Remnants of Dress Goods and Silks at ¼ and ½ of former prices

As a natural result of the heavy selling during January in our dress goods section, we have on hand many short lengths of the finest kinds of dress goods, some sufficient for an entire suit, others containing only enough for a waist or skirt. They consist of this season's most desirable goods, in a good range of fashionable shades. To make a rapid clearance sale of all such short lengths we have marked them at a half and in some cases a quarter of their real value. Silks in an endless bewildering array of kinds and colors, in lengths suitable for waists and some suit lengths, are marked in the same liberal manner.

Remnants of gingham, outing flannel, flannelette, calico, percale, creton, silkoline, shirting and fancy waistings are here for your choosing at a fraction of their real value.

NOT THE DULLEST

DUBING CEREAL SEASON OF 1896-7, FROM PORTLAND BETWEEN PER-BUARY AND JULY.

Local grain exporters generally concede this to be the poorest shipping season known here since Portland became prominent as an export center. However, Leo Peterson, editor of the Commercial Review, thinks differently. In an interview last evening he said:

any means. The wheat shipping season of 1896-7 came to an end on February 17. After that date there was not a pound of grain shipped from Portland until July 23 of the same year. The situation then was different from that of the present season. The farmers had practically sold all their grain, and there was none left in the country. Out of the 32,000,000 bushels raised last to the year there still remain 7,500,000 bushels when to be sold. The most of this big surplus son." is in very strong hands—owned by farmers who have plenty of money and who are willing to pay warehouse expenses, insurance rates, taxes, etc.

"More than one half the crop remains

500,000 bushels in Umatilla county. The largest amount of wheat still in the Perce country, Idaho, amounting fully to 1,256,000 bushels.

"Holders are imbued with the idea that prices in Chicago will eventually be met here. In this they are mistaken, unless foreign markets respond more freely than they have recently done. Our markets are based on the valuation Eastern grain centers. At the present bushels of wheat, worth $34,777.

MAKING FIGHT FOR GRANT BAILEY DIRECT SERVICE

SENATOR MITCHELL ASKS FOR DATA TO BACK HIS CONTENTION FOR MAIL LINE PROM PORTLAND TO THE OBJENT-BINGER HER-MANN PROMISES AID.

Hon, John H. Mitchell, senior sena-tor from Oregon, this morning telegraphed the Portland chamber of commerce requesting data regarding ships plying between Portland and the Orient in order that the delegation may better present Portland's petition for direct nail service with the far East. Mr. Mitchell says:

"Referring to the Oriental mail matter please have the managers of the steamships now running from Portland to the Orient wire me immediately giv-ing the following data: Names of comanles, vessels, capacity as to amount of freight and number of passengers carried, average speed, dates of sailing, ports touched at and whether sail-ings are regular."

Hon. Binger Hermann, representative from Oregon, writes from Washington that he will gladly give all assistance possible in securing the desired direct mail service.
