

OWN BLOOD WAS BLINDING THEM

Brief Story of the Fierce Battle at Ciudad-Bolivar Told--Dead Bodies Lay in Broiling Sun This Morning.

(Journal Special Service.)
NEW YORK, July 22.—A Caracas dispatch received this morning says that nearly 400 lives were lost at the battle of Ciudad-Bolivar in Venezuela last night. Minister Hernandez said today that he believed the capture of the city would practically be the end of the revolution, and that it would be but a short time before peace was permanently restored.

The dispatch continued by saying that so fierce was the fighting last night that men were blinded by their own blood. The fight at the custom house, which began at 9 o'clock in the morning, was of 12 hours' duration, and it was not until after dark that the place was taken. The appearance of the city this morning is one of carnage and until after 9 o'clock dead bodies lay upon the streets in the broiling sun.

LOCAL HOLDUPS ON THE SOUND

"Yegg" men, who are roaming about the country leaving a wake of crime. They are experienced in their line of work, absolutely reckless and prompt to take the life of anyone that interferes with their plans of proceeding or is slow in obeying orders. Southern California has recently been the scene of a series of bold robberies and in several instances passengers who resisted were shot without hesitation. In most of the cases three men operated, and from imperfect descriptions in a general way answer those of the men who, by their lawlessness, are now active in the Northwest. The "Yegg" men travel about the country as tramps and hoboes, living on foot stoves or begged and sleeping around camp fires and haystacks rather than stopping at the cheap lodging houses and eating bad meals and free lunches. They keep themselves free from alliances with other criminals, are secretive as to their movements and make but few friends among other crooks. They are continually on the lookout for opportunities to steal where the danger to themselves is not great, but at times get bold and take big chances to secure plunder. After planning and carrying out a robbery they, as a rule, take to the open country away from the railroads, and posing as farm laborers, seek about until the efforts of the officers have relaxed in their investigations.

The Men Shot.

The man shot in Seattle was William Martin, a longshoreman. The bullet struck him over the left eye and plowed a furrow along his forehead. The wound was not dangerous, but bled freely through the severing of some small arteries. Fred Day, the man shot in this city, during the holdup, for refusing to hold up his hands when ordered, was dismissed this morning from the hospital. His wound was at first considered fatal, but Day made a remarkable rally and is now on the road to recovery. His wound was almost identical to the one which caused the death of President McKinley.

Police Following Clues.

The police are still following the clues and facts in regard to the hold-up published in the Journal. More than a week has passed and no circular has been issued outside of the notice of a reward. They expect in the next few days to issue a poster giving an accurate description of the jewelry lost and a description of the men, which is to be sent broadcast. The detectives in the employ of the street railway company are still vigorously prosecuting their investigation and will continue until they show beyond the shadow of a doubt that

NERVES GAVE WAY— PE-RU-NA CURED

Mrs. X. Schneider, 2400 Thirty-seventh Place, Chicago, Ill., writes:
"After taking several remedies without result, I began in January, 1902, to take your valuable remedy, Peru-na. I was a complete wreck. Had palpitation of the heart, cold hands and feet, female weakness, no appetite, trembling, sinking feeling nearly all the time. You said I was suffering with systemic catarrh, and I believe that I received your help in the nick of time. I followed your directions carefully and can say to-day that I am well again. I cannot thank you enough for my cure. I will always be your debtor. I have already recommended Peru-na to my friends and neighbors and they all praise it. I wish that all suffering women would try it. I testify this according to the truth."—Mrs. X. Schneider.

Mrs. Fanny Klavatscher, of Summitville, N. Y., writes as follows:
"For three months I suffered with pain in the back and in the region of the kidneys, and a dull, pressing sensation in the abdomen, and other symptoms of pelvic catarrh. But after taking two bottles of Peru-na I am entirely well, better than I ever was."—Mrs. Fanny Klavatscher.

CONFERENCE OVER THE CURRENCY BILL

Senators Platt and Cannon Met with President Roosevelt This Morning.

(Journal Special Service.)
OYSTER BAY, July 22.—President Roosevelt received many visitors today, including Senators Platt and Cannon, Governor Yates of Illinois, Charlesagne Tower, Henry Frick, Lauterbach of New York, and former Senator Turner of Washington. It is believed that Platt and Cannon conferred with the President regarding the extra session and in reference to the currency bill. Frick had also been summoned on this account. Pinchot, head of the Forestry Bureau and five fellow workers, were also in conference with the President this morning.

Former Senator Turner's visit is in connection with the Alaskan boundary, he being a member of the committee which is to meet at London in September. Roosevelt expects to leave tomorrow for a two days' visit to his uncle, Robert Roosevelt, on the south side of the island.

CAPT. HOOGHKIRK IS MODEST HERO

First-Officer of Steamer Iralda Makes a Gallant Rescue of Drowning Man at Hoffman's Landing Yesterday.

Saves Andrew H. Hill, Stunned by a Severe Fall, from Going to a Watery Grave in the Columbia River.

Capt. Charles F. Hooghkirk, who has charge of the trim little boat Iralda, plying between Rainier and Portland, is the modest hero in a life-saving episode which occurred at Hoffman's Landing, three miles above Kalama, Wash., on the Columbia River, yesterday morning.

