STRAWBERRIES ON WANE. The Oregon strawberry season is on the wane and this week will ctically close the local season

practically close the local for the first crop. Higher prices are expected within a few days. The 1903 strawberry season in this state is coming to a swift close, the yield this season being about one-half of normal years. A large amount of extra plants were set out this year, but even with this amount the grand total will not average over a half crop. Steelhead Salmon Receipts Heavy. The receipts of Steelhead salmon from the Lower Columbia are growing larger each day and now the arrivals in this city will amount to about two tons each be resumed within a few days. Kalibut Migher with Smaller Catch. Halibut quotations were advanced cent today on account of the reported smaller catch. The price of haliout has been so small during the past few years that a large number of fishermen who formerly engaged in that line have given up the business altogether as they can now earn more money by engaging in other lines of trade For several years the quotations on haltbut have been so low that when a vessel crrived on the Sound about all the fishermen could obtain for their catches was from 1 to 11/2 cents a pound, and g1 50 a consequence boatload after boatload of halibut was dumped into the Sound and the fishermen quit the busi-

The egg arrivals in this city during the season, glthough quite liberal, have not nearly been up to the unusual depand now prevailing—nor have the register to liberal at any part of the spring or summer. During the carly part of the season when eggs usually arrive in too great a supply and many hundreds of cases are rushed into the cold-storage institutions, the receipts in this market during the current year were comparatively small and rent year were comparatively small and the prices prevailing were too high to admit of very much stock being held over for winter's use. A large number of the dealers, finding the usual large stocks of winter's eggs short, made heavy purchases in the East, and as a consequence the people of Oregon will have to be content to a very large extent to eat outside eggs during the wholesale district and the markets are completely glutted with stocks. The shad, 3c; silver smelt, 5c fb. larger sizes of springs are, however, in fair demand at prevailing quotations. Good poultry stock is being sought for.

Asparagus Season Is Ending. The asparagus season is fast coming to a close in this state and receipts are constantly on the decrease. The stock now arriving is not of the very best grade, most of the receipts being tough and unattractive. This year's yield of grass on the entire Coast has been smaller than usual and the canneries have experienced considerable difficulty obtaining sufficient supplies to run their plants on full time. Canned goods prices are expected to shortly show an advance. No Orders for Mops.

The hop situation is becoming more the dealers say that they can purchase all the supplies they want from members of the association at 20 cents a pound, but as they have no orders for stocks at present they are consequently not doing any business. On the other hand, the members of the combine say that all their holdings will remain firm and will not be disposed of under the asked-for 25-cent market. The association's men are confident and are suspected of having some offers at the

WHEAT MARKETS ACTIVE---STRONG

Chicago Pit Shows Cash Wheat Continuing to Lead-Foreign Marts Are Lagging.

Corn Prices Are Firmer and Higher, Due Somewhatt o Sympathy With Other Grain -Provisions Are Lower.

Special Permission of Bolton, de Ruyter & Co.) CHICAGO, June 24.-Logan & Bryan advise:

The wheat market was again active and strong and cash wheat and nearby futures continue to lead. The foreign markets are still indifferent and lagging. There is, however, a little export business. They have not yet made up their ness. minds that our crop, instead of being a recordbreaker, will be a moderate crop-The Northwest is still without relief in the way of rain. The weekly Government report shows that 16 counties in Dakota and Minnesota need rain. There is an increasing speculative interest and the market is broadening under existing conditions. Our feeling still is that we are tending toward high prices and that it should be bought on weak spots. At the present rate of consumption the world' needs a big wheat crop and it seems pretty certain that it will get one much below that of last year. large speculative interest with small could easily make a runaway #### market. Corn Firm and Higher.

The corn market is firm and higher We are inclined to think the strength came partly from sympathy with wheat but temperatures in the corn belt keep somewhat below normal and with the small stocks and the liberal speculative interest there is not much selling pressure. The acreage is somewhat reduced, but in the main the outlook is an improving one and there is plenty of good weather for the corn crop to attain a promising outlook.

Manipulation in Oats.

Receipts of oats are fairly liberal and the weather is favorable for the crop. which shows improvement. There is probably more or less manipulation in the July, which helps to support the price. We hardly feel like advising purchase. Hogs Heavy and Lower.

The receipts of hogs at the primary tarket was 12,200, against 53,000 last The quality is very much better than last year. The market was heavy and lower. Packing interests are still suporting prices and the fear of it prevents any short selling. The outlook seems to us lower.

The same conditions pre-vail in oats except that the oat crop is doing well. The price of both oats and corn is high and with favorable weather we are rather inclined to feel that they are high enough. Provisions continue to sag. We see nothing to make higher prices.

COLLINS CONTROLS OATS

CHICAGO, June 24 .- The oat gossip is that the July holding is controlled by Collins, the Illinois operator who was so closely identified with Phillips for some years. He has at different times headed in the market a group of Illinois operators. The July line is evi-dently held largely through Weare. The cash interests here are willing to sell the July moderately. ### FIXING THE RESPONSIBILIT for the Death of Little Boy. The damage suit of Frederick Macdonald, administrator of the estate of Maurice R. Macdonald, deccased, vs. Drake C. O'Reilly and the C. J. Cook Company, is on trial today in Judge Frazer's court.

It is charged that Maurice R. Macdonald, the 4-year-old son of the plaintiff, was crushed to death beneath a pile of poles on the 19th of last March. The timbers were piled at Tenth and Irving streets to be used by the C. J. Cook Company in erecting a warehouse. It is claimed that the poles were not properly blocked and that through the care lessness of the defendants they were allowed to roll upon the child, causing his death. The defense is that the timers were properly secured, but that children at play upon the pile caused the timbers to roll; and further, that the Macdonalds had been repeatedly warned to keep their child away from the place, and that the little boy himself had been ordered by the workmen upon several occasions to stay away.
