Fell in With the Strong Arm Fraternity.

Experience of an Innocent Abroad in the City "Bad Lands."

Drugged, robbed and brutally beaten, is the strenuous experience of Duncan McFarlane, who claims to be a banker and mercantile magnate of North Yakima, Wash. He arrived in Portland on Tuesday, and during his brief stay has become more familiar with slum life than would be possible to learn during a irrigation week. lifetime in the moral atmosphere of the irrigated desert. McFarlane came to Portland to give his nerves a rest from business worries. The first thing on the program here was to secure a nice, quiet room in a Yamhill street iodging house. After washing the Pasco sands from his ears, he threw off the yoke of dignity that bound him to strict rectitude in his native town, and like a sailor after a long voyage started for the "Bad Lands" to get a glimpse of life on the other side of the divide of respectability.

FELL AMONG PHILISTINES. McFariane, on his "rubber-necking" expedition, for a time successfully side-stepped the pitfalls of the under world, but ultimately was swept from the path of strict goodness by the strong currents of pleasure. His path to numiliation was via the hop-julce route. During the afternoon and evening he made a thorough test of the different brewery products of Oregon. When the saloon curfew tolled at 1 o'clock a. m., and the liquor dealers fell over themselves in the hurry to get the places closed, before the ord! nance was violated, McFarlane found himself a stranger, alone and thirsty in the North End streets. The only thing in sight was a sausage wagon. He steered an erratic course for this haven, where there was an opportunity to find belated but congenial companionship. He fell in with three men, who were eating sandwiches. The new-found friends knew of dozens of places where drinks could se secured, and as that was what Mc-Farlane desired, they piloted him about from place to place.

WAS ROBBED AND BEATEN. The only thing the North Yakima man robbed him of his watch, cuff and collar buttons, and some money. After he had been shorn of his valuables, the men attacked and britally best him. From this time until the next morning, when he woke up in a strange house in the residence portion of the city, his recol-lection is a blank. The only reminder he had of his night of slumming was a pair of black eyes, empty pockets and a deep feeling of disgust, STRANGE DEVELOPMENTS. Early on Wednesday morning, Policeman Hogeboom was approached on his beat in the North End by a man who stated he had been help up and robbed, and pointed out to the officer two men in the Merchants' Hotel as being the highwaymen. They were taken to the station and searched, and the things claimed to have been stolen found on their persons, as were also a watch and jewelry that could not be accounted for. Later in the same day McFarlane reported his experience to the police, when ft developed that the things found on the men brought in that morning belonged to him. He was shown the men and positively identified them as the ones that he had been with the evening before, and who had beaten and robbed him.

MEN ARE BOUND OVER At a preliminary hearing before Judge

Hogue yesterday afternoon, the two suspects, A. J. McAvoy and D. W. May, were bound over to the grand jury on a bail of $1,000 each. McFarlane was positive that they were the men whom he had been with, and the fact of the goods stolen being found on their persons, constituted sufficient evidence to bind them over to the higher court on the charge of larceny. They will have to answer to the charge of having robbed the second man. McAvoy claims to be a rall-road man, and has papers in his possession to show that he has recently been employed as a Northern Pacific brakeman at Tacoma. He says his father is a prominent official on one of the Eastern roads. McAvoy is a young man of good appearance and neatly dressed.

HOUSE WORKERS OPERATING

A gang of petty room workers of onerating in the city. Of late reports of annoying robberles have been numerous. Telephone boxes seem to be the sources of revenue against which the robbers directed their energy. Last night the box on the fourth floor of the Goodnough building was broken into and the nickels The fifth floor was also visited and a number of trunks in the hallway broken into and robbed.

A MIX UP ON THIRD STREET

Boy, wheel, horse and wagon were mixed up in a heap yesterday afternoon Third street, near Alder. It seems that when the driver of a wagon belonging to the Vienna Bakery started to get in the vehicle the horse started of his own accord and found the front wheel of Clyde Greenwood's bleycle as the best stopping place. The result is that the wheel was lamaged and Greenwood's ankle sprained.

New Charter Should Be Rushed.

