EGGS FROM EAST ARE PLENTIFUL

Front Street Dealer Says Shipped-in Product Is as Good as that Produced in Oregon—Veal Scarce.

Carload of Damaged Bananas Was Received This Morning—A Few Blackberries Are on the Local Market.

"Portland is full of Eastern eggs," said a front street poultry dealer this morning, "and these are every bit as good as the Oregon product."

Receipts of poultry, veal and pork are somewhat light.

Eggs are plentiful and the price is in the neighborhood of 21 cents. Veal remains unchanged.

Old hens are in better demand than Spring chickens at the present time.

A car load of bananas was received this morning but the fruit was in such a damaged condition that the commission men are not quoting the shipment.

The prices remain unchanged.

Despite the threatening weather the demand for lemons remains brisk, although no advance in local quotations has been made.

Blackberries Coming.
A few blackberries are beginning to make their appearance at $1.75 to $2 per box.

Some Oregon tomatoes are now being sold, the first for the season, with no change from the price asked for the California variety.

Cucumbers are selling at from 65 cents to $1 per box. A fine stock of Oregon melons is on hand, although the product is small. No Oregon melons have yet made their appearance.

Cucumbers Plentiful.
Cucumbers are becoming plentiful and can be obtained at 75 cents per box. The quality is excellent.

Wholesale dealers in canned and preserved goods report a lively market, but no changes. Canned corn, the actions of which lately have been quite lively, has settled into a dormant state from which it is expected to spring at almost any time.

Local market prices as revised by The Journal today are as follows:
