

PRESIDENT'S PLAN FOR SOLDIERS' HOME

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF LADIES OF GRAND ARMY OF REPUBLIC WOULD BUILD COTTAGES INSTEAD OF LARGE BUILDINGS—ASKS HELP OF OREGON LADIES.

The plan of Mrs. Bellinda S. Bailey, national president of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, for the establishment of a home for indigent veterans of the war of the rebellion, is not for a big building but a series of little cottages, where the aged soldier can live with his wife and be cared for by her.

"For," said Mrs. Bailey, who is in Portland en route to Indianapolis, Ind., "as a rule when an old soldier is admitted to the soldiers' home, his wife, if she is unable to support herself, is taken to the almshouse. My visit to Oregon circles is to inspect the lodges and incidentally to push forward the plan for a new home. At present I have but $150 in this fund, but expect to enlist the women of Oregon and Washington, along with those of California, in the cause."

Mrs. Bailey resides in San Francisco and during her trip to Portland stopped at Roseburg, Eugene and Salem, where circles of the order exist. She will address the local circle this evening and will go to Seattle tomorrow.

The Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic is comparatively a new organization on the coast although it has been in existence since 1888. It is often confused with the Woman's Relief corps, the auxiliary of the G. A. R., but is a separate organization and is in no way connected with the Grand Army, except that veterans of the rebellion are admitted as associate members, and all members must be lineal descendants of soldiers, sailors or marines who fought during the civil war.

"This organization," said Mrs. Bailey, "will live when the G. A. R. and the W. R. C. cease to exist, because we can continually take in new blood and may be regarded as an organization such as the Daughters of the Revolution."

"Just at present, however, we are not growing very fast, but this is accounted for because the mothers are too old to take an active part in the work. Many of the wives have however, and we must take up their time, and the daughters are most too young."

STEAMSHIPS SHOULD CARRY LIFEBOATS

J. E. Walton, a Seattle marine man who is visiting in the city for a few days, is of the opinion that there is an entirely too great a loss of life by steamship wrecks. He suggests a plan which, if followed, he believes would be the means of reducing the mortality list in this connection to very small proportions. Mr. Walton says:

"All steamship companies should be forced to carry lifeboats on their vessels, the same as the government has at all life-saving stations in the boat, making it impossible for anyone to wash overboard."

"Eventually the passengers would find land, and not be drowned like a lot of sheep, as were the unfortunate people on board the Gallian."

"The fire drill is something to which strict attention should be paid on board a steamer. I have made two trips to Nome and return lately, and know that this matter has not been given a thought by the captain during either of the voyages. This is all wrong and unjust to the passengers, whose safekeeping rests entirely in his hands. There should be a fire drill every day in the presence of the passengers, and in the moment of peril there will not be nearly so much excitement shown as under the present method of doing things."

JUSTICE REED IS THINKING OF MARTHA

Justice Reed is carefully sifting the conflicting evidence submitted to him yesterday when Paul Heintz, keeper of a boarding-house at Seventh and Gilsan streets, was tried on a charge of assault and battery.

Heintz was accused by Martha Meyer, aged 18, who charged him with seizing her by the arm and ejecting her from his house Wednesday of last week. She had gone there with her sister, Lizzie, who had just quit her position in the Heintz household. Both sisters claimed that Heintz and his wife had circulated untrue stories about them, and when they accused them of this Heintz became angry.

The defendant, who wears an Emperor William mustache, was considerably confused on the stand, but he claimed that Martha Meyer had used insulting language to Mrs. Heintz and had dared him to put her out. He said he simply led her to the door and used no unnecessary force.

FOUR FORGERIES IN ONE MONTH

Charged with passing four bogus checks during the past month Albert Stags was arrested by Detectives Kerrigan and Snow yesterday afternoon. He was found at Third and Burnside streets.

After the alleged forger was caught he was identified by Samuel Warner, proprietor of a saloon at Fifth and Burnside streets, as the man for whom he cashed a forged check Tuesday afternoon. The paper drawn on the Canadian Bank of Commerce for $17 and purported to have been signed by William L. Buckner. It was in favor of Frank Davis.

The detectives also claim that last month Stags passed bad checks on J. M. Toomey of the Barr hotel, and another on H. W. Olson of 55 North First street. The latter cashed a check for $14.75, signed by Buckner and drawn in favor of John Knudson. The paper cashed by Toomey bore the name of Buckner and was made out to Charles Baker. The amount was $11.85.

PARK THEATRE UNSAFE

Fenton, Or., Jan. 21.—At the council meeting last evening a special committee was appointed to see that proper fire escapes were constructed to the Park theatre building, and if necessary to close the theatre until such repairs are made.
