Cudihoe Don't Like Certain Acts of Grand Jury.

(Journal Special Service.) SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 24.—Five indictments were returned by the King County grand jury yesterday afternoon. Among them were: William Chappelle, heavy property owner, two counts for renting property for gambling purposes and for immoral purposes. This makes four counts on which Chappelle has been indicted. Walter S. Zanfrella, operating Star Concert Hall, where women were employed as beer sellers. There was an open clash yesterday afternoon between the Sheriff's office and the grand jury. Sheriff Cudihoe served notice on the grand jury that he would not be responsible for the acts of deputy sheriffs serving the grand jury unless he was consulted or else the county indemnified him against damages for anything the deputies might do under orders of the grand jury. Sheriff Angry. The Sheriff thinks he has been discourteously treated and threatened to withdraw his commission from the deputies unless his demands were complied with. There was a stormy time when Sheriff Cudihoe laid down the law to the jury. No action has been taken, the jury being given until tomorrow to make its answer. The stand the Sheriff took yesterday was because of the order of the jury to search for gambling apparatus alleged to be stored in a business house. The deputy sheriff made the search and found nothing. Later it developed that the place searched was the wrong one and the owners threaten to sue the Sheriff on his bond. The jury issued an order to a deputy sheriff to seize the books of the Seattle & Lake Washington Waterway Company which holds an alleged fraudulent contract with the city. Sheriff Cudihoe heard of the order and refused to allow a deputy sheriff to serve it unless the court signed the order. The search was not made.

High Class Immigrants Coming West.

Never Before Have Homeseekers Been So Well Educated as at Present.

"I am going back after another load," said R. L. Duval, special excursion agent for the Northwestern Railroad, as he swung upon the rear platform of a Pullman car at the Union station this morning. "There are thousands of them back there and they only need stirring up. I will bring another load out next week." Mr. Duval was speaking of homeseekers. He has been engaged for many months in plotting toward the Pacific Northwest those who wish to locate in God's country, and in comparing present conditions with those in the past he said: "I have been identified with Western immigration for a long time, but never have I seen as high class people take advantage of the excursion rates as are doing so now. They have money to pay their way, know what they want and have a pretty good idea where to go to get it. And I do not class them by their color alone, they are far better educated than those who availed themselves of the settlers' rates last year or two years ago. I do not say that this applies specifically, but it certainly does in general." Come From Everywhere. Mr. Duval was asked from what particular locality the immigrants into the Northwest were coming. He said: "From every point of the compass, except that which points toward the Pacific Ocean. The Middle West, South, East and Atlantic Coast is each furnishing its quota. I bring my trains out from Chicago. The people gather there from all over the country and come West by droves. All passenger trains are leaving there in two and three sections." Last week Mr. Duval brought 400 to the coast, by far the larger percentage of whom came through to Portland. He said their surprise was great when, after crossing the Rocky Mountains, they entered a country where snow was seldom seen, and where the climate was that of spring, indeed, and not spring in name only until very much later in the year, as is the fact where the majority of them came from. Even those from the "Sunny South" were delighted to find conditions so nearly like those they left behind.

and entered upon the straight stretch of track leading to Astoria proper. It was a long column of ships of all sizes and all varieties of power. Coming up the channel these vessels swung slowly in a graceful curve and dropped back into the harbor, traveling abreast of the train. Every whistle was shrilling its loudest and every cannon added its voice to the general clamor of greeting. Others tell similar stories of the good times Astoria showed the masses who brought her the greatest honor that has fallen to her lot since she was selected and honored as the first point of settlement in the Pacific Northwest. It is claimed there were 14,000 persons at the depot to greet Fulton.

