SENATOR OF WASHINGTON

Perplexing Problem in State Politics.

Seattle Wants a Senator and Says Harold Preston Is It--- Lobby Move.

Washington's senatorial fight is assuming a proportion that is strenuous if not perplexing. Joe Smith, a traveling correspondent for the Seattle Daily Times, who is well versed in his state's political mix-up, and who is out in the interest of Harold Preston's candidacy, when interviewed at the Hotel Portland last night said:

"The senatorial fight in Washington now hinges upon the power of the railroad lobby to control the State Legislature. For this reason it seems inevitable that the election of a Senator will be combined with the issue of legislative railroad legislation. If the railroads can control the Legislature, then the commission bill will be defeated, and Levi Ankeny of Walla Walla will be elected Senator. If they are unable to control then the commission bill will pass, and Harold Preston will be elected to the Senate.

"It now seems extremely probable, in fact almost certain, that the combination between Preston and the commission forces will be made, and that it will be successful in both issues. The advocates of the commission have a clear majority in the lower house, but in the Senate the commission bill cannot pass unless it receives the votes of three or four of the seven Republican Senators from King County. All of these seven men are very earnest Preston men and four or five of them are undecided on the commission question. Several of them will be willing to vote for the commission in order to secure the election of Mr. Preston. The commission advocates outside of King County, on the other hand, are largely favorable to Preston, and most of those who would not otherwise vote for him would do so in order to secure the passage of the commission bill. The existence of these conditions is the foundation for the expectation that the two fights will be combined and both be successful.

THE COMBINATION OF IT.

"On a combination of the commission fight with the Preston fight, the supporters of Preston and the commission are able to show from 60 to 68 votes for Preston in the Republican caucus, 23 or 24 votes for the commission bill in the Senate, and a safe majority in the House. Fifty-nine votes is a majority of the Republican joint caucus and 23 a majority of the Senate. This counts the votes of the Democratic members favorable to the commission, as voting on that issue, but as voting for a Democratic candidate for Senator.

"The feature of the fight at the present time is the strenuous activity of the railroad lobby, both in opposition to the commission and in favor of Mr. Ankeny.

A LOBBY MOVE.

"The lobby is commanded by George Stevenson of Tacoma, the attorney for the O. R. & N. Company, and J. D. Farrell of Seattle, president of the Pacific Coast Company, a man close in the confidence of J. J. Hill. The methods of these two men are widely different, but both are hard workers and intrepid fighters. Stevenson is old in politics and his name and methods are intensely offensive to the people who oppose him. Mr. Farrell is new in politics, is a man of a high sense of political honor, and in sympathy with Mr. Hill is opposed to the use of money for questionable or corrupt purposes. Until recently B. S. Grosscup of Tacoma, the attorney for the Northern Pacific, was also a large factor in the fight, but he has recently been called off by President Mellen of that road and instructed to attend to the law business of the company and let politics alone.

"If the commission bill is passed the credit for its passage will be due in a large measure to the fearless and intrepid fight put up by Gov. McBride. Since succeeding to the governorship McBride has invaded some of the traditions of the office by taking his coat off and entering the railroad fight in a practical way. He has attended conventions, and caucuses, in person; he made an almost sensational campaign tour of the state, and has marshaled his forces with a master hand. By his admirers he has been called "the man with the iron boots." The lobby is beginning to find out that when he fights, which is all of the time, he fights for results and not for appearances."

Mr. Smith spent a portion of yesterday in Clarke County and left last evening for Spokane.

DEBATE AT HIGH SCHOOL.

All executive duties in American cities shall not be in the hands of the mayor, and his appointments shall require confirmation. This was the result of a debate in the To-Logeion Society of the Portland High School yesterday, in which Lee Wells and Lloyd Magness held the affirmative, and Coulsen Soule and Harry Raffetly the negative. After the debate 12 students presented a part of the "Midsummer Night's Dream."

The Fourth street pavement is giving trouble again. It was supposed that after having been treated with carbolineum there would be no trouble whatever from bubbles or anything else. However, a bubble has been found near Madison street which has pushed the cement curb back. There will be a general inspection now to see that there will be no bubble in any other places.

WARN OFFENDERS TO BE CAREFUL

California Grand Jury Condemns Impure Milk--Sensible Report.

The city officials should not lose sight of the necessity of enforcing the pure food laws. The recent agitation by The Journal caused a movement toward a betterment of conditions, especially those applying to the milk supply. Some of the state food inspectors announced that milk was not necessarily dangerous when infected with germs of consumption, which, of course, was known to be a ridiculous argument.

In the report of the grand jury at San Francisco that official body inserted the following statements, which will be of value to those of the state food inspection bureau, who were inclined to atone for the offenses of unscrupulous dairymen:

"Of all the articles of food, milk should be pure from the fact that it is so generally used, not only by the healthy and strong, but also by delicate infants, many of whom subsist upon it. We found it necessary to pay considerable attention to the matter of the milk sold to the people of the city and county of San Francisco, and we take pleasure in reporting that the provisions of the ordinances governing the matter are now being vigorously enforced, and all milk found to be adulterated is immediately destroyed, and upon a second offense the permit of the guilty party is revoked.

