SAILORS AFRAID.

American Seamen Mutinied on Board a Gunboat.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Mutiny aboard an American gunboat which is now enroute to the Brooklyn Navy Yard with more than 40 of her crew in irons, is the story that the cables tell. The Isle de Luxon, one of the Spanish ships sunk by Dewey when he attacked Cavite and later raised and refitted at Hong Kong, started from the Philippines to New York by way of the Suez. Some of her machinery, improperly bolted down, shifted during a storm and members of the crew mutinied in an effort to abandon the vessel. Just what will be done with them is not known. This is the first incident of mutiny aboard an American warship for many years.

THE SANTA MARIA MATTER

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—There is still excitement along the coast regarding the destructive eruptions of Mount Santa Maria in Guatemala. Although government reports declare the loss of life has not been anything like as heavy as was reported there is a declaration from the natives that deaths are resulting constantly. It is believed the government officials desire to belittle the matter in order to encourage immigration.

BIG FOOTBALL CROWDS.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 21.—The great crowds of persons that have flocked here to witness the great Yale-Harvard game have completely overrun all the hotels and it is now certain that many will be disappointed in their efforts to secure seats in the grounds. Yale and Harvard are hereditary football enemies, and the big battle tomorrow will be one of the fiercest in history.

THE PROGRAM A GRAND ONE

Greatest Fleet of Modern Times.

Admiral Dewey Will Direct Evolutions on a Large Scale Off the Island of Culebra.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 21.—There is now assembling in the Caribbean Sea the most formidable fleet of warships ever brought together under the Stars and Stripes. Within a few days Admiral Dewey will hold his pennant on the flagship of this big force as commander-in-chief.

The general plan of the maneuvers is similar to that pursued in the North Atlantic off the coast of New England last summer, but the present mobilization is to be conducted on a much larger scale than ever before attempted by the American navy. Secretary Moody and the President believe in practical drills—exercises that will prepare the officers and men for service in foreign waters and a fleet against the American shores. The "search problem" is to be the chief feature of the program.

A NAVAL BASE has been established at Culebra Island, some 200 miles east of the island of Porto Rico. For several weeks past collars and supply ships have been rendezvousing in the vicinity of the island. Admiral Summer, commanding the South Atlantic squadron, and Admiral Crowl, commanding the European squadron, are now on their way to the "seat of trouble." Admiral Summer, being the senior, is to have command of the combined squadrons. The plan is to have the combined South Atlantic and European squadrons operate against the North Atlantic fleet in a "search" or "scouting" problem. In the proposed search problem, Rear Admiral Higginson will be advised that a hostile fleet has left Europe and will combine with another in Southern waters with a view to making an attack on some of the American possessions.

The search problem having been completed, all the squadrons, together with a number of detached vessels, will assemble off Culebra, under command of Admiral Dewey. About two months will be devoted to naval evolutions, according to a program which has been formulated by the general staff and the staff of which Admiral Dewey is in command. After the maneuvers there will be a general reorganization of the naval forces in Atlantic and Pacific waters.

DINED ON TOP OF A CHIMNEY.

Perhaps the strangest dinner of its kind ever given was enjoyed by about 20 persons on the top of a huge smokestack 275 feet above ground. The event marked the completion of the chimney, and was given by the Boston Electric Company to those who had assisted in its construction.

With nothing but blue sky above them 20 guests sat down to the table, which was laid on a platform a few feet below the mouth of the chimney. The American flag floated from the center of the table, surrounded by American enterprise. Another table was set at the base of the stack for those who did not care to take the hazardous trip on the small freight elevator.

It was a strange sight from the inside of the chimney watching the little wobbling elevator take the diners up two at a time. Driven by one small cable and swerving from side to side, it carried some of the passengers to lose their appetites before arriving at the top. William F. Hurray, vice-president of the company, who watched the first trial run, refused to make the trip. He said he would not do it for the price of the stock.

William C. L. Eglin, constructing engineer of the company, presided at the dinner table, and laid out punch to the thirty aerial pilgrims. The unique dinner and the program were originated by him. Handsome souvenirs were given each guest. They included a photograph of the chimney, silk American flags and a miniature brick of the kind used in the construction.

Among the distinguished guests were Alphonso Custodia, the inventor of this kind of chimney, and Dr. Juris Hugo Thalmesinger, who came from Germany to attend the odd dinner.