Fulton's Plea for State Harmony

ASTORIA, Feb. 24.—"I thought when I stood in the legislative hall of the lower house of the Oregon Legislature on last Friday night that the happiest moment of my life was that which I had just passed. I thought that I had won, and the great happiness that came to me baffles description. I thought then that no event could possibly bring more genuine pleasure to me." "But I was in error. There was still a greater moment to come to me—a time when I would feel that no other time could compare with it. This greatest and crowning happiness came when I stepped from the train at the depot Monday morning and looked into the faces of the thousands who had assembled to welcome me back to my own city. In those upturned faces I saw genuine gladness, and my heart went out to my own dear people as it could never go out to others. I would that language could express the gratitude I feel to be able to tell my own people how much I appreciate their sincere demonstration in my honor would be a boon, but I must leave them to imagine what words suffice to tell." Thus spoke Senator Fulton to the general representative of the people at the first demonstration of welcome to him yesterday. The Senator's face bore unmistakable signs of the worry of the late contest, but he had forgotten everything in the magnificent welcome that had been planned and successfully carried out. The Senator visited Astoria on occasions of the kind rarely; but yesterday Astoria eclipsed all previous efforts. With one accord her 10,000 people threw themselves into the celebration as sincerely as 10,000 people could. The Senator's tribute to the magnificent tribute that his fellow-townsmen had offered tears welled up in his eyes and he turned his head for a moment until the choking sensation passed. Senator A. C. Smith's address was an eloquent tribute, and the crowd of 7,000 people who gathered to witness the event behaved as if he could be heard for two blocks. As those erstwhile political opponents stood before the people, the one lauding the other in his hour of triumph, the assembled multitude set up a great cheer—a cheer which denoted that political contests were to be forgotten. Senator Smith spoke of the sterling worth of Astoria's favorite son, of the difficulties with which his struggle for the toga had been characterized, of the great joy of his home people at the ultimate victory and of the love that every man, woman and child in the community bore for "Charlie." Senator Fulton was visibly affected, and a tear trickled down his cheek as he stepped forward to respond. Senator Fulton launched into the Astoria-Portland strife. Pleads for Harmony. He put forth an eloquent plea for harmony, and said he hoped he would never again hear of sectionalism in Oregon. There is room for both Portland and Astoria on the Oregon map, and he hoped the two cities would work together for their mutual advancement and forever bury the hatchet. He believed in his home city, and regarded the impression prevailing elsewhere as an erroneous one. The Columbia River, he continued, could not be too well improved, for the greater that highway is made the better it will be for every community in the state. He invited the newsworker to visit the harbors of Tillamook, Yaquina and Coos Bays, and of the opening of the entire upper river to navigation. Nearly every speaker referred to the bad feeling which has been engendered by the Portland newspaper trust's attacks on the city by the sea. Evening Reception. At night the Native Daughters held a reception at which Senator and Mrs. Fulton met the laboring people of the city. Two thousand persons shook them by the hand. Among the visitors were many children, for each of which the Senator and Mrs. Fulton had a pleasant word. The banquet at the Irving Club commencing at 10 o'clock was a pronounced success, and there was much rejoicing. During the afternoon Senator and Mrs. Fulton entertained the ladies and many of the gentlemen who had come down with the Senator's party. As the Senator and his wife arrived at their home the ladies who received sang "Auld Lang Syne," and during the afternoon Mrs. Fulton was really a guest. Senator Fulton leaves tomorrow for Washington where he will take the oath of office. He will return at once, and assume his seat in December.

conclude that it is wiser to abandon, for a time, his ambition for a term at Washington. The coming congressional fight in the First District promises to be warmly contested. According to Walter Lyon, ex-Gov. Geer will probably not be among the aspirants for the nomination. "I cannot positively state," he said, "that Mr. Geer will not be a candidate, but if he has ambitions in that direction I have seen Mr. Geer's name mentioned in connection with the congressional nomination, but I am certain it is never with his sanction or consent." Geer Men Want Davy. "The Geer people are favorable to the candidacy of Frank Davy, of Marion County. During the recent legislative session, Davy stood by Geer to the last ditch, advocated the flat salary bill and made a splendid record, both as a debater and as an advocate of the will of the people. Mr. Davy would be an honor to Oregon in the halls of Congress, and would make a brilliant record. He is a man who will never give up, once he has entered into a contest. He has tenacity and grit, and is just the kind of a man who would do good work at the National Capital." Davy is very highly thought of in Marion County. The people know that he can trust him, and he has been tried and found to be of the right kind of stuff. I prophesy that if he secures the nomination the vote cast for him will be large. The man who makes the race for that place, if he hopes to win, must be one who stood as an advocate of the people. United States Is Long Way Behind.

Comparison With Other Countries Shows This Nation to Very Poor Advantage.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 24.—Commander Beeher, who has been United States naval attaché at Berlin, informed the President six months ago of the needs of the navy and made for the President a comparison of the real strength of the United States navy with those of the great powers. This comparison showed that the United States was scarcely more than a fifth rate power. Within the past few days, however, there has been tremendous activity at the White House and the navy department. The session of Congress is about to close and all that has been done so far, long after the conference between the President and Commander Beeher, was the program announced by the House in the appropriation bill, which provides for three battleships, two cruisers and a few minor vessels. Republican Mismanagement. It is in the power of the Senate, however, to increase this program, but legislation has been tangled so by the short session that there can be no full discussion of the needs of the country. It is known that the general board of which Admiral Dewey is chairman, has long had under consideration a plan for the immediate increase of the navy. It is said that this naval idea is partly known to the House naval committee, and that the committee nevertheless has gone no further than the recommendation of three battleships and two cruisers. There is a resolution known as the Dayton resolution pending in the House, but no action has been taken on it, although it looks to the increase of the navy annually by four battleships.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24. New York is undergoing a siege of the grip, more widespread than any in several years. While the doctors say that a majority of the cases are lighter than in previous years, there seem to be just as many, if not more of them. The Health Department reported twelve deaths from grip last week, 100 per cent. increase of the week before. But it is said that the proportion of deaths to the number of persons who are now afflicted and who are yet to fall to the ubiquitous bacilli will be comparatively small.

