FOUND OFFICER PUFFING CIGAR

Startling Discovery Made by General Beebe.

He Saw Policeman Comfortably Seated, Smoking and Conversing

To the Police Committee of the Executive Board this morning, General Charles F. Beebe told a story of having met at 1 o'clock this morning a patrolman who apparently thought he was fully discharging his duties when he sat in a cigar store and conversed with the proprietor of the place.

The General had been to Vancouver to attend the reception of General Funston, and he was late in returning home. He stopped at the cigar store to purchase a weed. There he saw a policeman sitting in a chair, puffing a cigar and taking life with the ease of a man who had nothing to do but look happy.

"When I saw him I stared in amazement," said the General. "I asked him if he was on duty, and he told me he was. His reply was astonishing to me, but he sat there as comfortably as if his neglect was of nightly occurrence."

"What was his number?" asked Chief Hunt, drawing out his notebook in a business-like way.

"We had better keep that secret until we are able to make an investigation," replied the General.

"The offense is serious," said the Chief. "However, it is not nearly so serious as a breach of discipline that came to my attention a few days ago. A man had been robbed of a diamond and a watch by two thieves. The officer was told about the crime. His plain duty was to arrest those men, but he did not do it, for the reason that the man who was robbed had refused to make a complaint."

"And the robbers escaped?" inquired Commissioner Sichel.

"No, they did not. We got them a couple of days later. The policeman's excuse was that the man would not prosecute. Now, I will make charges against that policeman, and he should be prosecuted before this committee."

The officer who is to be prosecuted is Patrolman Nelson. One of the thieves arrested is Hartney, who is now in jail. The committee does not believe Nelson willfully neglected to make the arrests, but that he simply had no conception of the nature of his duties.

A complaint against Patrolman Axel Walsh was referred to Chief Hunt for investigation. This is the second that has been filed against this officer, who is stationed at the Union Depot, and who is accused of having used unnecessary violence in ejecting people from the station. The commissioners, the Mayor and Chief Hunt thought Walsh might have employed too much muscle in handling people, but they recognized the fact that his duties require a great deal of vigorous exercise, as many of the hack drivers cause the policeman more or less trouble, and sneathieves gather around the station at train time. A complaint was also made against Patrolman Quinton, whom workmen say overstepped his authority during the strike trouble at the Weinhard Building. Chief Hunt admitted that Quinton had gone beyond a patrolman's rights, but added that the officer had simply misconstrued his orders.

The resignation of Patrolman H. A. Parker was accepted and a recommendation was made to the Executive Board that ex-Patrolman Dan Connors be appointed to succeed him.

The investigation of the case of Patrolman Johnson, who knocked a man down in a saloon for disorderly conduct and then failed to place him under arrest, was laid over for the time being. Johnson has been suspended.

"Chick" Houghton Falls by Wayside but Escapes Arrest.

"Chick" Houghton two weeks ago received a sentence of eight years in the penitentiary for robbing a stranger in a saloon on First street. Houghton's father, who is blind, came to his boy's aid, and by earnest work on the part of legal talent, retained by him, a new trial was granted in the State Circuit Court. The young man was released one week ago. He enjoyed his freedom only two days when he again forfeited the respect of his friends, and the heartfelt well-wishes of his aged parents.

Saturday evening the young man entered Ben Selling's clothing store and asked to be shown neckwear. A salesman waited on the customer and sold him a tie valued at 50 cents. While waiting for the purchase, Houghton is said to have deftly removed the box of neck apparel and purloined a tie valued at 50 cents. A. W. Rahlas, employed by Mr. Selling, and who is acquainted with Houghton, observed the action, and hastening to Houghton's side, asked the culprit to disgorge. Houghton at first denied all knowledge of the missing goods and was in a humor to be ugly.

At last Houghton said he wanted no trouble and produced from a coat pocket the article he had stolen.

Mr. Rahlas said this morning in discussing the matter: "I have known Houghton for quite a long time. I was acquainted with him when he was considered a promising youth. He attended armory meetings and was regarded as a good fellow. I understand that evil companions have been his ruin."

Houghton's case appears to be a particularly sad one. The elder Houghton is blind, and the little property he has acquired is needed for the support of his wife and himself. Notwithstanding the wants of the aged couple, they have gone so far as to mortgage their home in order to help their son out of the difficulty he is now in. The police were notified, but have not been asked to arrest Houghton for his last violation of law.

MARSHALL SAYS CHARGE IS FALSE

Accused Fisheries Deputy Entered Denial.

Declares Allegations Were Made by Men Who Tried to Bribe Him.

(Journal Special Service.) ASTORIA, April 15.—On last Monday a sensational story was printed here and at Portland to the effect that evidence had been adduced which reflected seriously on the honesty of Water Bailiff Marshall, a deputy in the Oregon fisheries department. It was charged that Marshall, during the closed fishing season, had offered to permit fishermen to fish unmolested on condition that they pay to him each the sum of $5. He was said to have approached several fishermen with his proposal, and it was told that the fishermen spurned the overtures. Marshall was said to have been very persistent, and the story has been accepted as true. Marshall arrived in the city late last night, having returned from a trip along the river with Deputy Fish Commissioner Burton of Washington. Mr. Marshall was seen by the representative of The Journal with reference to the report that he had been dishonestly conducting the affairs of his position, and he denied the story in every particular.

"The statement that I offered to allow fishermen to fish during the closed season is wholly untrue," said he. "I saw an Astoria newspaper last night that contained the charge which has been made against me. There is absolutely no truth in it."

"Several times of late I have been approached by fishermen who have offered to pay me various sums of money if I would allow them to fish prior to the opening of the season. I rejected the offers and am satisfied that the story which has since appeared came from the men who made the unsuccessful effort to bribe me."

nected with the fisheries department of Washington says that there is plenty of opportunity for deputies to engage in crooked work. He intimated in conversation with a reporter that handsome sums would be paid by employers of fishermen. He further stated that the greatest menace to successful enforcement of the closed fishing season law was a large Portland market, which encourages men to supply it with fish.

LOCOMOTIVES FOR O. R. & N.

LA GRANDE, April 14.—The O. R. & N. Company continues to increase and strengthen its rolling stock and motive power. There have arrived here three more new engines for that company. Two of them, Nos. 319 and 311, are big freight engines of the compound type. The third engine, No. 27, is a simple, and is to be used for switching purposes. They came disconnected and will be set up in the shops at La Grande. The freight engines will go into service in this district and the switch engine will be sent to the Umatilla yards.
