolitan Police and at the important street intersections there were military bands which played the national anthem as the procession went past. Back of the troops were the spectators, a veritable sea of faces, men, women and children, enthusiastically almost to wildness, and uncomplainingly standing on tiptoe to see over the bearskin hats of the foot guards, who lined the curbs on one side of the street.

Not until royalty appeared was there any demonstration and the audience, because of the cold gloom of the day, was not as large as was expected.

VERY MARTIAL.

As a military pageant the procession was well worth seeing. Every branch of the two services was represented and seldom have the people had an opportunity of witnessing such a large and representative turnout of the military forces. In addition to the detachments of soldiers here were a number of squads of sailors and marines from the Terrible and other battleships and all along the route the ranks were greeted with the wildest applause.

Arriving at Guildhall their Majesties were received by Lord Mayor Dimsdale and the Aldermen. The royal party entered through the Gresham street entrance and after a formal address by the Lord Mayor the party passed into the great hall. The arrival was witnessed by a crowd of several hundred notables occupying seats in a pavilion especially erected for the occasion in the Guildhall yard. Several of the spacious rooms in the ancient edifice were fitted up as receiving rooms for the King and Queen and their respective suites. The municipal dinner was carried out in full accordance with the plans which were originally carried to a forward stage when the coronations festivities were postponed. Their Majesties and the other members of the royal family occupied seats at a table on a dais at the northern end of the great banqueting hall. The company present numbered between seven and eight hundred and included besides the officials of the city of London, the heads

Action Will Be Commenced Against Delinquent Stockholders.

An important meeting of the ways and means committee of the Lewis and Clark Fair Corporation was held late yesterday afternoon at which the question of a special session of the Legislature for the purpose of appropriating $50,000 for the fair was discussed. E. B. Miller was present and gave some valuable suggestions that should be obtained for the fair. It was decided that the next assessment on the stockholders would be levied on January 1, 1903. Those present were President H. W. Corbett, W. J. Simon, Leo Friede, J. F. O'Shea, Adolphe Wolfe, A. H. Devers, P. L. Willis, Paul Weasinger, C. E. Ladd, Samuel Connell and W. D. Wheelwright.

SURELY WILD WEST

Buffalo Bill Was Up Against the Real Thing at Houston, Texas.

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 25.—There was something doing not on the bills at the presentation of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show here last night. Three real cowboys "shot up" the show. They galloped through the arena at a moment when they were least expected and threw everything into confusion. The audience, believing it to be a part of the show, cheered them on, and a bloody mix-up followed.

Fully 50 horsemen and a bunch of the painted Indians of the performance set about the capture of the disturbers and for several minutes there was a lively scrimmage. The men were well mounted and it took some time to bring them to terms. They fought to the bitter end and when they were finally overcome, one was fatally wounded and another had his head cut open.

They were lassoed and dragged from their horses. It was the most realistic plainsman show ever presented by the company.

Barrett Boosts Portland Fair in the Orient.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 23.—(Correspondence.)—Commissioner Barrett, here in the interests of the St. Louis Louisiana Purchase Exposition, is making known to proposed exhibitors at that fair that there will be another exposition at Portland, Ore., a year later, thus affording special inducements to those who have shipments or who intend visiting the United States for fair purposes. The Portland Fair will be on the direct return route to the Orient, and exhibits placed at the St. Louis exposition can be re-shown at Portland without additional cost to the owners. Mr. Barrett is a resident of Portland and is advising that exhibits be sent from Japan, China, Korea, Siam and the Philippine Islands. Facilities for transportation of these to America are better now than they have ever been before.

REMARKABLE PROMPTNESS.

During the past month every one of the 168 death claims paid in the United States and Canada by the Equitable Life Assurance Society were paid within one day after the receipt of proof. And during no month of the year has the percentage been below 93 per cent. This exceeds the Society's own great record. It has never even been approached by any other company.

NO APPROPRIATION—NO FAIR

The question of an extra session was brought up and discussed and it was decided that it be left to the taxpayers' League. In this connection President Corbett remarked that if the Legislature will not appropriate $50,000 for the fair, there was no use to go ahead, as the Corporation could not very well ask the other states to make appropriations for exhibits if Oregon does not give anything or not enough. This statement was met with approval by the other directors.

WILSON INSTALLED

Old Princeton Has a New President Today.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 25.—In Alexander Hall this morning, with simple ceremonies, but before a great and enthusiastic company, Dr. Woodrow Wilson was formally installed as president of Princeton University. The event was chiefly notable for the general feeling of satisfaction with the man who is to guide the destinies of the great institution of learning. The hall was filled to overflowing with students, professors, alumni and distinguished visitors, all attired in academic garb. The principal addresses were those of the new president, the former president of the University, Dr. Patton, and Grover Cleveland, ex-President of the United States. Following the installation, brief congratulatory addresses were made by representatives of Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania, the University of Michigan, the University of California, Cornell and other leading colleges and universities of the country.

WILKESBARRE OUTPUT.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 25.—Nearly 100,000 tons of coal was mined yesterday in this section and the output of today will greatly exceed that figure. The feeling between the operators and the workmen is getting more cordial and the former seem to be doing everything they can to make the situation easy. Not yet nearly all of the total force which will be at work in the mines when in full operation has been employed, but the corps of workmen is being increased hourly and within a few days, as soon as the mines can be put in condition, there will be work for all. In some of the shafts an immense amount of water had gathered and although pumps have been working night and day it is being diminished out slowly. Some say they have been pumped dry there can be nothing done in the way of gathering coal.

SON OF A MINISTER

Woodrow Wilson, the new president of Princeton, was born at Stanton, Va., in 1856, his father being a minister of the Southern Presbyterian Church. He began his academic studies at Davidson College and later graduated with honors from Princeton and John Hopkins Universities. Since 1890 he has been an instructor at Princeton. He is regarded as one of the highest authorities on jurisprudence and political economy.

ALL OLD MEN.

SCRANTON, Oct. 25.—Out of 30 plants in operation here there is not believed to be a single "outsider" at work almost the entire force being union members. Imported men are leaving the district in large numbers.

STILL HOLD OUT.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 25.—Not much more than one-half of the union men here are working and only a few of the men who came to take the places of strikers will be released. There is considerable dissatisfaction.

WARSHIP TIED UP.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The cruiser Olympia is delayed in port because of lack of coal. This prevents the sailing of the fleet which was to prepare anchorage for the big squadron which is to take part in the winter maneuvers.

I. HAM. LEWIS TURNED DOWN

Former Washington Politician Defeated in a Close Race for Congressional Nomination—Darden Resigned.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—J. Hamilton Lewis, formerly of Seattle but now a resident of this city, was today defeated in a close contest for Democratic candidate for Congress from the Ninth district. Lockwood Honore, a brother of Mrs. Potter-Palmer, was the successful rival of Lewis for political honors.

The selection of a candidate was rendered necessary today by the resignation of James Darden last night. The resignation was caused by reports sent out from Portland, Or., where it is claimed he was once indicted for embezzlement.

DARDEN'S RECORD.

Darden came to Portland about six years ago. He married a wealthy girl, whom he deserted in a short time. In 1895 he was arrested for forgery and embezzlement, on complaint of his business partner, D. C. Krocher. Darden's mother-in-law put up the money and settled his trouble.

Darden as a young man, whose tendencies were of the speedy character. He dressed well and had a way of making friends on short acquaintance. He was a swell dresser and spent money freely.
