"PHONY" DIAMOND AND PRISON BARS

Most Peculiar Case Floats to the Surface.

One Pawnbroker Fleeced While Another Secures Liberty of Alleged Evil Doer.

On March 25, James Davis, colored, entered the pawnshop of M. Kautner on Third street, and showing a four-karat diamond, requested the loan of $125 until April 1. The diamond, according to Mr. Kautner, was worth $400 easily, and the loan was made. While he was making out the ticket, Davis, it is alleged, switched the diamond, leaving in its stead a "phony" or paste diamond, and taking the $125, sped out onto the street, disappearing in the crowd.

Davis was arrested soon after on a warrant charging him with fraud. He waived preliminary hearing in the Municipal Court, and his bonds were fixed at $1,000 cash.

When Davis came to Mr. Kautner for the loan, he was asked if the ring were his property, to which he replied in the affirmative.

"Where did you purchase it?" he was asked.

"I purchased it at Friedlander's," was the response.

"How much did you pay for it?"

"I paid $300 for it."

Bail Promptly Supplied.

After Davis' arrest and arraignment, bail money was promptly furnished by Miss Bertha Myers in the sum of $1,000 cash. Attorney Henry E. McGinn was employed to defend him.

Miss Myers runs a pawnshop at 143 Third street, and is more familiarly known as "Auntie." A Journal reporter called at her place, and business, and when the question was asked as to why bail had been furnished by her, replied that it was because Davis had bought the diamond there.

M. Abrahamson, who is a partner in the pawnshop, said: "I sold Davis the ring. He paid me $150 for it. That was its worth, and he did not ask for any reduction. When he pawned it at Kautner's place, they gave him too much money, and then made the charge against him that he switched it on them, leaving them a fake stone."

"Why did Davis not come here to pawn the diamond?" was asked.

"He didn't want us to know about pawning the diamond."

Must Protect Customers.

"Why did he ask you to bail him out?"

"Because he bought the diamond here, and we must protect our customers."

"Is he a particular friend of this establishment?"

"Yes; we have known him for many years."

Davis is a window-cleaner about town. He will have a trial in the State Circuit Court in the near future.

Knew Too Much.

There was once a doctor who knew so much that he could not remember simple remedies. If he had had Cylind, the great eczema cure sold by J. A. Clemenson, the cut-rate druggist at Second and Yamhill streets, Portland, Oregon, he would have saved time thinking, for Cylind is the only known remedy that comes within a grasp of curing all itching skin troubles.

MIKADO'S AGENT VISITS PORTLAND

The Lewis and Clark Fair directors are striving hard to obtain a fine exhibit from Japan in 1903. Colonel Henry E. Desch and Leo Freide, special commissioners of the Fair, are in the city at the present time looking into the matter.

The directors will attempt to add them by entertaining J. Kuchi, the Japanese Imperial Commissioner to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and in the event of success, the exhibit will be derived from it by Japan. Mr. Kuchi will arrive in Portland Saturday evening, when he will be entertained at a banquet. Sunday morning he will be given a carriage ride.

The committee on music and ceremonies of the Fair is in session this afternoon making arrangements for the reception of Mr. Kuchi. At this meeting a telegram will be read from John Barrett, at whose suggestion Mr. Kuchi was invited to Portland. The telegram is as follows:

"Although he is here pressed for time, I have persuaded Mr. Kuchi to accept the invitation and come to Portland on the 7 o'clock train on the evening of Saturday, April 4, from Seattle. He will return to Seattle Sunday afternoon to catch the Japan steamer. I would suggest you give him a small banquet Saturday night and show him into action Sunday morning. Please send also invitations to Seattle, care of consul, for Mr. Takashi Nakamura, secretary of the legation, and Mr. Lohnd, acting consul, who will accompany him to Portland. Mr. Kuchi arrives over the Northern Pacific overland, which is due in Seattle Friday night. I suggest that some one meet him in that city. His full name is J. Kuchi; his title is Director of the Bureau of Commerce and Industry of the Imperial Japanese Ministry of Agriculture and Commerce and Special Commissioner to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. He is an important man and is favorably disposed toward participation in the Portland Exposition. You can address me here if necessary until Wednesday noon, and after that at St. Louis."

Besides making arrangements for the reception of Mr. Kuchi, the ceremonies and music committee will discuss the details concerning the laying of the corner stone of the monument to Lewis and Clark by President Roosevelt and the entertainment while the guest of the City of Portland.

How to Receive
The President

The Mayor Gets Important Communication.

Suggestions Laid Down for Coming Entertainment of Mr. Roosevelt.

Mayor Williams received an important communication from William Loeb, Jr., secretary to President Roosevelt, today, which contains instructions to chairman of local committees of cities contemplated in the itinerary of the President's coming tour. Particular stress is laid on the manner in which efforts are to be arranged, also on the subject of harmony that must exist between municipal authorities and the local committees.

