

IMPROVEMENT OF BARRACKS

Engrosses Citizens of Vancouver.

Other News of the Town on the Other Side of the Columbia.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 28.—Capt. V. K. Hart, quartermaster of the Seventeenth Infantry, has advertised for bids to clear the woods in the rear of the officers' quarters for a space of 400 by 1,150 yards, of all the underbrush, and general litter. The general clearance will be made on account of the danger from fire, which is very great, especially in the summer and fall. The difficulty experienced this summer in keeping the fire out of the reservation decided the general to have enough of the undergrowth cleared to protect the officers' quarters, which would be consumed if the woods caught fire.

John Dolan and John Clark, of the Thirty-fourth Company, Coast Artillery, were tried by a general court martial at Fort Stevens and both found guilty of fraudulent enlistment. They were sentenced to be dishonorably discharged, to forfeit all pay and allowances due them, and to be confined for one year at Alcatraz Island. The prisoners were sent to Vancouver Barracks, and with other prisoners sentenced to confinement at Alcatraz will be sent under a proper guard in the charge of Lieut. Laurin L. Lawson to that place. Lieut. Lawson and the guard will then return to their station.

J. B. Allison, aide-de-camp, will have charge of the Judge Advocate's office during the temporary absence of Capt. Wallace A. Debel.

Dr. R. G. Ebert has returned from Fort Flieger, where he has been for several days performing operations at the post hospital.

Corporal John Turner, Company I, Seventeenth Infantry, has been sent from Boise Barracks to the hospital at Vancouver Barracks for surgical treatment.

Lieut. James E. Bell, adjutant of the Seventeenth Infantry, and who has lately returned from leave, has been ordered to report to the commanding officer at Fort Wright.

According to instruction from the secretary of war, George C. Johnson, Louis A. Sore, Robert L. Winchel and St. Clair Perle, of Company K, Coast Artillery, now at Fort Wright, have been transferred to Company A, of the same regiment, and ordered to Vancouver Barracks.

BATTERY 17, INFANTRY, 9.

The Eighth Battery won an easy victory from the Infantry team yesterday by a score of 12 to 0. The Infantry was obliged to play a defensive game mainly, the Battery goal never being in danger.

The Battery played its usual steady game and gained much valuable practice. Left tackle Dellinger was sent through the opposing line this time again for getting into the back when they went through straight and cross tricks. The Infantry had to use all its substitutes, and the Army line one.

THANKSGIVING DAY AT OREGON CITY

General Observance of the Holiday by the People There.

OREGON CITY, Nov. 28.—Thanksgiving Day was observed all over town by the scores closing while services were held in the churches. At the Presbyterian Church the Rev. Mr. Tammam conducted the services, which were held in the morning. At both places generous offerings were left to be sent to the Portland hospitals for the sick. While the church provided for the hospital, the public school children attending the Eastern School managed a dinner for the poor families of this town in a most generous spirit.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Smith, principal of that school, explained to the pupils why Thanksgiving Day is observed and how it is done. She then told the children how they could make the poor happy for one day at least by each of them bringing a small donation. On Wednesday morning every child came with some article of food. Some had brought a single apple or potato or a pumpkin, while others brought enough for a meal. Besides the above mentioned there were squashes, onions, cabbages, preserved fruits, and many other good things which, when put together, made a wagon load. After school the supplies were distributed to every poor family mentioned. Mr. Mars, the janitor, kindly used his buggy as an express wagon for the occasion, thus giving the pupils a chance to quickly make the rounds. The Eastern school was warmly thanked by the poor people provided for.

Joseph Bolleau, an employe of the Portland Flouring Mills, was severely injured yesterday morning while trying to adjust some machinery. He was in the act of transferring a belt from one pulley to another when the belt which he was using was caught by the belt and torn from his hands. It struck him across the forehead, knocking him senseless. In falling his body went through a hole in the floor, landing in a pile of rubbish 15 feet below.

Mr. Bolleau was taken to his home and a physician called. After a careful examination it was found that there were no bones broken, although his body was badly bruised. He is resting easy today.

JOURNAL FIGHT MEETS APPROVAL

Councilmen Will Take Up Food Question.

The Crusade Against Bad Meat and Milk Is Strongly Commended.

That something will soon be done relative to the condition in which Portland finds itself with regard to impure milk and infected meat being sold, was evident by the expressions of two members of the common council this morning.

Councilman C. E. Rumelin, speaking of the matter, said: "I believe that all should be done that can, which will tend to make good stuff pure. There is, and always has been, a tendency to adulterate milk especially. Unscrupulous dealers will do anything to increase the profits on their products. These things we eat should be of all means be free from any ingredient foreign to it. Milk is fed to babies, and the least impurity placed there by the man who sells that milk is a crime. I am very sure that the people and will do all I can to correct the evils that I believe to exist."

Mr. Rumelin was asked if the Mulkey milk ordinance could not be brought up in the common council and be reconsidered.

"I was not in the old council," replied Mr. Rumelin, "and am not familiar with the document. However, as it is still alive I believe it might be well to bring the subject up. I will look into the matter and see what can be done."

PIELGEL ALSO APPROVES.

Councilman Pielgel said that a meat inspector and a milk inspector would be valuable adjuncts to the health department.

Mr. Pielgel said: "The dairies about Portland are in a filthy condition. If you know the exact condition you would swear off drinking milk. So had do I know their condition is that I keep my own cow and for no other reason."

"Do you think, Mr. Pielgel, that a city milk inspector could correct the evils, and that a meat inspector could stop the sale of diseased meat in and about the city?"

"Yes, to a great extent, I do," replied the councilman. "The milk inspector would be compelled to travel out to the dairies and the meat inspectors might have to visit places in the country where Amos B. Williams, of this city, lives. I understand, and it is a good plan."

Mr. Pielgel concluded by saying that he would investigate the matter and determine what is best to do.

SALEM IN LINE FOR GREAT EXPOSITION

Lewis and Clark Fair Will Receive the Enthusiastic Support of the People of the State Capital.

SALEM, Nov. 28.—The Lewis and Clark Exposition is being discussed more and more in this city, and the project is gaining friends rapidly, with the prospect that when the time comes for legislative action on the appropriation desired by the exposition authorities there will be strong support from Salem for a liberal appropriation for the big fair. The amount asked for, $500,000, is by many considered very reasonable, and among those studying the question carefully the opinion gains ground that even a larger appropriation could be made with profit to the state.

The friends of the exposition, among whom there are many who visited the big expositions in the East during the past two years, recognize the great importance of the exposition to the Northwest, and especially to Oregon, and they are enthusiastic in its favor. They hold that the big fair will bring thousands of desirable settlers—homebuilders—here, with ample capital to help develop the wonderful resources of this great section of territory, which at present is so little known and appreciated throughout the Eastern half of the United States; that it will attract the attention of men of means to the wonderful possibilities of this section of the country, and to the great future in store for it as a result of the opening of the Oregon trade, and with the publicity that will be given the great exposition—provided it is properly supported by the state so that this work can be intelligently and adequately done—a tide of emigration will set in in this direction that will exceed any similar movement ever experienced in the past, since the first settlement came to the Columbian basin.

THE PLAN FAVORED.

The plan mentioned is especially favored in this city because it has already been tried here in refunding the city debt, and the indebtedness of the school district, at a great saving in interest, and with the result that the interest payments are made to local people. The advocates of this manner of providing a good working capital for the exposition in the least possible time want a popular loan placed, under sanction of the Legislature, the bonds to bear no more than 2 per cent, interest, and payable in five or ten years, with the option to be reserved by the state to pay any time before maturity when funds are available. The bonds to be exempt from taxation. Two per cent bonds, if in cash, issued in small denominations, if exempt from taxation, would be taken up quickly and readily by capitalists and people of small means within the state, and the proceeds would be at once available for the purpose of beginning the work of preparation for the exposition; the raising of the amount required could be distributed in a number of years, and would not be a heavy burden on the taxpayer. The interest rate would be so low as to make the cost so little that it would be more than balanced by the advantages secured through the opening of a good trade, and making it a really valuable and important factor in assisting in the prompt development of the great resources of the state.

HOW TO PROVIDE FUNDS.