WHEN GRIP THRIVES. "You will always find," said a leading doctor, "that when a cold wave or a term of irregular weather strikes a locality there is a great increase in pulmonary diseases. And by pulmonary diseases I mean grip, or influenza, pneumonia and broncho-pneumonia. The ordinary rules of health are the proper preventives for every one to take. These do not need the supervision of a physician. Eat heartily of substantial and nutritious food, use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as prescribed four times a day and sleep long and soundly. That is my advice to persons fearing grip."

HOW YOU MAY KNOW IF YOU HAVE GRIP AND HOW TO AVOID IT

HAVE YOU— Pains in the back? A chill down your backbone? Then an aching fever? A running nose? An intermittent headache? Stiff and aching joints? A lazy, sleepy feeling? Eyes that feel swollen? —Then you have the grip.

TO DODGE THE GRIP— Use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey four times a day in half glass of milk or water. Stay out of draughts. Keep your feet warm and dry. Beware of unventilated rooms and cars. Eat regularly. Eat no fancy or fat things. Sleep regularly. —And you will dodge the grip.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey builds up and sustains the system, aids digestion, stimulates and enriches the blood and kills all disease germs. At all drug stores and grocers, $1.00 a bottle. Be sure you get the genuine, which is absolutely pure and contains no fusel oil.

NO EFFORT TO RECOVER BODY

The body of H. Bleikenrifer is still unrecovered. He jumped from the steamer America into the river Sunday. No effort has been made to recover the body.

Bleikenrifer's Remains Still Lie in Willamette River.

The Journal's story of last night regarding the deplorable condition of affairs relative to the recovery of bodies as in the present case, created general discussion around the city. People were shocked that such conditions prevailed; that no county or city officer has authority to go to work at once, and recover dead bodies, when it is known in what place the body lies. Coroner Finley's frank statement received much commendation. But everyone deplores the idea that he has no funds with which to conduct searches after dead bodies. City Attorney Talks. City Attorney Fitzgerald, who was a passenger on the steamer America and saw Bleikenrifer make several attempts to jump off the boat, feels indignant that no attempt has been made to recover the body. "It is a disgrace to our city and country," said Attorney Fitzgerald, "and there certainly should be something done about it. There should be some officer, the coroner I should say, who should have power to conduct a search for dead bodies. As in the present case, no effort has been made to recover the body of this man, so it is in other cases. It is a strange state of affairs, and should be remedied at once." "I think," continued City Attorney Fitzgerald, "that Bleikenrifer must have been drinking some very bad whisky. He was frantic on the way down from St. Helens, and attempted to jump off several times."

HOST TOOK A DEADLY DRUG

Entertained Guests Lavishly and Then Died.

(Journal Special Service.) BOSTON, Feb. 24.—Tragic in the extreme was the death of James Klein, whose body was found on a bed in his room at No. 15 Cortes street. Only a day before he celebrated his thirtieth birthday. He invited a large number of his friends—he was one of the most popular men in Boston—to his suite of rooms and entertained them lavishly. He chatted, ate and drank with the best of spirits, and seemed to be on good terms with himself and the world. He left word with his landlady that he wanted to be called at 7 a. m. When she rapped at the door, there was no answer. She went away and returned later. Still no answer came to her loud and insistent knocking. Fearing that something was wrong, she called other lodgers to her help and with them burst in the door. On the bed lay Klein, dead, a shadow of a smile on his face, as if he were sleeping peacefully. On a chair near the bed lay a suit of clean underwear, a pair of stockings, shoes just polished and a suit of clothes. In preparation for his funeral he had undressingly gone about his death calmly and laid these things aside. Left Two Letters. On a bureau were found two letters, one addressed to his landlady and the other to a young woman with whom he has been in love. She works in the same store as Klein, and, like him, is popular, efficient and highly esteemed. In the note to his landlady, a pathetic memento, Klein stated that he had no relatives in this country. His sister lives in Hungary with his mother. He left the address of each and asked the landlady to favor him to communicate with them. The other letter was addressed to the young woman who worked with him and who saw him yesterday. To her he left all the little property he possessed and asked her to remember him in years to come. "I am tired of living," said one of the letters. "I have been ill a long time and have suffered greatly. The game of life is too much for me. I have lost time after time, and the prospect is cold, dull and gray." Search was made by the lodgers of the house and by policemen of Station Four, who had been notified, for the poison with which probably Klein had done away with himself. Not a bottle, box or package of any kind could be found in the bed or on the table or chair near by. Until the medical examiner makes an autopsy on the body, now at the City Hospital Morgue, it will not be known what agency sent Klein to his death.