THEATRE CHANGES.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 13.—Rich, Harris and Charles Frohman have obtained control of the Park Theater, and Corse Payton, who has had the management of the theater since the opening of the present season, and his stock company, will give their last performance there tonight. The theater will open under the new management a week hence, with "Everyman," the quaint fifteenth century morality play recently seen in New York, as the attraction.

THE JOURNAL'S PREMIUM DISHES

Demand From Subscribers Takes First Car.

Two More Carloads Have Been Ordered From the Factory.

The first car load of Journal premium dinner sets had barely reached Portland before the demand exceeded the supply. With the appearance of The Journal announcing the arrival of the beautiful chinaware there was "a rush on The Journal office," old and new subscribers appearing in throngs to participate in the distribution, as per the terms of The Journal offer. In every instance, where delivery has ben made, entire satisfaction was expressed and acknowledgment made that the dishes more than met every expectation. This is gratifying to The Journal management, as well as to Journal subscribers, and the good work will go on, until The Journal newspaper as well as a Journal premium dinner set are in nearly every home in Portland and "Where rolls the Oregon."

The Journal's circulation is growing so rapidly that the old plant will have to make way for the new, the latter including the new $25,000 Hoe perfecting press recently ordered, and which will be turning out Journals by the thousands within the next ten weeks or three months.

One thing The Journal management has discovered, the great body of the plain people of Oregon are in sympathy with The Journal and give their support to it in no half-hearted way. It is the encouragement and enthusiasm of this support that spurs The Journal management to increased effort in the making of a newspaper, in which the people of Oregon will have both confidence and pride.

The feeling has just begun to permeate some quarters and some intellects that The Journal is here to stay. And it is well to bear in mind that if you want a live, newsy daily paper, with or without a beautiful 42-piece dinner set, you have the want supplied by calling on or addressing The Journal, 289 Yamhill street, Goodnough Building, P. O. Box 121. Telephones: Oregon Main 500; Columbia 765. And to meet the extraordinary supply for Journal Premium Dinner Sets two more car loads of 84,000 pieces have been ordered by wire from the factory in Ohio.

COMPANY D'S HOP.

Company D, Third Regiment, O. N. G., entertained about 500 invited guests at the Armory Friday evening, the occasion being their third annual ball. The handsome evening gowns and the bright uniforms combined to make a very brilliant picture, for which the tasty decorations of flags and evergreens found a very effective background. One of the flags placed just behind the orchestra was the one presented to Company H, Second Oregon, by the High School girls just prior to their departure for the Philippines, and was carried by them during their entire service with "Uncle Sam." This was especially appropriate, as Company D was organized in the High School some three years since. The music was furnished by Fox's Orchestra, and dancing was indulged in until midnight. The patronesses were: Mrs. J. D. McKinnon, Mrs. C. B. Durbin, Mrs. S. E. Thompson.

WHOLESALERS BUYING SUGAR

Recent Advances Liven Up the Market Considerably.

That a majority of the local members believe that sugar quotations will surely advance is shown by the extra heavy receipts that are coming to this city.

Before the recent advances the sugar market was rather dull and very little buying was done. Now it is different, and retailers are crowding each other in an effort to get their orders in first.

Of late the San Francisco steamers arriving in this port have brought large consignments of sugar. On Thursday evening the steamer Lakme arrived with 500 tons consigned to local jobbers, and the same evening the George W. Elder arrived from the same port with 400 tons for the same people.

SO FEARFUL HER ABUSE

Anna Gebhardt Suffered Great Cruelty.

The sight of one eye destroyed by alleged abuse at the hands of her father, Anna Gebhardt reappeared before Judge Sears yesterday. She is plaintiff with her sister, Louisa Schwartz, against her father, Martin Gebhardt, for the recovery of $1,775 left in a will from grandparents in Germany two years ago.

The story briefly told, is that Gebhardt had two children by his first wife. When she died the little ones were taken by their grandparents and supported until Gebhardt found that a will had been executed, leaving $1,775 to each of them. Then under German law, the father, in his prerogative, can claim three-fourths of the estate. Gebhardt brought the two girls to America. He secured a ranch in Washington, and there began to abuse them. The eldest one married in this city. Soon after the father married. It was then that the cruelty to little Anna began. She was made to saw all the wood, and it was brought out in the testimony that black eyes and bruised features were common occurrences with the child.

So fearful did her existence become that her father had her sent to the reform school at Chehalis, Wash. The child had no support. She could succor no aid in her defense, although of pure character. She lived at the reform institution four years, and it was not until her sister was able to prove that the father was only trying to obtain the little estate, that Anna was released.

One reason why The Journal has rapidly gained circulation is that it is the only paper in Portland that dares to print the news.
