

BOY ADMITS HE FIRED BOATHOUSE

Samuel Lind, 16 Years Old, Confessed to Police This Morning and Is Now in the City Jail.

Did It "Just for Fun"—Seven Others Are Implicated—Lad's Father Brought Him to the Authorities.

Samuel Lind, the 16-year-old son of an Albina saloonkeeper, confessed this morning that he had set fire to a houseboat on the bank of the Willamette River at the foot of East Ash street a week ago last Tuesday.

The houseboat which Lind fired was almost entirely destroyed. It was only by hard work that the firemen kept the fire from spreading to the adjacent elevated roadway.

Following the blaze District Chief Lee Holden began an investigation. He was told by several small boys that they had seen an Albina boy climb through a window and fire the coverings on a bed in the house with a lighted candle.

When Lind appeared in Chief of Police Hign's office with his father this morning he made a full confession. As he implicated several other boys, the detectives are holding him, hoping to find the others.

Apparently indifferent to the seriousness of the accusation against him, and proud of what he had done, the boy admitted that he had started the fire "just for fun."

With seven other boys, he said, he was playing in the scowhouse, having climbed through a window while the occupant, a bachelor, was away at his work. This was during the early afternoon. Some one proposed in a spirit of bravado that the shack be set afire, and Lind acquiesced in the proposition.

Securing a candle, he placed it in the bed, setting the clothes ablaze. The other lads, he says, allowed the drippings from the candle to fall on the floor. Covering these with blankets, the grease was then ignited until several fires had been started in the interior of the room. Then they made their escape.

Not Whipped—Says He Won't Be. "We did it just for fun," he confessed to the Journal reporter. "The old man, when he heard of it, brought me up here to see Detective Show, but I'm not the only one to blame. The other boys with me were just as bad."

"Hasn't your father whipped you for this?" was asked. "No, sir—e, and he won't, either. He ain't big enough to do it, and I'll run away from home if he does anything to me. I ain't sorry, either, for I showed them what an Albina boy can do."

"That is the only fire I ever started, and I did not do anything else. We had lots of fun out of it. I don't know what they will do to me."

Firebug Takes a Holiday. It is evident that the firebug who caused so much worry and fear the first part of the week is either taking a rest or has been frightened by the publicity given to his movements.

Today the police confessed that they were as far away from his trail as ever. While they have good descriptions of the man who started the fire at the Exposition Building and the Hesperian boarding-house last Tuesday night, they have not found any one whom the description fits.

In all parts of the city last night people were on the lookout for the incendiary.

There was one fire last night, but it was accidentally set by small boys playing with matches in a hayfield on Knott street, near Williams avenue, in Upper Albina. A crowd of small boys had been playing in the open space, when the flames were seen to shoot suddenly from one of the haystacks. Engine Company No. 8, but a short distance away, was called and the blaze was subdued before it spread.

The residents of Albina, watching for the firebug last night, saw C. A. Flanders acting in a manner that aroused their suspicion. They told Patrolman Teeven, who arrested him at Railroad and Albina avenues. While being held at the box awaiting the arrival of the patrol wagon the prisoner assailed the officer, cutting open his forehead above the right eye. Flanders was arraigned for assault and battery this morning. Flanders is a railroad man, and is not suspected of any connection with the recent incendiary fires.

DECISION TO GO TO BETTER FIGHTER

Referee Graney Says that Award Will Go to Clevelander Man.

(Journal Special Service.) OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 13.—Jeffries arose late this morning and at breakfast in the kitchen at the Hotel Metro-pole. He afterward held a reception on the sidewalk outside. He will do light work at the Reliance Club this afternoon.

ALAMEDA, Cal., Aug. 13.—Corbett's utter lack of nervousness is the main feature of his connection with the battle.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—Referee Graney still insists that the decision will go to the man who has made the better fight at the end of the twentieth round, but that he hopes and expects a knockout. Jeffries' appearance has forced the odds to 10 to 4 in his favor.

To improve shooting in the British navy Gibson Bowles will suggest in the House that relations of commanders shall depend on gunnery results.

MADAM HUMBERT STEADILY LOSING

Mythical Crawford Brothers Becoming More Illusive and the Sensational Trial Progresses.

Romain and Emile d'Aurignac Are Identified as the Persons Who Passed as Famous Millionaires.

(Journal Special Service.) PARIS, Aug. 13.—More excitement was caused at the sensational trial of the Humberts when before a packed courtroom late yesterday afternoon Romain and Emile d'Aurignac were positively identified as the two persons who had passed themselves off as the illustrious Crawford Bros., the alleged American multi-millionaires, on whose strength Mme. Humbert borrowed the nearly $10,000,000 and lived in the most luxurious style.

That the Crawford Bros. never existed, consequently could not have left Mme. Humbert their immense fortune, is now believed by practically every one in France who has followed the interesting case.

For a while there were those who had confidence in the wily madam, and believed that at the trial she would divulge the true story of the strange case. So far she has done nothing but assume an offensive air in court, and by bravado has ruined about all the respect she had among her friends.

EXAMINATIONS ARE CONTINUED TODAY

Teachers Delving Into the Mysteries of Arithmetic and Other Studies.

The second day's examination of Multnomah county teachers today set the pedagogues to delving into the mysteries of written arithmetic, grammar, physiology and theory and practice. The written tests for county certificates will close tomorrow, but the examination for state papers and diplomas will continue through Saturday.

The papers for state diplomas will be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners and the results of their marking will not be known for several weeks. A report on the work of the applicants for county certificates, however, will probably be forthcoming within a few days after the tests are finished.

Yesterday the applicants for positions as teachers in the county were required to prove their knowledge of penmanship, history, orthography and reading.

The program for the state examination yesterday included penmanship, history, spelling, algebra, reading and school law. Today the applicants are struggling with written arithmetic, theory of teaching, grammar, bookkeeping, physics and civil government. The other studies will be:

Friday—Physiology, geography, mental arithmetic, composition, physical geography.

Saturday—Botany, plane geometry, general history, English literature and psychology.

Of the 143 applicants for certificates, 120 take the county examination. There are nine men among the number. All hope to receive positions. By consent of the various school superintendents several from outside counties are taking the local examinations. Their papers will be good in their home counties.

FAIR OFFICERS TO HOLD A CONFERENCE

General Plans for Display at St. Louis to Be Made Tomorrow.

To confer regarding a general plan of action and to make arrangements for the display of Oregon exhibits at the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition Commission for the St. Louis Fair, will meet tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at the Commission headquarters. While this matter has not been fully decided it is thought more than likely that the officials appointed to represent Oregon at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition will retain similar positions at the Lewis and Clark Fair.

Edmund P. Sheldon, in charge of the forestry exhibit at the coming Centennial, will go to Astoria Saturday to obtain some specimens of trees.

The highest point for wages reached before the panic of 1893 has now been regained, or passed, practically, and in all lines of work. Labor unions have increased in strength and number in a distinctly surprising way. It is asserted for example, that in Chicago the list of unions has lengthened from 227 to 500 during the past year, and that the membership has advanced from 120,000 to twice that number in the same period.

TO HASTEN WORK ON NEW BRIDGE

Mayor Calls Conference for Tomorrow to Discuss Railway Franchise Over Morrison-Street Structure.

City Officials Think that a Mutually Agreeable Solution of Present Difficulties Will Be Reached.

Tomorrow Mayor Williams will call a conference of the street committee of the Executive Board and representatives of the City and Suburban Railway Company, to discuss the proposed Morrison-street bridge franchise. The exact hour of the meeting has not been settled.

"But whenever we can get together during the day," said the city's chief executive today, "we will talk over the points at issue, and they are so slight that I think we can come to a mutually agreeable solution of the franchise question."

This conference has been hastened by the arrival of Manager Sweetser of the Street Railway Company, who was out of the city when the proposition first came up for settlement. The recent collapse of a portion of the bridge's East Side approach has also shown that the new bridge should be constructed as soon as possible.

