Spokane, Wash., Jan. 12.—The choir of the First Methodist Episcopal church, South, of Spokane has gone on a strike, and as a result the musical portion of the services are badly curtailed. The opposition of Rev. John H. Dills, pastor of the church, and the board of trustees, to the members of the choir attending dances was the cause of the row. Rev. Dills' side of the story is as follows:

He presumed that it would be easy to fool the public, and to create the impression that he was acting only from the most disinterested motives. The only thing necessary was to have the matter presented in the right light, and as the medium to accomplish this end he naturally selected the afternoon edition of the Oregonian, which is always the confidant of his plans when he is ranging the country in pursuit of elusive criminals and always the sympathise in his failures.

Oregonian, Jr., to the Rescue.

The Oregonian, Jr., promptly published in its editorial columns a vehement demand that the county board should comply with the sheriff's request for new steel cells, and denounced the board in unmeasured terms for the present condition of the jail. It is of ostrich in his political maneuvers, and Hi, at the suggestion of Yuan-Shi-Kai, the board in unmeasured terms for the present condition of the jail. It is of course notorious that the sheriff is the legal custodian of the jail and it is equally notorious that he makes exorbitant profits from the feeding of the prisoners entrusted to his keeping so that he could easily employ additional jailers, but these facts received no notice from the Telegram. Such is the story that is told about the court house concerning the sheriff's latest political move. His petition is before the county board and has not yet been acted upon. While it is impossible to forecast the action that the poard will take, it seems safe to say that it will not be the means of pulling Sheriff Storey's chestnuts out of the