The smokestack is the highest of its kind in the world, and is built of buff, radial perforated brick. The inside diameter at the top is 18 feet, and at the bottom 22 feet, while the total weight is 2,375 tons. It is constructed of 1,200 barrels of cement. The cost of the structure is estimated at $30,000—Philadelphia Press.

A STORY WITH A MORAL.

A story is told of an employer who for 40 years stoutly held that there was "nothing to arbitrate" between him and his striking employees. In the early 60s he built a factory at Concord, N. H., for the manufacture of wheelbarrows and employed about 40 men. They had not been working very long when some trivial differences arose between them and their employer. Neither side would make the slightest concession and the men struck. The owner said that he would see his factory run and fall down before he gave in.

The men replied that they would arbitrate. They would give him 100 days if the factory was locked up. Many attempts were made by well-meaning persons to induce the employer to submit the question to arbitration, but all such efforts were in vain.

The years passed and the factory remained closed, and gradually began to decay. One after another the strikers died. About a month ago the last of them passed away. The owner still lives. A month ago or thereabout one of his acquaintances asked him whether he would reopen his factory now that the strikers were all dead, and it is reported that he replied: "No, I won't. Being as I've been a blanked fool for 40 years I'm going to keep it up for the rest of my days."—Albany Journal.

HOMER DAVENPORT AS A LECTURER

Famous Cartoonist Makes a Decided Hit as a Speaker.

Homer Davenport, who not more than 12 years ago was a struggling artist and who is now one of the world's most famous cartoonists, was an Oregon lad. Oregon people are heart good words said about him. The following letter from James B. Pond of New York to Arthur Brisbane of the New York American, chief of editorial staff, is certainly expressive of one of Davenport's remarkable accomplishments other than that of drawing.

Office of James B. Pond, Everett House, New York

New York, November 14, 1920. Arthur Brisbane, Esq.—Dear Sir: Please pardon any asseveration in saying I write to you of the affair at our house last evening. I wish you might have been there to have seen and heard Mr. Homer Davenport. I will try to enlighten you. As a lecturer he is simply peerless, and his voice as with his pencil, and such a magnificent personality, and childish simplicity and power of expression I never before witnessed. He held an intelligent and refined audience as I ever saw or ever will see fairly spellbound for an hour and a half, wholly unconscious of the effect he was producing; not the slightest effort for oratorical effect, wholly unpretentious, with a voice as silvery and charming as that of the late Wendell Phillips. It is impossible to predict the success that must be in store for this young genius. He is the best equipped man for wielding an influence more potent in all contemporary reforms than any man of his time. So it seems to me from the brief acquaintance of about four hours with him.

I am writing of Davenport as I would write of any other man I know or have known, excepting Henry Ward Beecher, to whom I had the privilege and honor of being the nearest friend during the last 11 years of his life, and who died in my arms. I am Yours Enthusiastically and Dear Earnestly, J. B. POND.

MANY CLOTHES IN HOOD COUNTRY

The Letters Go to India Well Stocked.

A Wardrobe that Would Put a Royal Personage to Shame Through Envy.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—No royal personage of modern times ever carried such an extensive wardrobe on their travels as that which Mrs. Leiter and her daughter, Miss Daisy, carry with them to India, where they are to be the guests of Lady Curzon, nee Miss Mary Leiter, during the approaching Durbar festivities. Members of the British royal family will be present at Delhi together with any number of the nobility, but it is safe to assert that the costumes and jewels of all of these will be eclipsed by the trappings of the two American women, who, as members of the vice-regal family, will be central figures at the festivities.

Mrs. Leiter and her daughter were passengers on the Peninsula and Oriental liner China, which sailed for India today. During the past two days van after van has been driven to the P. & O. docks loaded with trunks belonging to the Leiters. It is stated as a matter of fact that the baggage of these two women numbers more than 30 pieces. The many trunks are divided into no less than 100 separate costumes, to say nothing of the smaller pieces of finery. All of these costumes have been made in Paris and London. Among them are a dozen lace gowns that have occupied years of the lives of lacemakers, and also several white satin gowns embroidered in jewels. These are in addition to the regulation court robes that are taken along. Then there are the strong boxes containing the diamonds and other valuables of the value of this part of the baggage may be had from the statement that the insurance aggregates $2,000,000. One robe of rubies alone is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. To this is added five or six necklaces, and long ropes of pearls, with a dozen diamond brooches and pendants, and a coronet of diamonds and other rare jewels of fabulous value.