Beginning with the carriage arrangements which must be observed, Secretary Loeb says: "The President and the secretary to the President will occupy the first carriage, the remaining two seats in which are to be occupied by such representative persons as may be chosen by the local committee. This carriage should be drawn by two horses, not by four. No footman should ride on the box of this carriage; that place will be occupied by a special officer of the President's party. The driver and escort must be picked men. No man should be allowed in the escort who does not thoroughly understand how to ride a horse."

"The second carriage must be reserved absolutely for special officers and stenographers accompanying the party."

"The third carriage must be reserved for one of the assistant secretaries to the President and the President's physician."

Must All Have Carriages.

The balance of the President's party, including representative newspaper men, should be suitably provided for in carriages immediately following. The entire party should be provided for in carriages wherever carriages are taken, to be driven and not separated in any way by escort or local conveyance anywhere on the route.

"Not more than two local representatives should be assigned to any carriage. Carriages must not be driven at more than a moderate trot at any point."

"At railway stations and at whatever other points the President leaves his carriage or other conveyance, ropes must be used to keep back the crowds."

"There should be no salutes with fireworks of any sort, or by fireworks, near the President's train or any vehicle in which he may be."

"Carriage and hotel arrangements, seating on stands, and all other plans in which the President's party are included, should include the entire party, and should be arranged strictly in accordance with the order in which they are named in the list furnished by the secretary to the President."

Must Insure Safety.

"All platforms, balconies and stands of every description from which the President speaks must be thoroughly examined and approved by a competent official. Ample space on stands should be roped off to insure room for the President and his party, and the space so set aside should be absolutely reserved for this purpose."

"No public receptions will be held and no changes, however slight, are to be made in the itinerary or any of the programs as approved by the President's secretary. Drives are substituted for receptions, as they afford an opportunity for a very large number of people to greet the President, and also afford the President an opportunity of seeing the people and the place at which he stops."

"Provision should be made to secure as much quiet as possible at points where the President speaks. This refers particularly to the moving of cars, blowing of whistles, running of engines, and anything of the kind. Both the President and the people he addresses are entitled to this consideration."

No Train Receptions.

"Owing to limited accommodations on the President's train, local committees can only be received at the places they represent. They must be restricted to a practical number. The reception of unnecessarily large committees delays the program and lessens the time which can be devoted to the public."

"There must be full co-operation and harmony between municipal authorities and the President's party. The latter, at the utmost precaution may be taken upon every feature of the President's stay. Every detail incident to carrying out the program approved by the President's secretary must be agreed upon and thoroughly provided for before the President's arrival."

Secretary Loeb asks that careful attention be given to the foregoing suggestions or instructions, as it has on past occasions been found necessary to even hasten the departure of a Presidential party owing to muddled arrangements for reception.

SMITH MAY BE HANGED HERE

It is barely possible that George Smith, the condemned wife murderer, may be executed by Sheriff Stofey instead of at the State penitentiary, as contemplated by the new Legislative act. The bill to do away with county executions was passed by the Legislature February 16 and reads to take effect 90 days after its passage. This would bring the new law into action May 15. Monday morning the Supreme Court sustained the lower court in its finding of Smith guilty of murder in the first degree, and there now awaits nothing but the customary 30 days allowed the condemned man's attorneys to apply for a new trial, which, if refused, will throw the prisoner back into Judge George's Court for re-sentence. Should Judge George wish to delay matters a few days, or rather two or three days, he would then put the new law into operation by executing a Multnomah convict as its first man.

RANDALL WILL PREACH

Rev. William E. Randall, former pastor of the Second Baptist Church, will preach at the new Woodman Hall, East Sixth and East Alder streets, Sunday morning and evening. Mr. Randall is the pastor of the pastorate of the Second Church on account of factional fights. His followers are taking steps to organize another church.

Symphony Concert.

Tomorrow night at the Marquam Theatre the Portland Symphony Orchestra will close its 1902-1903 season with a recital of exceptional merit. A program has been arranged with a view of pleasing the most critical musical devotee and no detail of technique will be absent. The season just closing has been a very successful one for the Symphony Orchestra.

Elmore Rice's Musicals.

Elmore Rice's Tuesday evening entertainments at the First Baptist Church gain in popularity as the weeks go by. The increasing size of the audience attest to this fact. Last night the affair was of a nature that calls for mention. The violin selections rendered by the Hidden-Courses String Quartet and Mrs. Albert Shick's song recitals were charming musical features. Encores greeted the artists at the close of each number.

Field's Great Minstrels.

Next Monday and Tuesday nights, April 6 and 7, with a popular ladies' and children's matinee Tuesday, Al. G. Field's Greater Minstrels will be the attraction at the Marquam Grand Theatre. Mr. Field has imported many novelties, and the presentation of extraordinary features is a specialty with the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels. The musical Magnani family has yielded to the big money magnet inducements offered by Mr. Field, and will be seen in the most startling original musical act it is possible to present. The Magnani family comprises the original four Parisian Musical Faveurs. These musical geniuses have created an actual novelty that surpasses that which brought them fame and fortune as "The Musical Barons of Seville." On the oldest of old instruments they indulge in a musical melange ranging from the popular
