THEATRICAL OFFERINGS

Stuart's Last Week

At the Baker Theatre Ralph Stuart and company on the occasion of their last week at that house are presenting "The Virginian," a piece made famous some three years ago by the late Frank Mayo. Mr. Stuart is cast in the original character of Van and is meeting with much success in the part. The remainder of the company do justice to their respective roles and the play in itself is a fit one for the closing week of an organization that has more than pleased Portland theatre-goers for the past eight weeks.

Opening of The Empire.

The Empire Theatre's initial performnce last evening brought out a crowd that filled every seat in the house. Rain was falling during the entire evening, but this did not tend to keep away the was a success in every way, and from the time the curtain raised until dropped at the end of the final number enthusiasm and applause was not lacking from the large audience. A number the leading people of the city were in attendance, including Mayor Williams and Senator Mitchell and their families The actors on the bills demonstrated their abilities as artists, and if The Empire continues to place such talent bethe public its success is assured. Manager George L. Baker announced that, on Tuesday afternoon, June 23, at The Marquam Grand, a monster benefit would be given for the purpose of aiding the Heppner sufferers. The Baker Theatres, Shields' playhouses and The Marquam people will join in making the Shields' Big Program.

An excellent program has Mr. Shields his vaudeville entertainments given at Cordray's this week. A bigger bill has not been put on in Portland for many a month, and many say not more acceptable one. The human flag is among the favor winners, and so far as can be ascertained by viewing the show it is very nearly one of the main fea-Of the other nine acts on the bill there are few criticisms to make as all the numbers are of diversified character and one might say a show distinctly their own. Beginning next Sunday night Shields' Park will open at Thirteenth and Washington streets and then for a whole summer's full of firstclass vaudeville in the open air, There are matinees running every day

Mary Mannering.

Mary Mannering added to her list of admirers everybody who was fortunate to be at the Marquam iast night and witness her "Stubborn Geraldine." Personally she was all that could be de sired. In mannerisms, voice, art culture and a charmingness wherewithal. Not a situation in the well-written play, but what had warmth. Not a gelid characteristic was discernible, and what more can a playgoer ask?

Returning to the actress who has so fair a reputation it must be told how lars and cuffs. Steam-heated mangles perfectly she assumes the sweetheart, are suitable for ironing sheets, towels, and how blameless is the stage lover who forgets all but her. Said a dress Don't be misled by any one suit bedecked man to a friend, between acts, "so far as prettiness, voice and form. has a notable reputation and could do in the show, and as Vi Thompson, the girl from Buste, Montana, she keeps talking all the time with an effort be funny in polite slang. Now this would be all right of Miss Thompson would study a little more elecution in her part. Her voice sometimes twice to a sentence, and always once, runs up to a squeak. It grows tiresome and one can say it does not. The limit. however, in squeaks is reached by Mar ion Gardiner who tries to do Mrs. Math ewson. She is an unabridged edition of Miss Archer and it is believed they both conceived the idea that a raising inflection into the high C's, D's, E's, F's and G's were the proper things, both got off wrong, with Miss Gardiner much to the bad. Miss Mannering is around and should have it cut out.

As to the play, nothing can be said except that it is by Clyde Fitch and that it is smooth, interesting and very literate. One rather dull action occurs 'n the third act when the women all go card plating. the 20 minutes devoted to this feature might be used to better advantage. Five minutes of this scene would be sufficient at most; beyond that the audience gets figity as it did last night.