When Mrs. Leiter and Miss Leiter reach Simla, where the summer palace of the viceroy is located, they will be met by an escort who, with imposing grandeur, will accompany them to Delhi.

MAY CUT OUT PANAMA.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Specials from Washington say that delay occasioned by the refusal of the Colombian government to come to terms with the United States regarding the Panama canal route has led to the belief in high places that the Nicaragua route will finally be decided upon.

EVOLUTION OF FLOWERS.

It is a far call, indeed, from the wild, fringing of the shore, to the beauty of quantity, old-fashioned "pinkies" to the Lawson and Enchantress carnations, to the pretty little china asters of our grandmothers' days to the superb chrysanthemums which rear their magnificent heads in the garden of the florist.

There are really very few things in use in the world today which have not been materially changed by the forces of methodical development. Civilized men and women themselves are the best examples of this prevailing influence. The beasts of burden and the creatures which supply the world with animal food are remotely different from what they were in the beginning. The work of breeding and training has done more to alter the character of the birds of the air and the beasts of the field, and the same upward tendency is noted in these later days in the flowers which gladden life with their loveliness and which adorn man's perpetually of his daily life.

It is to be noted that what may be called the sophistication of flowers has robbed them of not a whit of their native charm. There is, in the sensuous odor of the American carnation, more radiant, more proud, more dignified, more radiant, more regal of beauty and fragrance, more resplendent with the power to brighten the hour of gladness and to lend comfort to times of sadness and affliction, but they can be spoiled as the best examples of this art of the world's abides flowers will exude their beneficent fragrance for all, and will never tire of the riot of beauty which they have provided since the morning stars sang together for the delectation of man.—Washington Times.

FALSE ECONOMY OF LOW WAGES.

Examination of the prevalent rates for unskilled labor indicates that by far the greater part of the laborers in Great Britain are well below the minimum poverty line, that is to say, unless the wages work the total family income is below 28s. 6d. per week, and in many cases very much below. If the income is below the poverty line, no possible fancy of economic housekeeping will maintain the family in a condition of physical efficiency. With an unskilled laborer the first essential to constant employment is that of bodily efficiency, and from a financial point of view it is folly to employ in such a capacity, who is otherwise than physically fit. For it is obvious that a man so handicapped cannot possibly do full justice to the work in hand, no matter how desirous he may be of doing so. His income will not allow him to supply his body with the necessary energy or fuel to yield the requisite amount of work.

In the low-wage districts of England it is no uncommon occurrence to find a man handling with difficulty a load that in a higher rated area, and consequently better caliber of men, would be readily tackled by one. That is to say, 24 shillings will do in a better manner work that in the low-rated and "cheap-labor" districts is costing 32 shillings. It is right here that the false economy of wage rate upon which it is impossible to maintain any semblance of physical efficiency shows most distinctly.—The Engineering Magazine.

Lively Market and Growers Are Holding Strong for Thirty.

SALEM NEWS NOTES.

SALEM, Nov. 21.—At 9 o'clock last night the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. Thatcher, on Oak street, in this city, was entered by burglars and $10 in cash, together with a ladies' gold watch and chain, a small electric battery and other articles were stolen. The burglars entered the house during the absence of the family. They gained admittance through a window by breaking the sash. The books were thoroughly searched by them and the balance of the house was ransacked, the bedding was thrown on the floor and the mattresses showed evidence of having been thoroughly searched by the marauders. During the evening Mrs. George F. Rodgers heard some one in the basement of her house, near door to the house entered by the burglars. Thinking it was her husband she called his name, but received no response. She quickly secured help, but on returning home found no one at the house.

Mr. Thatcher is a clerk at the O. R. & N. Wharf in this city, and he and his family spent the evening down town, discovering the fact that they had been visited by burglars on returning home late in the evening. The police have been notified of the theft and are on the lookout for the following:

The "Forty-Four" Club, Salem's popular social organization, was last night reorganized for the Winter's parties, and will give dancing parties during the season. The officers elected were: Dr. W. B. Morse, president; J. G. Graham, vice-president; Harry E. Albert, secretary and treasurer. A committee was named on membership, and another to arrange the program of the Winter's entertainment. The club takes its name from the fact that the membership is limited to 44 gentlemen.
