ASSISTANT GENERAL PREIGHT AGENT OF THE MORTHWESTERN ALONG THE PACIFIC-PROSPECT OF FINANCIAL TROUBLE IN HAST

reight agent of the Northwestern lines, arrived in the city this morning of his annual trip of inspection over the lines of the company and the branch offices on the coast and through the Northwest Mr. Seymour has since leaving the Chicertain that no financial trouble will me in the near future.

seemed to be for an early return to fullhanded shifts. All along the coast I have been surprised at the sudden development that is going on in out-of-thely heard of, and the entire north coast is waking up very rapidly

There Is No Car Famine

"No, we can't say we have any especial car famine in the East as vet. though there may be some trouble when

"It's a long way to the coast," said

Mr. Seymour, when asked about the prospect for a coast connection by the Northwestern.

Looks Deep Into Commerce.

While Mr. Seymour is gathering data from the two local offices relative to the entire state and its industries, Coos bay umber trade, timber resources, const trude, eastern shipments, train service, everything and anything relating remotely to the business of a great transcontinental artery is collected, and in turn will be transmitted to the head men of the system. About this phase of his work Mr. Seymour did not speak, but a pretty thorough knowledge of the Oregon railroad situation will be on file in the Chicago headquarters when he and his fellow-officials return from their long journey.
