

THREE HIGHWAYMEN SECURE A FORTUNE

Emil Swelund arrived in Portland from Tacoma two weeks ago. He had $4,000 which he had saved through years of hard labor in the St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Company. While returning to his humble lodgings at 315 Couch street Wednesday night he was held up and robbed of every dollar by three desperate highwaymen at the foot of Madison street. After stripping him of his fortune they disappeared in the darkness. Five minutes after the robbery Swelund rushed into police headquarters and told his story to Captain of Detectives Simmons, begging that action be taken at once to recover the money and bring the highwaymen to justice. After half an hour of parleying, during which time Swelund was accused of falsehood by the detectives, an officer was sent out to "investigate." In 15 minutes he returned, saying the story was a fake. The police have since dropped the matter entirely.

Emil Swelund Robbed of $4,000, the Net Result of Ten Years of Hard Labor—Port- land Police Refuse Aid.

Held up at the point of an ugly revolver in the hands of a desperate highwayman, snatched from behind by a second, searched and robbed of $4,000 in greenbacks by a third in brief the terrible experience of Emil Swelund, recently from Tacoma, Wednesday night at the foot of Madison street.

The story of the robbery as gleaned from the unwilling lips of the local detective was published in yesterday's issue of The Journal. The story as related by the youthful victim, as he sat in his humble lodgings at 315 Couch street beside his bride of 10 days, is now given in detail for the first time.

In itself, the tale of this, the boldest robbery ever perpetrated in Portland, is as filled with pathos as to touch the heart of the most careless; but, added with it is the unwarranted manner in which the victim was refused aid by the Portland police. As stated yesterday, the plea for help was given no response by Captain of Detectives Simmons or the Chief of Police, beyond the sending of a man to the scene of the hold-up to "investigate."

Swelund's Pitiful Story. "I had been out seeking employment," said Swelund to The Journal, "and was returning home by way of the Madison street bridge. I was hurrying along at a rapid rate, because I was late, and wished to reach home quickly. As I stepped from the bridge a man sprang out. He held a revolver in his hand, which he leveled at my head.

"Lead, throw up your hands, and be quick as you value your life," said the highwayman.

"Of course I obeyed. I next noticed two other men coming out of a dark place. One of them went behind me and suddenly struck me a terrific blow over the shoulder. He had 'kicked' my head, but missed. I was so badly frightened and was so weak that I fell to the ground. Then the third robber bent over me and searched my pockets. He soon found that all my savings of years were stored in my inside coat pocket. Grabbing the bunch of greenbacks he almost shouted to his pals, saying: 'Here it is, boys; I've got it! I've got it!'

"Jumping to his feet he and the others took to their heels, running rapidly away. The time consumed had been in reality not more than a very few moments, but to me it seemed a lifetime. In a brief space I had been left penniless with a wife who was at that moment waiting my arrival to be provided for."

His Great Ambition. "My great ambition for years has been to provide a home for the woman who is now my wife," continued Swelund, "and my keen disappointment at the loss of my last penny you can readily imagine. How could I meet her? Yesterday I had selected a home on the East Side and today we were to go together and close the purchase. And now I have not money left to pay a week's rent." The youthful and pretty bride was crying while the man of her choice related his awful experience, but she dried her tears at his kind words, and assured him of her devotion and love.

"Cheer up," she said, "there are better days ahead, and worse things might have happened. It was fortunate that you escaped with your life. Although this misfortune is an awful blow, the future is before us, and no doubt better luck will be ours."

"I appealed to the police immediately after the robbery," spoke up Swelund, "but they appeared to think my story false. I had the hardest kind of a time getting one detective to accompany me to the spot where I was held up. I presume they will do nothing for me, as I am a stranger here, and have no friends to urge them to act."

Know No Money. "The men who robbed me were not attired as such ruffians would be expected to be, but wore neat new clothes. They appeared calm and self-possessed, and did their work with surprising dispatch.

"Several people knew I had the $4,000, as I had been bargaining for a home and had stated in the presence of people in local real estate offices that I had sufficient money to make the purchase. I may have dashed my roll, too, although I hardly think I did. I have often thought that it was foolish to carry so much money with me, and had intended depositing it in some bank."

Swelund worked for years in the mills of the St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Company at Tacoma, where he drew a large salary as a mechanic. By dint of hard labor and great economy he managed to lay by a portion of his earnings. Swelund had negotiated with the real estate firm of Davidson, Ward & Co., having offices at the Chamber of Commerce Building. It was of this firm that he was to purchase a tract through me on the East Side. All arrangements were made, and we expected to consummate the deal yesterday. However, last night the young man appeared and informed me that he had been robbed by highwaymen and would not, therefore, be able to make the contemplated purchase. Of course I sympathized with him in his misfortune, and told him I was sorry that he had lost his money, but that the deal could not be made. That is all I know about the case."

