BRIDE OF THE RUSSIAN DIPLOMAT TO BE ABLAZE WITH MANY DIAMONDS

SOLEMN GREEK RITES

Brilliant Ceremony Occur at Capital Tonight.

Payloff-des Planques Marriage Will Be a Memorable Event in Washington Society.

(Journal Special Service.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.-Artisans and decorators were busy at the Russian Embassy today making the necessary preparations for the wedding of Mile. Irene des Planques and M. Alexander Paviow. Russian minister to Corea, which takes place in the parlors of the embassy late this evening. The wedding will be especially interesting to society folk, as it will be conducted in full accordance with the rites and ceremonies of the Russian Church. The ceremony will be solemnized by Bishep Tikhon, assisted by the Rev. Alexandre Hortovilsky, pastor of the Russian Church of St. Nicholas in New York City. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the diplomatic corps, the Cabinet fam-lies and many guests from resident so-ciety will be present.

The bride will be attended by Countess Cassini, niece of the Russian Am-bassador, as maid of honor. The two bridesmaids will be Miss de Smirnoff and Mile. Dadyjensky, daughter of the Russian Consul General in New York. Little Miss Janine des Planques, the 12-year-old sister of the bride, who, with her mother, has been in Washington for some time, will attend her sister as flower girl. The Russian Ambassador will act as the father of honor, with Mrs. John R. McLean as the mother of honor. Mrs. McLean has been selected for the honor because her sister, Mme. Bakhmtleff, is the wife of a Russian diplomat, high in the favor

The bride will wear a trailing gown of white satin lace, with silver trimmings, and will carry a bouquet of liles of the valley. Chief among her jeweled ornaments will be the gift of the bridegroom, a magnificent collar of diamonds, which clasps in front with a device of rubies, worth the price of a province. The other jewels to be worn by the bride will be the Russian Ambassador's gift, earrings of solitaire pearls, of un-

Chief Hunt is determined to clear the sidewalks, so that the public may better enjoy them. For years certain firms and certain individuals have been using the sidewalks in front of their places of business for storage ground, and for advertising purposes. In the future, all will be compelled to comply with the city ordinance, which states that but three feet of the sidewalk may be used by merchants, and that adjoining their stores. Goods cannot be placed on the edge of the walks, as in the past, for a gentleman whose home is beside the sounding sea, for one who has at heart the great fishing interests and timber interests of the state. I wish to east my vote for Hon. R. D. Hume." Only a Joke.

There was a shout of laughter as the legislators realized that once more they had been made the victims of a practical Representative Hodson and Senator A. C. Smith voted when their names were called for Mayor Williams, but both changed to Geer before the result was innounced. Senator Smith said in explanation of his action: "I am not a believer in voting flippantly for United States Senator, and therefore I have changed my vote but once. I changed then because I saw that the candidate for whom I had been voting had no chance of election. I now yield to the persuasion of many friends and vote for gentleman whose strength is rising all the time, who seems to be on the crest of the tidal wave. I vote for T. T.

There was one minor change in today's ballot which may prove signifi-cant. Paulsen of Clackamas, who deserted Fulton for Geer two days ago, on the ground that he could no longer withstand the demands of his constituents for the ex-Governor's election as Senator, voted today for Binger Hermann. Paulsen has evidently satisfied his conscience by the two ballots which he has given Geer and the fact that the latter is gaining strength is not a sufficient argument to keep the Clackamas member in his column. The two votes lost to Geer today were Paulsen and Nottingham.

ACADEMY STUDENTS.

The Fourth years threw out their chests. The Fifth years made it evident that their long trousers were not to be sniffed at. The Fourth year class spoke of a rush. The other class thought it would be pite manly, collegiate, in fact. So the opposing factions met on Portland Academy play grounds, while the sweet girls almost dropped their chewing gum in an endeavor to see the scrimmage from the windows. There was punching of noses. And blacking of eyes.

And bruising of knuckles. And shricks from the aforesaid ladies n the windows. Who won?

When broken noses were counted, and blackened eyes enumerated, the Fourth year's were adjudged by the ladies to have come off best. And each victorious ombatant continued to swell out his chest and each defeated guadintor strove to keep a stiff upper lip.

Then the principals took a hand, and the rushers are seeking to exculpate themselves.

The death in Dublin of Miss Rose Mc Dowell in her 81st year removes a link between the present generation and Dan-iel O'Connell. Miss McDawell in the closing years of Daniel O'Connell's life was a young lady of extraordinary talents and beauty. She captivated O'Connell and had the refusal of his hand and heart. The rejection or his suit is said have weighed heavily on O'Connell and to have been one of the proximate causes of the illness to which he suc-

MAY DISCUSS PERJURY CHARGE

The Waikers May Yet Escape Punishment.

In all probability, the charge of perlury, preferred against W. C. and Henry Walker will be dismissed by the District Attorney.

The aged father, and his son, who eloped with May Payne and Martha Sims of Grass Valley, will probably escape punishment for their alleged crime, through a technicality of the law.

The seal of Multnomah County was not placed on the marriage licenses, and therefore, it is said, the charge of perjury could not be established in a court. Then, too, there is another phase of the case which renders it almost impossible to convict the Walkers. Henry Walker, the young man who married May Payne, is satisfactory to the girl's parents, and they could not be brought here to tesin the case. This is a very material point, as, it is said, if they will not come, conviction would be next to impossible. Henry Walker swore that Miss Sims was over 18 years of age, and W. C. Walker, the father, swore that Miss Payne was over the same age. As Miss Payne's parents will not come here to aid the prosecution, it is pointed off that her age cannot be proved in court. Both men, it seems, took the girls' word for their age, and upon that word, made the affidavits. At least, that is what the men have said, and they would presumably so testify at the trial, if the case ever went so far.

Badly Mixed Up. It is a badly mixed case. John Sims, father of the girl who married the old man Walker, does not now feel so strongly inclined to prosecute the case, as his daughter has come back to him. At first he said he would prosecute the case at any cost. As was exclusively published in The journal yesterday, both father and son are willing to come back to this city without the formality of requisition papers. They have made up their minds that there is nothing to fear, it is said, and as long as they could be brought by process of law, anyway, they think they might as well come willingly. They are still in Vancouver.

Describes How Husband Slew His Rival.

Opposing Senator Prepared to Make After Tragedy Forced to Walk Through Street at Point of a Revolver.

> (Journal Special Service.)
> NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Suffering from hysteria, Mrs. McDowell was barely able yesterday to give the police of Newark an outline of the tragic events of Sunday morning, when she walked from Harrison to Newark at the point of a revolver in the hands of her husband, who had just killed Walter Ramsay, his rival for the affections of his wife. Before being committed to the Hudson County Jail yesterday as a witness against her husband Mrs. McDowell told the story of that night of horror.

By Mrs. Mary McDowell. I had feared for some time that my husband would make an attempt on my life or that of Walter Ramsay. fore, when my husband met Walter and me, he beat Walter into insensibility, and I always dreaded their meeting a second time.

On Saturday night I felt this dread upon me again. I don't know why I should have grown suddenly cold with fear, but I knew something terrible was about to happen.

Walter Ramsay had come home about 10 o'clock, tired out. I heard him mov-ing about in his room for a few moments and then he was quiet. Then I heard some one come up the

My heart stood still for a moment. feared it was my husband.

I don't know why this thought should have occurred to me, but a presentiment of what was to follow flashed over me. I waited, my heart almost stilled with

The footsteps stopped in front of the door of the sitting room, where I sat trying to read, and there came a heavy tnock on the door.

I called to Walter to get up and go to the door, but he did not answer, and be-fore I could call again the door was broken in and my husband stood before

He was white with rage, and stood glowering at me from beneath the brim

"Where is he?" he asked. I could not answer him. I was parayzed with terror for a moment. Then, darting past him, I ran into the lady. I fell into her arms and lay there half crazed with fright. I heard my husband go into the room where Ramsay lay. I waited. I heard nothing but a heavy thud and my hus-band cursing bitterly. I knew instinctively what was happening. Then my husband stepped from the broken door into the hall.

"Come here!" he said, coldly.

I went to him and he took me by the arm and dragged me into the room in which Waiter lay. My husband said nothing to me, but stood by me while I looked at the awful object. Ramsey's distorted body lay there, a stream of blood flowing from his and face.

Made Her Game on the Dead. My husband compelled me to gaze or this fearful sight for 10 minutes-10 hours it seemed-and then said:

'Get on your cloak and follow me." I did as he ordered me, like one in a dream. Then he thrust a heavy metallic object against my forehead and said:
"Walk on before me and say nothing. If you utter a word, I will kill you as I

I believed him and walked on before him. He marched me out of the house and into the road leading to Newark, miles away.

"Go on till I tell you to stop," he said.
I walked until I felt I could not take another step. I was sick with fright, sick from the recollection of the awful sight I had seen and at times I almost fell, but he was always there at my side, telling me to walk on.

We passed a number of policemen on our way, but whenever we neared one I felt the pressure of the revolver against my face and heard my husband's voice: "Remember, if you say a word I will kill you as I killed him."

Dared Not Turn Her Head. I dared not turn my head to look at any one as I passed.

That walk is a horrid dream, a nightmare, and it will live in my memory like a flame as long as I live. It seemed days of darkness and terrpr before we reached Newark and then he took me to the steps of his boarding house and left me there, saying: "Say that you left me at 5 o'cle you say anything else I will kill you.'

He then struck me in the face, He entered the house without another word and left me there alone. I wandered to the house of a friend who took me in and cared for me until daybreak, when the police came to find
