SAYS LOAN SOCIETY EXACTED USURY

A charge of usury is made in a suit which Julius J. Kuhn began against the Washington Mutual Building & Investment association in the state circuit court yesterday afternoon. Kuhn asks that the association be compelled to release a mortgage upon a house and lot in Elizabeth Irving's addition and to recover an alleged overpayment of $300. He says that in 1892 he borrowed $2,000 from the association through its agent, the late Joseph H. Hawley, payable on or before the expiration of 24 months with interest at 6 per cent, both principal and interest payable monthly. A premium of $ per cent and dues on 20 shares of stock at 65 cents per month were also included. Hawley represented that the association was mutual and cooperative and lent its money to subscribers only, and all the stockholders had the same privileges and shared equally in the dividends and profits. Relying on these statements, Kuhn says that he made payments of $33 a month; a membership fee of $21 and a cancellation fee of $10, making a total of $2,637. He asserts that the representations of Hawley were false; that the association was never a mutual cooperative and loan association; that it was organized for the purpose of allowing certain classes of stockholders usurious and unconscionable rates of interest; that there were several classes of stockholders, each class having privileges and benefits different from the others. He says he paid the principal and 6 per cent interest and $300 additional. He asks that the mortgage be cancelled and the $300 be returned.

SLAP NOT RUM ALL THE "INJUN" GOT

"As a matter of fact, Judge, I'm not, but I'll plead guilty because"—but the voice of Jesse Armstrong, accused of selling whisky to an Indian, suddenly ceased and he sat down without finishing the sentence. It was in the United States district court this morning that Armstrong was arraigned. As he had already served 30 days in the county jail awaiting trial, Judge Bellinger allowed him to go on his own recognizance, remarking: "He has been punished sufficiently."

According to the story of Armstrong, who looks the wood cutter: "I got drunk in Arlington and was just getting ready to leave town. I had a half pint flask of whisky in my pocket and a Injun come up to me and asked for a drink. "I says, says I, 'I'll give you a drink' and I slaps him in the face. Then the marshal run up and arrested me and found the whisky in my pocket. I never done nothing wrong."
