NEXT GOVERNOR

Lieut. Jarvis Said to Be Only Possibility

Nome Banker Does Not Think That Ivey Has Any Chance Whatever.

Lieut. J. R. Jarvis, at present collector of customs for Alaska, will in all probability be the next governor of the Northern country. While J. W. Ivey, a Portland man, who was Jarvis' predecessor in office, has his ambitions in this regard, it is believed that Jarvis is much too strong a man to be defeated by any politician or combination of them. Lieutenant Jarvis is not a politician, and therein lies his strength. He has never been in politics and for that reason his recommendations regarding Alaska carry more weight with President Roosevelt than those of any other man in or out of the territory.

For a long time Lieutenant Jarvis has advocated the idea of governing Alaska in the same manner that the District of olumbia is governed-by a commission of one Democrat, one Republican and a third non-partisan member. A forecast of President Roosevelt's next message to Congress, recently published in The Journal, stated that the President would probably ask the adoption of this plan. This goes to show the strength of Jarvis with the President, and if any governor is appointed to succeed the present incumbent, Jarvis is considered the only possibility by those who know.

IVEY WILL NEVER BE GOVERNOR. "I do not think Mr. Ivey will ever be governor of Alaska," said Dr. Cabell Whitehead, manager of the Alaska Bankng and Safe Deposit Company, at the Hotel Portland today. "He carries too little weight among the solid interests of the country, and his administration of the only office he ever held in Alaska WAR not satisfactory to many people, to say the least of it. There were too many strange stories affoat for Mr. Ivey to successfully compete for office there

"Lieutenant Jarvis is the logical man for the position. He has been in the country for nine years, and knows it as well robably as any living man. More than that, he has everybody's confidence, VALDES THE NEXT CAPITAL

While I think that Nome will producthan the Klondike ever has or will, I have also a very healthy admicution for Valdes. "That Lown," said Mr. Whitehead, 'is going to be as big a place as any city in Alaska. The mineral lies bullind it. It is the most central point in all Alaska, and although Juneau has designated as the next capital, there is no appropriation available to construct the necessary buildings with and possibly before Congress acts on this question it will take some action to remove the seat of government to Valdes. which I think is the proper place. There seems to be no doubt about one or more railroads building into the interior from this point next year, and this means there is something behind it."

A New Idea

Many persons like to settle on their Christmas presents early in order to get the matter off their minds, and we have adopted the plan of taking a small deposit on any article desired and taying it saide, allowing the buyer to make payments thereon till paid for. This insures the gream of the pick and also guarantees the safe keeping of the present till Christmas. We have already laid uside very many articles bought in this way, and it you have not taken advantage of the offer you should do so at once.

MAYOR SPEAKS OF LINCOLN

Anecdote of War President Causes Much Laughter.

AUDIENCE WAS APPRECIATIVE

Students of Bishop Scott Academy Listen to Able Address.

Mayor George H. Williams addressed an appreciative audience at the Bishop Scott Academy Chapel last evening. Mr. Williams' subject was "Abraham Lincoln, and the speaker gave an interesting digest of the great President's life and

The most hearty applause of the evening followed the telling of an anecdore which was originally told by Lincoln in illustrating what would happen to Great Britain if she interfered in the Civil War, Mr. Williams repeated 't as fol-

"Once there was a man out in Tennes see," said Lincoln, "who wanted to go to a party, and he had a frightful growth of stubby whiskers. Well, he got to the barber's late in the night, and woke him up from sleep. The barber wasn't very heerful and soaped up the heard and rubbed it, and then started to scrape it off. He cut off a pimple and a wart, along with the whiskers, and the man in the chair said:

"You seem to be getting things level."
Yes, said the barber. If the handle holds out, I'll get 'em all off.'

Well, the man had sunken cheeks, and the barber had to stick his finger in the man's mouth to press them out, so that they could be shaved clean. While he was shaving along, he made a hard scrape and the ragor went through the man's cheek and cut the finger inside. barber yelled, 'There, you lantern-jawed "Well, if Great Britain sticks her finger in the matter, she is liable to cut herself. The speaker was in early life intimately acquainted with Lincoln, being in public life at Washington during the Re-
