

Incidents of The Journal's Central Oregon Expedition

BY PAUL DELANEY

The story of gathering data for a special edition of a newspaper is often more interesting than the edition itself. The means of obtaining the material for The Journal's Central and Southern Oregon edition, which took two men three months, traveling in a mule wagon, drawn over a sparsely settled country, was fraught with incidents often out of the ordinary.

The vehicle, harness, camping outfit and other equipment were purchased in Portland and shipped over the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company's line to Biggs, where it was transferred to the Columbia Southern railroad and sent to Shaniko.

At Shaniko nearly a week was spent in purchasing a team to make the trip. Horsemen were profuse in their advice to the newspaper men as to the kind of horses to buy for such a journey and the animals recommended by the respective horsemen were always the ones owned by themselves.

One of the interesting features of this ranch is the number of elk and deer that have become practically domesticated of their own accord and taken up at the ranch.

It became a question of broken down horses or a span of mules. Mules were selected. It was a forced selection but a good one. For a long trip across wide stretches of plains and up and down steep mountains the mules proved their adaptability.

When crowded to the last point by the hunters the elk and deer took to the valley. Here they found they were safe. They abandoned their home in the mountains and took up their abode in the valley. Here they reared their young and soon the Alford ranch became a game park as well as a great ranch.

like water fowl, while The Journal wagon bumped up and down over the rocks, a portion of the time, and a portion of the time floating.

The newspaper men stood up on the seat of the vehicle in water to their knees a portion of the time, looking for a good place to leap should the worst come.

But the mules stayed on the "stone bridge" and the opposite shore was reached.

It was afterwards learned that should they have varied two feet to the right or left they would have fallen into a sea of water of unknown depth.

Between Plush and Lakeview, on July 6, the expedition encountered a severe snowstorm. The snow fell to a depth of six inches. This is frequent at this season of the year at this altitude, but the snow disappears so quickly that little damage is done.

Along the journey in the sparsely settled country the mules were kept at safe distances viewing The Journal outfit. Hundreds of them watched it from the hills and boulders by the roadside.

While passing along the lake shores the water fowl sailed about in huge flocks and dotted the surface of the water by the thousands.

The morning after the snowstorm, near Plush, three cougars, or mountain lions, crossed the road in front of the wagon. Two were very large, while the other was only half-grown.

WOULD CLOSE EVERY DANGEROUS BRIDGE

Certain members of the city council are preparing an ordinance which will affect the barricading of every bridge or elevated roadway in the city that is in a dangerous condition.

The ordinance will be introduced this afternoon and a majority of council is in favor of it, say its promoters.

"The statement was made some time since that the council would order the bridges closed tightly. I think a majority is in favor of the proposition," said one of the councilmen.

At the present time there are 26 bridges closed to travel and in several places it has resulted in some inconvenience to traffic, but until a satisfactory arrangement for permanent betterments is made, they will stay closed.

The ordinance will be introduced this afternoon and a majority of council is in favor of it, say its promoters.

GYPSIES ANNOY LOWER ALBINA

A band of gypsies camped in Lower Albina is causing much annoyance to the neighborhood. In the band are about 40 men, women and children, all of them swarthy wanderers, who speak little English.

They are living in the orchard of the old John Bendie place, near the Oregon Railroad & Navigation shops, which has been rented to them for a time. The strangers arrived the first of this week.

Three of the women have secured city licenses to tell fortunes and are plying their occupation with all their might. However, the people of Lower Albina object to their presence.

CHURCH FAIR ENDS IN A ROUGH HOUSE

(Journal Special Service.) San Francisco, Oct. 21.—The rummage sale of the aid society at the Trinity Methodist church in Berkeley came to an exciting evening, when a snarl broke out in the church parlors while intoxicated.

Fisher runs a saloon near the church and for some time has objected to the church crowds that attended the sale and in his opinion, under his business, he is not inclined to have the church members in his saloon.

Fisher made his escape, and though a constable was near the scene and heard the sounds of strife, he did not interfere. Fisher is supposed to have left town after sobering up.

THE LAW'S DEALT A Timely and Pertinent Illustration Drawn from St. Louis Boodle Cases.

From the Baltimore News. The country has been reeling for months with praise of Circuit Attorney Folk for the magnificent work he has been doing in hunting down the hoodlums, great and small—especially great—who had long been robbing the city of St. Louis and the state of its money.

Formerly the chief of police was supposed to issue the permits and then the custom was amended so that the city engineer was held responsible for that duty. There was no proviso, however, which would effect a rigid observance of the law and the heavy bond was provided to compel its observance.

HE'S SIX FEET TWO BUT HE FELT SMALL

"For once in my life I have felt actually small," said Edwin S. Isaacs, a Walla Walla mill man and capitalist, who is in Portland today on his way home from attending the supreme grand lodge of the Odd Fellows, at Baltimore, Md.

Mr. Isaacs is six feet two inches tall, and is built in proportion.

He hereafter whenever any contractor or person desires to use explosives within the city limits he will be compelled to file a bond of $1,000 with the city engineer and also secure from that official a permit which has been prepared.

An ordinance to that effect was passed by the last city council meeting, but City Attorney McKim only yesterday completed the official form of the bond, which is to a certain extent different from the usual style of surety bonds.

This measure is to hold the person using the explosive responsible for any accident that may occur through carelessness and it will have the effect of restricting the indiscriminate use of powder and its attending dangers.

City Engineer Elliott notified several persons this morning of the new ruling and the law will be strictly enforced in the future.

BREAKING DOWN OF ROCK FOR JETTY

The Northwest Construction company has succeeded in increasing its daily shipments of rock for the Columbia river jetty to about 1,600 tons, which is still far short of the requirements of the contract and the promise of the company.

Two additional derricks, making five in all, have been installed at the Rugby quarry. It was stated several days ago that early this week three large blasts would be fired which would bring down an immense quantity of rock and materially aid in the development of the quarry. These blasts have not yet been fired.

T. H. Curtis, president of the Northwest Construction company, is in Portland today, but he declines to give any information as to the progress of the work at Rugby. Such news as is obtained comes from the government engineers.

FROM THE KANSAS CITY JOURNAL. A Negro who attempted to assault a young white woman in this city was tried, sentenced and it now on his way to Jefferson City to serve his term of ten years in the state penitentiary, all within eight days after he committed the crime.

The offense the negro perpetrated was heinous and the evidence of it was convincing, but no more so than many another case in this county where defendants have either escaped punishment altogether or their trials have been so long delayed that the results have been useless as examples to deter the vicious from following their wicked ways.

Why cannot Judge Wofford always be as expeditious in awarding justice as he was last Monday? Evidently the laws are all right, but faults have grown up in the practice. The shrewder the lawyer employed, or the bigger the pull of the criminal, the less likelihood is there of a speedy conviction.

This deplorable condition is so general and of such long standing that the people have begun to look upon it as a necessary evil which must be endured.

CONTRACTORS WITHIN THE CITY LIMITS MUST OBTAIN BOND