The most important problem to be solved in connection with the bridge is the franchise which the railway company holds over the structure. The city made a proposition to the company in the reply it is accepted, except on two parts. The only obstacle that can arise is where the corporation desires the clause:

"That the contract and specifications for the construction of the proposed bridge provide that in no event shall the operation of street cars be interfered with for a longer period than 30 days."

This question is one entirely of construction, and will be accepted if it is possible of achievement. Several of the local engineers believe such a clause will probably be taken as final.

TRIED TO START REVOLT IN JAIL

Alcoholic Prisoner Advises an Insurrection and Is Sent to a Dungeon.

William Finn, formerly head trusty at the County Jail and always noted for his polite manners, tried to start an insurrection in the jail kitchen yesterday, and as a consequence he is now confined in a dungeon and dieted on bread and water.

Finn, who had been granted all the privileges of the trusties, had managed to get possession of a bottle of alcohol Wednesday afternoon and swallowed all of the fiery liquid. It did not do him any harm, and he was released this morning when he went into the kitchen and advised a general revolt. Jailor Jackson heard the commotion and thinking that there would be a demand for his release, stepped into the kitchen and drew Finn out of the conference by main force.

The conference immediately broke up, but as Finn was still insubordinate and refused to attend to his usual duties he was placed in the kitchen. Finn will complete his sentence tomorrow, so his two days in the dungeon will place him in a proper condition of sobriety for his re-entrance into the outer world.

Finn had been sentenced to serve three months for appropriating valuables contained in the trunk of another man. The trunk had been sent to him by mistake.

LAUNDRY MACHINERY FINALLY PURCHASED

Before Closing the Deal Federated Trades Experienced Trouble.

After protracting delays and almost fruitless efforts, machinery has at last been purchased for the Portland Federated Trades Laundry Company's plant.

This information is given by members of the company who state they have a written contract to the effect that the machinery will arrive here from Chicago not later than September 3. Two weeks after that date they expect the plant will be in operation. A building has already been secured on Seventeenth and Quimby streets.

Two weeks ago G. B. Thomas of the Machinists' Union, a member of the laundry company, was sent to Chicago to procure machinery for the new establishment. He was met in that city by Thomas I. Kidd, a member of the Executive board of the American Federation of Labor, who assisted him in making the purchase.

Just as they were about to close a deal with the Sinclear Laundry supply company, it is said, a telegram from the Portland Laundrymen's Association was handed the manager of the firm, warning him not to sell any machinery to the labor unions of this city if he did not wish to be boycotted.

The manager explained the situation he was in, according to local labor leaders who have received advices from Chicago, and said there was only one thing to be done and that was to call the deal off, which he did.

Not in the least discouraged Messrs. Thomas and Kidd began to look up other firms who could accommodate them, and they finally succeeded. A branch house of a Cincinnati firm had just what they were in search of, and a contract was at once closed.

A strong feeling of opposition exists between the Portland Laundrymen's Association and organized labor, and much trouble is anticipated before the latter's laundry is in full operation.

Surprised Webber. G. Webber, president of the Barbers' Union, was given a pleasant surprise Tuesday night by members of the organization, who presented him with a handsome clock. Mr. Webber was married this week.

Speaks at Pendleton. William Horan, a well-known member of the local Painters' Union, received an invitation yesterday morning to deliver an address at the Labor Day celebration at Pendleton on September 7. Mr. Horan says he will accept.

are seen thousands of natives and white planters who have been made destitute. They are begging for sustenance. The city authorities are taxed to their utmost in caring for their own destitute, but every person is taken within the folds of hospitality.

Villages in Ruins. From the north coast of the island come pitiable tales of suffering. Port Antonio, a prosperous town two days ago, is now devastated. Only six houses remain standing. From the eastern end of the island come the same sad reports.

Whole villages have been wiped out and churches and public buildings are destroyed. The peasantry is homeless and without means of existence. On the western end of the island plantations of bananas are ruined. The orange and coffee crops are also destroyed.