Andrew H. Hill, vice-president of the Kalama Lumber Company, owes his life to the presence of mind and bravery of Captain Hooghkirk. Stunned in his fall into the water, Mr. Hill would undoubtedly have gone to a watery grave had not the pilot rescued him at the risk of his own life.

Mr. Hill had left the lumber company's plant, back in the woods, to take the Iralda for Portland. As he was about to step from the dock onto the steamer's deck, a projecting board caught his foot. Hampered by his valise and other packages he was carrying, Mr. Hill fell headlong, striking his head on the side of the boat. Unconscious he fell into the water between the boat and the dock, and was sinking while a number of men looked on in aghast fear and evidently at a loss to know what course to take.

Captain Hooghkirk to the Rescue.

Captain Hooghkirk stepped out of the pilot house and as he saw the stunned man going beneath the surface he plunged in without waiting to remove even his coat. Mr. Hill's head was about a foot under the water when the brave little captain seized him. He raised the limp form, and in spite of a strong current, he held the lumberman's head above the water and slowly but surely headed for the shore. Finally he reached terra firma under the dock just as the almost-drowned man recovered his senses. A rope was lowered from the dock and Mr. Hill was raised to a place of safety.

In falling Mr. Hill cut a deep gash in his forehead from which he suffered considerable pain. However, he was able to resume his interrupted journey and reached Portland last night. In speaking about the gallant rescue this morning Captain Hooghkirk was extremely modest in referring to the brave part he took in the episode. "I could not see a man drown," he said. "If Mr. Hill had gone down it is likely we could never have found him, and so it was necessary to seize him before he went out of sight. It would have done no good to have thrown him a life preserver or a rope, as he was helpless from the injury. The water must be 20 feet deep at the spot where he fell in and the current is strong. I think I did only my duty which I owe to any one."

After the rescue the boat's crew lowered a boat and recovered Mr. Hill's hat and valise. To say that he is grateful to Captain Hooghkirk and his crew is but putting it mildly.

A YOUNG DUCHESS FLEES FROM COURT

After Only Three Months of Married Life Caroline of Saxe-Weimer Says She Is Tired of all the Perplexities.

BERLIN, July 22.—Caroline, wife of the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimer-Eisenach, has fled, after her marriage of only three months. With her husband she made a sumptuous and triumphal entry into Weimer during the beginning of June.

The young Duchess says she is tired of the tyranny of court etiquette and the criticisms of elderly female courtiers, who charged her with extremely unconventional manners.

GIVE LICENSE OR GOOD REASON

Court Holds that Sailor Boarding House Commission Must Not Discriminate Against Applicants.

Demurrer in Injunction Case Overruled, but Constitutionality of Law Not Passed Upon This Morning.

In the State Circuit Court this morning Judge Sears, Judges Cleland and George assenting, and Judge Frazer dissenting, handed down a decision on the demurrer in the sailor boarding-house injunction case, in which Smith and White Bros. are the plaintiffs and S. M. Meares and the other members of the sailor boarding-house commission are the defendants. By the decision the court overrules the demurrer, but does not pass upon the law creating the commission, the main point of the contest. It holds that the commission cannot arbitrarily refuse an application for a license without giving some legal reason therefor. Constitutional doubts as to the legality of the act are lightly passed over and conceded insufficient to invalidate it.

W. T. Hume, attorney for the plaintiffs, asked and was granted a writ of mandamus, to be returnable at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, a course advised in the court's opinion. The suit of Smith and White Bros. was begun some time ago, and the plaintiffs alleged that by the refusal of the State Commission to grant them a license to operate a sailor boarding-house, they have been deprived of a remunerative business, since early in May. Their attorneys pressed upon the attention of the court that the statute infringed upon several provisions of the organic law, and the contrary view was also earnestly urged.

The Decision.

"After a careful examination of the question, however," the decision continues, "and recognizing some dissimilarity in the bases of our position, we have concluded to resolve any doubts existing concerning the validity of this legislation in favor thereof. Believing that any antagonism between a statute and the organic law must be obviously clear and unmistakable, that the existence of such conflict is not to be lightly assumed, that every presumption and intendment favor the validity of the

BASEBALL MASCOT IN POLICE COURT

Julius Caesar, Browns' Best Rooter, Has His Assault Punished in Court.

It was very amusing to hear Julius Caesar, the aged colored man with a silk hat who enraptures the crowd at the baseball game daily, tell Judge Hogue in the Police Court how the Portland Browns had almost lost their mascot.

The recent rise in the stock of the Browns is attributed to the abilities of Julius in a first-class mascot and recently his friends presented him with a fine "stovepipe" hat which he now wears with dignity and grace.

But following the game Sunday Julius had trouble with T. Ertman and the result was Ertman's arrest on the charge of assault and battery.

"It was just like this, Jidge," explained the mascot. "He hit me for nuthin' at all, sah, and he hit me in the neck. Ef I hadn't struck the telegraph pole I would have struck the ground and man nice new silk hat went sprawling in the street. I tell you he pretty near put the mascot for the Browns out of business."

In spite of his bruised feelings Julius did not want his assault to go to jail. However, Assistant City Attorney Fitzgerald realized that a narrow escape the Browns had had and insisted on pushing the case. The evidence verified the charge and the defendant was fined $15.
