Items of Local Interest for Busy Journal Readers.

Free tomorrow—Tomorrow evening, between 8 and 9 o'clock, handsome Christmas souvenirs will be given away to all callers at the store of the Eastern Outfitting company, 330 Washington street. These souvenirs will not be cheap, trashy stuff, but things of utility which will go after from any part of Portland. This square-dealing concern has grown in popular favor until its business permeates the entire city. No goods will be sold tomorrow during the presentation of these souvenirs, so that readers need not imagine that there is any scheme of that kind on foot. Indeed, those who know the management would not suspect such anyway. It is just a little act of kindness the store wishes to extend to its many friends and others who may favor it with a call.

Not many Portland people know that the finest woolens made from the product of the fleece are those turned out at Salama's big woolen factory, operated for so many years near the depot in that city. The mill is one of the largest in the country, and its output has favor throughout both the East and West where fine woolens are consumed. The Salama Woolen mill store, at 35-37 Third street, this city, is the sole representative in Portland, and garments bought there will be found of that class that has merit in every thread. C. T. Roberts, the manager, has on display ample evidence of the excellence of Oregon woolen goods. He has a fine stock of goods made from these cloths being among the best sold on the American market. It will pay Portland buyers to look them over.

They actually do the finest collar and cuff work I ever saw," an attaché of this office remarked—and his story is that of all patrons of the Union laundry, Second and Columbia. That steam heated collar and cuff polisher seems to put an extra gloss upon the fabrics. And it does not "yellow" the goods or weaken the fibers. The great wonder is that other laundries do not install one or more of these machines. Possibly the cost is too great.

THE PAIOLA "ROOKIES" TRY TO PLAY VETERANS

Its Exceptional Fitness for a Christmas Gift

There must be a piano in the home, and a love of music, which is quite as common as a piano. Possessing these two things, there is no gift that will give so much pleasure, not only on Christmas, but throughout the year, and for many years—as the Piano.

An instrument by the aid of which any one can play the piano, not merely with technical correctness, but can impart to it his own individuality, his own interpretation. Heretofore, the only obstacle to the universal enjoyment of the piano has been that to those who were not musicians, the piano was a sealed book. It stood mute and expressionless before them and the unexplored delights which the individual rendering of music affords. The Piano has remedied this. Not the slightest technical knowledge of music is necessary to enable the music lover to render any composition, no matter how complicated, in exact accordance with the ideas of the composer or with his own taste. The Piano, as is well known, embodies in perfect form every practical feature of the latest value for phrasing, accentuation and control generally of tempo.

It will thus be seen that while the music depends entirely upon the performer for interpretation, any member of the family can play a tune upon the piano with the aid of a Piano, and that it can bring more pleasure to each one than any other single gift.

Price, $15, easy terms of payment arranged. Eilers Piano House, sole Northwest Agents, No. 351 Washington street, corner Park.

THE CITY OF HOMES.

Portland is rapidly gaining the reputation for fine homes.

Portland is sure to become the "city of fine homes," or the "city of the future." Never in the history of the city of Portland has so many fine homes been erected as this year. Every one modern and strictly up-to-date structures.

As a resident district few people have as yet realized the important position the Hawthorne and Ladd's addition is figuring in the real estate markets of the city.

It is one of the best situated tracts of residence lots in the city, rolling land and tile drainage. Elegant wide graded streets with fine sidewalks. Plenty of city parks. The best graded public school and good churches are accessible to these additions. The streetcar service is such that from any part of these additions one can reach the city in seven minutes, while it can be walked in 25 minutes.

Without exception there have been more fine homes erected on these two additions during the past year than in any other section of the city. No cheaply constructed residences have been erected—only substantial homes, costing from $2,000 to $5,000. Here no lot is allowed to have two houses erected upon it.

People who have heretofore avoided living on the east side are now looking with longing eyes toward Hawthorne and Ladd's addition, and if we mistake not few available lots will be left for sale at the close of 1904.

It is well that homebuilders for pleasant, convenient and agreeable homes investigate this property.

"ROOKIES" TRY TO PLAY VETERANS

Whether 42 men in army uniform were recruits raw and unweaned by drill and affliction, or whether they were veterans of the decimated Thirtieth infantry, was a question that was widely discussed at the union depot this morning.

From the morning California train these blue-clad soldiers alighted and clustered about the baggage room. Hot coffee and rolls, and an occasional can of tomatoes were produced, and breakfast was taken on convenient trucks. The men had no crossed guns on their caps to denote their regiment, their blankets were new and neatly rolled, their uniforms were somewhat worn and no arms of any sort were in evidence. A curious conductor stepped into a crowd of them and asked what regiment they belonged to. A tall private looked over the edge of his tomato can and said:

"We're from the Thirtieth. Ain't many left back there now. Yep, we come from their islands last week. No, I don't think there is goin' to be any more trouble over there. Them niggers is pretty good fellows now."

Another volunteered the information that he was one of the three that escaped from the slaughter of E company and told how he had crawled from under the tent and escaped in the darkness clad only in his modesty.

"Where did you say that happened?" asked the baggage man.

"Down to Samar."

"You there?"

"Yep, me and Bill over there."

"Say," the baggage man looked disgusted, "maybe you fellows all come from the Thirtieth, huh?"

The chorus shouted that most of them did.

"I don't know where you rookies come from, but I do know that you never saw the islands remarked the baggage man as he trudged away his trunk. "I was with the Thirtieth myself."

"Them come from Manila," the sergeant smiled wearily. "Why, them fellows ain't never seen a jungle and not six of their bunch know a Krag from a Springfield. I brought the entire lot from Angel island and they are assigned to the Nineteenth; some of them are goin' to Seattle. Them from the Thirtieth; the Thirtieth, did you say? Oh, hell!"

There were 58 recruits when the party left Oakland and that from under invitations at depot saloons some had fallen by the wayside and only 42 remained. The men were locked in the baggage platform and that only a trusty few could obtain permission even to enter the waiting room.

"You suppose 'vets' would stand that?" queried the sergeant in grievous tones.