All Is Changed. A veritable garden spot was the Island of Jamaica. Tropical loveliness made life enjoyable for those who toiled and for those who lived in ease. The peasant of the island delighted in making the surroundings of his home attractive. The towns were well laid out, and artificial labor aided nature in its scheme of beauty.

The fearful hurricane, tornado or cyclone—for the awful storm embodied each of these—has transformed the pretty picture into a daub, and today there are probably 10,000 people who do not know where to sleep or where to get enough to eat.

In nearly every street in Japanese cities is a public oven, where for a small fee housewives may have their dinners and suppers cooked for them.

Striking resemblance has been pointed out between the remarkable ancient ruins at Zimbabwe, in Rhodesia, and antiquities in Cornwall, England.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Hospital for Each Bridge. PORTLAND, Or., Aug. 12.—To The Journal.—Regarding the City Engineer's report, published in last night's Journal, I would like to ask why does he not close those unsafe bridges? Every one knows there are here in this city a number of dangerous bridges, that should be closed to travel. The very look of one of those bridges suggests the necessity of an emergency hospital for the "sufferers" should be situated a hospital at the end of every bridge in Portland. Now, has the city or county no authority to order these bridges rebuilt or repaired? If they have no authority, they have no responsibility. Do away with our city and county officials and take their salaries to repair bridges. Better surrender their city charter.

JOHN FLEMING.

Answering C. W. Saunders. The following questions, answers to which are appended, were submitted by C. W. Saunders, of 635 First street: Can the President fall out at will all subject to military duty in the United States? Yes.

Can such service be made five years if he thinks it necessary? No.

Can they be made to serve in or out of any state or states, or out of the United States altogether? Volunteers can be drafted to service anywhere. The national militia cannot be ordered out of the United States unless upon their voluntary request.

Is death the penalty for refusal to serve? No.

As the head of a government, has any one more autocratic, arbitrary power to compel service? Yes, referring to the heads of various foreign governments, particularly Russia and Germany, where a term of military service is required by law.

The Telephone Franchise. To the Editor of The Journal: Last evening representatives of the Electrical Workers' Union and the writer called on the editor of the Oregonian and informed him that 21 of the unions of the city, representing 5,000 voters, 5,000 citizens, the Board of Trade and the Manufacturers' Association have endorsed the application of the Warren E. Thomas telephone franchise now before the Council, and that we would like the fact published.

The editor at once flew into a terrible rage and said he did not want another telephone company, and that the people of Portland, who signed our petitions so far as to say that there were people in Portland who would sign a petition to make the Oregonian share its news service with other papers. In the morning issue of the Oregonian the editor goes into a rambling argument against two telephone systems, which expires in the most glaring light his ignorance of the subject. For his information we will state that there are 5,000 independent telephone companies in the United States, and that there has been fewer failures among them in the past ten years than in the national banks. That, in every city where there are two telephone systems, the rates have been reduced, the service improved and more than double the number of telephones in use. Out of this vast number of companies there have been approximately a dozen that have been sold to the Bell Company, but other than these we challenge the editor to show one single case where there has been a consolidation of companies for private or public use, to control the rates or the business.

Telephone companies are the one exception to combinations in this country. The editor is further worried about additional poles on the street. For this we respectfully call his attention that the old Columbia telephone poles are still on the streets, even though the city charter plainly states that they shall be removed. It is possible that if he was as greatly interested in seeing our laws enforced as he is in protecting the present monopoly, he would be serving the people better.

The editor says there is no need of sympathy with the parties in this business. On this point we agree with him. We are not a charitable institution, and we are not looking for sympathy, but we do expect justice in our rights, and demand to know whether the majority of the people control the legislation of this city or whether the editor of the Oregonian, with his tender heart for monopolies, does.

The public is nearly sold to a man for this telephone franchise. We in turn agree to expend at least $500,000 to put the system underground in the business portion of the city; to install 3,000 telephones before any rental is charged; to give the city a police telephone system; to pay a liberal tax; to put up securities that we will live up to our agreement or to let the city be the trustee of the franchise until we do build, which we agree to start in not less than six months and complete in not more than two years.