With the discussion of the project, and the growth of sentiment in its favor, comes the question of how to provide for the annual $250,000 to be paid for the opening of the Oregon trade, and with the publicity that will be given the great exposition—provided it is properly supported by the state so that this work can be intelligently and adequately done—a tide of emigration will set in in this direction that will exceed any similar movement ever experienced in the past, since the first settlement came to the Columbian basin.

GIRLS DO NEW YORK.

"If I only lived in the city!" wailed a bright young girl, "I could earn up to $100 a month. My country girls are a decided disadvantage as compared with the residents of the towns in the ways and means of making money."

This same girl set her wits to work, however, and in a few months was carrying on a brisk business at many big houses in the city. She had noticed that the florists never supply greenery of any kind with the flowers they sell to customers. Having obtained consent to supply the shopmen with the same, she set to work to gather wild grasses, ivy, long sprays of periwinkle from her country home, and the delicate fern sprays from her greenhouse. In the autumn sprays of blackberry leaves and fruit, with Virginia creeper and bunches of mountain laurel, she began to be useful. The pay for this was trifling, but the florist recognized her as a table decorator. She supplied her own greenery on these occasions and charged merely for the flowers. Her new business was a decided success, and she was able to put the same advantage over other girls living the same trade as herself, her work in time becoming fairly remunerative.

Another country girl, left penniless on the death of her father, had but one strong point, her horsemanship. She secured employment from one or two high-class horse dealers. Her duties consisted chiefly in exercising the women's hacks, putting them through their paces, jumping, riding to hounds, etc. By these means she earned a fair salary, coupled with a percentage on every horse she sold.

AS THE WORST HUSBAND KNOWN

Thomas Gibson Enjoys Doubtful Distinction.

Judge Boise Makes Strong Statement in Divorce Court at Salem This Morning.

(Journal Special Service.)
SALEM, Nov. 28.—A sensational statement was made by Judge Boise in the Superior Court this morning when he granted to Mary F. Gibson the divorce she had petitioned for from the bonds of matrimony which have tied her to Thomas Gibson for many long years.

"Never before in my 34 years' experience at the bar of justice," said the Judge, "have I had called to my attention a case where a wife was worse treated by her husband than has been Mary Gibson, by the man to whom she has been bound by law. Those bonds are now dissolved forever."

In addition to granting the divorce, the court awarded her the custody of the only child and decreed that the husband should pay her the sum of $500 in cash.

LONG SUFFERING.

The evidence in the case was not as sensational as in many another that has been tried in Oregon, but it was plainly shown that for years the wife was subjected to the greatest cruelty of the hands of the man who swore upon the marriage altar that he would love, honor and protect her through life. She bore her burden bravely and, although bowed down by a load of sorrow and shame, remained true and faithful until the summer the last straw came in the form of a threat to kill, and to leave her life she fled and brought her troubles into court. At that time the judge placed the erring husband under bonds to prevent his doing injury to the woman who had labored for him and subjected herself to his indignities so long without recompense.

Then Mary Gibson petitioned for divorce. That prayer has been heard and answered.

METEORS.

How great is the chance that any given meteor will cross the orbit of the earth and so give notice of their existence? To give answer it must be remembered that these intrusive bodies come into space from every direction, and that the earth describes a circle having a diameter of, in round figures, 85,000,000 miles, and moving upon an invariable plane. Into an imaginary sphere of this diameter, then, plunges the meteor having its perihelion within the earth's orbit. How remote the chance that it will cross the earth's orbit only 8,200 miles across as it makes its plunge into the neighborhood of the sun? The line is more slender than an iron wire, surrounded a globe a third of a mile in diameter. Yet remote as the chance appears not less than 60 radiant points have been determined where these steady-flowing meteor streams are annually encountered. The total number must be inconceivably vast.

Some of the comets which visit the sun have orbits which require that they occur every 600 years, falling downward toward the sun, and what applies to comets applies equally to meteors. Yet in the 50,000 years that they are falling steadily toward the earth, the great movement due to original impulse that they pass barely outside the atmosphere of the sun—or, in other words, this movement was not greater than 10 miles a year! The inference must be that many of these wanderers of the sky must have been on their travels for not only millions but thousands of millions of years. "I saw a meteor," says a new quarterly remarks a traveler of the earth as the journey of a thousand million years is finished forever.—New York Commercial Advertiser.