All members of the firm expressed themselves as being much surprised at the action of the police in refusing to assist as much as make a thorough investigation of Swelund's story.

"Supposing the story was false," said

LEVE, JUNK MAN, BEFORE COURT SCARCITY CAUSES MEATS TO ADVANCE

Witnesses Testify Defendant Purchased Stolen Goods Knowingly.

J. Leve, the Davis-street junk dealer, was brought before Municipal Judge Hogue this morning on the charge of willfully and knowingly buying stolen property. He entered a plea of not guilty, and the testimony of Arthur Frail and Harry Thompson was taken, after which the hearing was continued until tomorrow.

Arthur Frail and Harry Thompson testified that they had sold to Leve the copper wire recently stolen by them from the warehouse of the Oregon Water Power & Railway Company, having entered into an agreement with him previously. Both testified positively, and did not waver under cross-examination, that Leve told them to bring anything they could find, and he would buy it. Both stated under oath that Leve told them he would protect them from the police, but that he finally, after getting a large quantity of the wire at 8 cents per pound, notified the police that he found it from the boys. It was only after the police had inquired of him relative to the matter, however, that he gave the information.

Frail and Thompson also testified that Leve paid an expressman to haul the copper wire from the warehouse to his store. Both boys admit having stolen the wire, and this morning they waived their preliminary hearing.

WANT NEW GUNS FOR BATTERY A

Military Board Will Make Request of War Department.

It has been decided by the Military Board of the Oregon National Guard to recommend to the War Department that, owing to the increased membership necessary for Battery A, two additional breech-loading guns be furnished. These guns to be 3.2 inch breech-loading, of the latest model, similar to the two already in use by the battery. The guns are to be complete with caissons, limbers and harness. In the event the request for the guns is granted, the two Gatling guns, now in use by the battery, will be turned over to a special company of infantry.

The new guns will require 50 additional men and 24 additional horses to handle. This will increase the battery enrollment to a regular four-gun battery. At present the battery consists of 60 men and 24 horses. The horses are not the property of the state, but are hired for special occasions.

one, "the police could not know it without first ascertaining the facts through an investigation. If after that had been done the young man's story had been proved false, they would have been the first to the police to do so. Their action in this case is a disgrace to the city."

Beef and Pork Arrivals Too Small for Demand

Eggs Coming in Faster and Prices
Are Again Down—Cigar
Prices to Rise.

The fresh meat situation is showing added firmness today and prices on beef and pork are advanced slightly on account of lighter receipts and a heavier demand. Both bulls and cows are scarce, very little of this stock appearing in the markets to meet all demands at 3 cents a pound. Other fishes are unchanged in either price or tone.

Plenty of California Salmon. About two tons of California salmon arrived from Sacramento this morning and there is now plenty of stock in the markets to meet all demands at 3 cents a pound. Other fishes are unchanged in either price or tone.

The California steamer will arrive this evening from San Francisco, bringing her ordinary cargo of fresh vegetables, of which the market is bare at present. Business in the fruit line is quiet on account of the colder weather. A car of new cabbage from Los Angeles and a car of oranges are due this evening.

Cigars Will Advance. The American Cigar Company has announced that beginning with May 1 the price of Cremo cigars will be advanced $1 per 1,000, making the new quotation $35. The deal on Battle Axe tobacco by which dealers will be given one pound free with each 12 pounds purchased, will be declared off April 15.

Meat Stronger. Prices on all millstut products are quoted stronger today with the demand more active. Hay is quoted firm at highest quotations, and some advances are expected throughout the feed market.

Eggs Too Plentiful. Receipts of Oregon eggs were enormous today, and the stock is accumulating very fast on account of the poor demand caused by the too high quotations. As a result of today's weakness, egg prices are going downward, and a large break is expected tomorrow. One of the large shippers from up the valley is in town trying to dispose of his stock to retailers, but he was not received as he evidently expected. Under these conditions it is expected that a large slash will be made in egg prices tomorrow. Today's quotations range from 16 to 17 cents per dozen, and there have been no sales reported at even these figures.

Poultry by the Pound. It will be noticed that the quotations on poultry in today's Journal are made by the pound basis. The old way of quoting the stock by the dozen has proven unsatisfactory, and is being dropped by the leading commission men of the city. There is so much difference in the weight of chickens that farmers receive better pay when the stock is quoted on the pound basis. Poultry is in heavy receipt and prices are down with the lighter demand.

Packed Meats to Advance. There is every indication to prove that the prices on both the local and Eastern brands of packed meats and lard will soon be materially advanced. The market continues to climb throughout the country.

Local trade for flour is excellent, but the demand from the Orient has subsided. Today's quotations, as revised, are as follows:
