Yattman officiating. The house was handsomely decorated, although the wedding was a very quiet affair, only a few relatives and intimate friends being present.

MEETS DEATH IN A RAGING RIVER

(Journal Special Service.) Cottage Grove, Or., Nov. 12.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday afternoon on the Coast fork a few miles south of this city, in which Charlie Davis lost his life. He was in the employ of the Pacific Timber company and was working with a crew on a boom of logs. The high waters occasioned by the past few days of heavy rains were causing trouble. Davis was out on the logs when a break occurred, and seeing that the logs were getting away from him he tried to avoid being caught and crushed, but in some way made a miscalculation and fell into the water, going under the logs. The body has not been recovered. The dead man leaves a widow and several children, who reside at Black Butte.

Funeral of Mrs. Wallace. Mrs. Eliza J. Wallace, wife of W. L. Wallace, was buried at this place yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace returned to this place about six weeks ago from Tucson, Ariz., where they spent a couple of years for Mrs. Wallace's health, but the climate there did not seem to benefit her much, and as they knew the end was near they returned to their old home that she might be among relatives and friends in her last days.

River on a Rampage. Heavy snows are reported from Bohemia, and together with the almost incessant rain of the past few days the River is on a rampage, with the result that bridges are being washed away and other damages reported from up the valley.

SOME DOUBT ABOUT CALLAHAN'S HOLD UP

(Journal Special Service.) Oregon City, Nov. 12.—No trace has been found of the bandit who held up Louis Callahan, the Mollala farmer, yesterday noon near Oswego, and relieved him of $75. Immediately after the officers here were notified of the reported hold-up and went to the scene, but not a clue had been left behind by the daring desperado. Callahan is a young farmer. His home is on Dicey's Prairie, 20 miles southeast of here, in the Mollala neighborhood. He passed through this city Tuesday with a load of butchered hogs. He was seen here by an acquaintance who admonished him to keep away from the gambling houses and dance halls in Portland. Callahan promised to do so and said as soon as he received the pay for his hogs he expected to put the money in his pocket and come right back home. This man says that Callahan is inclined to "look upon the wine when it is red," and when he has a little too much tanglefoot he is inclined to gamble. These circumstances have given rise to the belief that Callahan was probably not held up after all, at least not on the road home, but that he lost his money at some of the numerous gambling houses in Portland.

Callahan's object in claiming he had been held up is not far to seek. He has a wife at home, and those who are acquainted with her say that Callahan would rather meet a dozen highwaymen than to go back home and tell her that he lost his money gambling. Interesting Story. Callahan's story of the hold-up, is rather interesting. He says he had reached a lonely stretch of road near Oswego with not a house in sight. Suddenly a stranger stepped from the brush and halted him. Not apprehending any trouble he drew up his team. "Hello, pard, it's been a long time since I've shot you," exclaimed the robber, reaching out his hand as if to shake. Callahan stuck out his hand, which was seized by the robber, at the same time producing a long knife with the other hand. "I want your money," said the robber. Callahan demurred and said that he had none. The robber stated that he knew better and jerked Callahan from the wagon, striking at him with his knife, which cut through his overcoat. Callahan begged the robber to desist and told him he would give him his money. Callahan then dug up $75, the proceeds of his sale for the hogs. The bandit then disappeared in the brush. Callahan drove to Oregon City and reported the robbery to the police, who went at once to Oswego. They are of the opinion that Callahan did not tell the truth about the matter and think that he lost his money in Portland.

Gold Storage Company. Articles of incorporation were yesterday filed with the county clerk for the Oregon City Ice & Cold Storage company. The promoters are H. E. Harris, J. H. Tawle, W. J. Caderson and Thomas E. Grant of Portland. The capital stock of the company is $5,000. The business of the company will consist in the manufacture of ice, the transaction of a general cold storage business, the storage of produce and fuel and the purchase and sale of produce and fuel on commission. The ice will be manufactured from the waters of a well recently drilled on Mr. Harris' property here.

Snow Falling. Snow has fallen to a depth of several inches in the foothills of Clackamas county and there has been a much greater fall further back in the mountains. On the trail to the Ogle mines the snow is said to have reached a depth of more than a foot. Apprehension is felt here for the party which started this week with a pack train for the mines. The mines are at an elevation of 8,000 feet and it is believed that the party will encounter many difficulties in getting in. Farmers in the eastern part of the county state that the snow extends much farther down toward the prairie than is usual at this season, and this, they say, is an indication of a severe winter.

A Quiet Wedding. At the residence of Rev. E. S. Bollinger of the Congregational church last evening, Miss T. Eunice Bullock and Mr. David Jones of the West Side were united in matrimony.

The session of yesterday was called to order by County School Supt. C. L. Starr of Polk county. Miss Edyth Houck of the Dallas public school was appointed secretary of the meetings. R. SALEM CLUB ASKS A SPECIAL SESSION

(Journal Special Service.) Salem, Or., Nov. 12.—The Greater Salem Commercial club met last night in annual session and President Thielson, in his annual address, called special attention to the work that has been accomplished by the club since its organization two years ago in fostering the flax industry and the serious condition of producers and shippers in being unable to move the products of the farms, orchards and gardens, stating that the heaviest dealer in potatoes in Marion county had been compelled to cancel all his contracts because he could not secure cars to haul his freight. The club provided for a committee to take this matter up with the Southern Pacific company, and secure, if possible, relief for the shippers.

County Judge Scott was present and discussed the matter of building good roads, and the club decided to assist in every way possible the construction of good roads leading into Salem from every direction, promising financial support to the county court.

Monmouth Alumni Showing Activity. Monmouth, Or., Nov. 12.—John H. McCue, president of the Alumni association of Oregon state normal school, was in this city yesterday. He is expecting to help arrange matters for the alumni here this week. There is a plan that has been presented to the leading members of this committee so far as possible to the effect of placing a president and secretary in each county to keep in touch with the alumni and to better the teaching conditions and make it possible to bring the association together in a large body each year. This plan goes further and is to take part in the program each year by setting aside a day for the Alumni association to take charge of the program and so make it that there will be a drawing card to bring back old classmates outside of the principle of meeting the new graduates. Many of the alumni state that interest can be created in the Alumni association by this method of procedure than by the old one of having a committee handle the matter, as the persons who act as president and secretary will be those actively interested in the school work and who will be in touch with the teachers and graduates over the whole county, and the field will be small enough that it can be handled by personal talk and communication, and the officers in the executive committee will only have to look to these local persons to learn the exact condition in the field.

Senior Class Elects. The senior class held a meeting a short time ago and elected officers for the class. The officers elected are as follows: L. B. Holsinger, president; Constance Wheaton, vice-president; Smith B. Holt, secretary; Fannie Ziegler, treasurer; Bertha Leader, marshal. A Fearful Storm. The windstorm struck this place and did a great deal of damage during the latter part of Tuesday night. The big frame that holds the firebell was turned over, trees were blown down, windows were broken all over town, and the big pipe that stands on the training department of the Oregon state normal school was blown down. This made it impossible to continue training work and the school has been adjourned for at least a week. This affects only the public school department as the normal program is not affected. It is considered that more damage was done than has ever been known by a wind storm in this city.

RAVAGES CAUSED BY THE HIGH WINDS

(Journal Special Service.) Albany, Or., Nov. 12.—The high wind of Tuesday night wrought havoc with fences, barns, windmills and trees in this county. Signs along the business streets of Albany were wrecked and a number of windows were smashed. The greatest damage occurred along the eastern division of the Corvallis & Eastern railroad. Trees along the line were uprooted and trains were unable to reach Detroit yesterday. It is estimated that 60 large fir trees are across the track east of Mill City, and a number of slides were caused by the falling trees. It will require several days to repair the track and reopen communication with the east end. Brakeman R. E. Gedney walked nine miles and carried the mail into Detroit yesterday, as it is impossible at the present time to reach that city by conveyances of any kind.

Also Club Meets. The annual meeting of the Alco club will be held at the clubrooms next Tuesday evening, November 17. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year and the annual banquet will be served. The Alco club is the social and commercial organization of the city and has a large membership.

Heavy Rafts Damage Bridge. The heavy rains of the past week caused the approach on the Santiam railroad bridge between Tallman and Munkers, on the Woodburn - Natron branch of the Southern Pacific, to go out yesterday and the trains on that line are compelled to come into Albany on the Corvallis & Eastern from Shelburn, and go out over the Lebanon road, consequently they are several hours late.

Rose Melville Tomorrow. Miss Rose Melville will appear at the Albany opera house in "Sis Hopkins" on Friday evening. The advance sale of seats has been large and she will be greeted by a packed audience.
