Eugene, Or., Dec 25 .- An attempt was made early this morning to burn two empty dwellings on Riverside lane, four miles below Eugene. A farmer who lives near the houses, which stand close together, happened to be up at 3 o'clock this morning and he noticed a blaze in each house. He awoke a couple of his neighbors and by hard work the fires were extinguished after doing perhaps $100 worth of damage on each house

A lot of tough boys and young men reside in that locality and it is presumed that some of them set the fires Several families in the community are constantly quarreling and having law suits over trivial matters, and it is probable that the houses were set fire through spite. One of them belonged o Charles Knoop and the other to Mr.

The new Tivoll is a plaster molded concern flanked with the remains of an tiquated, bow-windowed lodging houses, The main part of the theatre was once the circular receptacle of the "Battle of Gettysburg," and about the outer walls were attached two queerly constructed two-story dwelling that were, in fact, part of the center framework. Rich in Color.

There is one thing that redeems the new Tivoli and that is the scientific arrangement of its interior accommedations. The fittings are rich in color, if not as substantial as they might be. The theatre has a clear width inside of 124 feet and a depth of from the footlights to the doors in front of 100 feet. The main auditorium can be emptied from two wide doors at either side that are level with the streets and a number of exits are to be found at the right and left rear of the stage. Each floor has a separate foyer and each loge has a separate door from the foyer. The decora-tions are in cream and gold, with a shade of green now and again that is very artistic in its blendings.

It must be confessed that the artist and architect have produced a pretty interior effect at a comparatively small outlay of money. When all the lights are on the place is really delightful to look upon and one cannot realize that the unsubstantiability of the decorations can ever cause them to become tawdry. The first-night audience was welldressed and apparently highly appreci-ative of the new theatre and the play. They applauded the new scenery and prated good naturedly of the furnishings. Only one line of comment was detrimental to the reconstructed home for local Bohemianism and that was that lodging houses that elbow the brilliantly illuminated entrance to the show place are sadly in need of hew coats of paint.