In speaking this morning about the agitation which has been started for the improvement of the bridges of the city, G. Y. Harry said:

"I believe the most feasible plan would be to make an assessment, or impose a specime tax of one or two mills, upon city property to meet the expenses which would be incurred in making the necessary repairs. They need to be only temporary, and within two or three years things will be in such shape as to do work of a more permanent character. Those who would have to stand the bur den of such taxation should be reimbursed, and I suggest that a bill be introduced in the Legislature for that purpose. A bill of that nature would have the hearty support of the Multnomah delegation, and as it would concern Portland only, there would be no doubt about its passage, proper representative people should get together and devise plans for immediate action. The improvement of public streets or bridges is necessarily a slow movement. Each bridge, by reason of the physical conditions, will require separate treatment of action. In some cases a prominent fill of a roadway will be feasible. In others the only permanent improvement would be steel con-With the great number of bridges, and the various physical conditions governing each, it would necessarily require considerable time to effect right plans for their improvement.

"We all know how slow a process it would be if we could wait for a new harter. The Legislature must first act, the machinery then created for the government under the new charter, separate improvement districts created in accordance with the charter, plans and estimates made of the cost of the improvements necessary, bonds issued to cover the expense of each improvement district which must then be sold and contracts let after the contract is let it would be impossible to limit the time of completion under one year, but with the present condition of the steel market in the East no contractor would feel safe in undertaking to finish with structural iron within ever one year's time. SHOULD ACT NOW.

"What should be made plain and emphatic to the people is that action is needed, not next week, or tomorrow, but Temporary repairs, sufficient to last until such time as permament improvements may be made under the new charter is what is wanted."

MYSTERY SOLVED.

GAMBLING CRAZE WAS HIS MANIA

OREGON CITY Nov. 7 -Sheriff Shaver left on the Albany local last evening for Salem, having in charge A. A. Watts and J. M. Kiler, two men who must serve terms in the state prison for passing forged checks. Watts was given only 18 months after he had made his plea. In this man's life a splendid object lesson is given. He comes from a prominent English family who gave him every luxury and as good an education as could be had anywhere. The prospects of no man were ever brighter, until he commenced gambling. He saw that he could not shake the vice off and was finally put into an insane asylum by his people in the hope that this terrible gambling mania would leave It did no good, how-ever, and he was turned loose to be a ever, and he was turned loose to be a wanderer. When he came to America his finished education secured good newspaper HEATON CASE positions for him, but he lost these jobs as soon as he could gather enough money to gamble and drink with. He claims to be a lawyer, which can hardly be doubted, as his plea yesterday was one of the finest ever listened to by the judge, Mc-Bride, Lawyers who were present pro-nomiced it as being away ahead of the ordinary. His speech reduced his sentence several years,

CYCLISTS OF

Are Being Laid Up on the Lantern Ordinance.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 7 .- A great deal of complaint has been made lately on account of the large number of bicyclists who persist in disregarding the ordinance in relation to the carrying of a lantern after dark. At the last meeting of the City Council the City Marshal was instructed to strictly enforce the ordinance, and to arrest every person found riding without a bell or lamp after dark. As a consequence of the marshal's obedience of orders, two persons, a lady and a gentleman, were arrested fast evening and brought before Judge Haine, and fined $1 and costs. They pleaded ignorance of the law, and as this was the first case this year, the judge remitted the costs, with a reprimand, saying that the next offenders would be given the full pen-

Following is the ordinance: "That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to ride any bicycle upon the sidewalks of the City of Vancouver on Main street, from Eighth street to First street, and upon the west side of B street, from Eighth street to Fourth street, and upon the south side of Tenth street, from Reserve street to Main. "Sec. 3.-That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to ride any bleycle upon the streets in the City of Vancouver, by day or night, without first being equipped with a suitable alarm bell. "Sec. 4.-That is shall be unlawful for any person or persons to ride any bicycle upon the streets or sidewalks or public parks within the corporate limits of the City of Vancouver, between the hours from one hour after sunset and until daylight in the morning, except the bicycle be so ridden shall be first equipped with a suitable headlight or lantern which shall be kept continuously lighted

Man Accused of Murder Will Soon

Know His Fate.

EUGENE, Nov. 7 .- The testimony in the Bert Heaton murder case was under consideration this morning. The attorneys made their pleas this afternoon and the case has gone to the jury. After the state had examined its 25 or 30 witnesses, seeming to forge a complete chain of evidence from the time Heaton left Junction City the night of the murder till he was ar-rested, the defense announced that they would rest the case without giving testimony. Large crowds are attracted to the rial, as Benton Tracy, the murdered man was very popular in Junction City and at other places where he resided.

Among other things testified to by witnesses for the state was that Heaton's supposed wife is not his wife, but that he has been living with her for several years: that her name is Olga Jasperson, and that she was commonly known in California as "Slivera."
