

Oregon City and Vicinity

Matters baseball are beginning to be the sole topic of conversation now among the lovers of the sport and business men. Last Saturday P. H. Sroat of Salem, president of the Oregon State Baseball League, was in the city looking over the ground for the purpose of promoting the game in this city and in the evening he met several business men in Holman's cigar store and discussed the situation. He explained the difficulties met and overcome in Salem and thought the prospects very good in Oregon City. He said that at first in Salem it was hard to get the matter started, but when the men did get together, it was surprising the way the business men gave their support. He said: "What you want is to get the thing started. I know just how you feel about it. You like to see the sport started here and as this is the first thing of its kind sprung on you, you are bound to hesitate."

"Now in Salem when a crowd of the young fellows went around collecting funds for baseball the business men would give them three or four dollars and think no more about it. But this is different. When eight or ten well-known business men get together and form an organization and approach the different firms, men in business are bound to listen. And the thing is purely business. You put up a good exhibition here, establish on Sunday and you are going to hold your people here in town who would otherwise go to Portland and spend their money there."

NOTICE—The agency and correspondence work for the Journal is now being done by E. J. Johnson, 100 Main street, in the Postal Telegraph office, where news items will be taken and complaints and subscriptions listed and recorded.

You will be making money if you can keep one half of that money here on Sundays and holidays and the way to do it is to have a good baseball game.

"I saw Prebble, the Vancouver baseball man, and he says that if Vancouver does not take the matter up and put out a team he will do it himself. He said that he lost $600 last fall on football and thought from present indications that he could make back on baseball."

"Now remember one thing, gentlemen. The league will need Oregon City and if the thing does not pan out for Oregon City, it will not pan out for the rest of the league. It is reported that Albany has dropped out. That is not true. There is a certain element there who have given their word but I got it straight that Albany will be represented in the league and that they were already looking up players."

The Oregon City representatives then took up the matter and after a good deal of talk C. Fields asked W. A. Huntley, G. W. Young and E. Rapp to each select five prominent business men and take the matter over with them. Mr. Fields will act on this committee. On Tuesday the committee and business men meet in the freight office of the O. W. P. Co., this city, and there the matter will be thoroughly discussed and steps taken to form a stock organization.

Daughters of the King.

The daughters of the King are fast getting their plans in shape for the entertainment to be given Friday evening February 12, in Armory hall. Already the young ladies have begun to advertise the thing by putting attractive pen and ink posters in the different windows around town. Twenty-five cents is the price asked for the evening's pleasure and as Turney's orchestra is to play for dancing, a good time may be anticipated by all.

The costumes of the youngsters who are to dance the Mother Goose dances are about finished and they are pretty in the extreme. Red Riding Hood, Jack the Giant Killer, Cinderella, Jack Horner and all the rest of the heroes of the old nursery book will be there in their bravest clothes to perform in and to be danced with afterwards.

April 13, 1904, at 9 a. m.—10 S. R. 9 W. will be filed in the Oregon City land office, and the lands there embraced will be subject to entry on and after said respective dates. Signed, Algernon S. Dresser, register, and George W. Bibbe, receiver.

In and About Vancouver

(Journal Special Service.)

Vancouver, Wash., Feb. 8.—Johnnie Jones and Johnnie Johnson, who are visiting friends near Vancouver, had quite an exciting encounter over a fair dangle yesterday in which a 22-caliber pistol and a jackknife promised to play an important factor except for the interference of friends.

The trouble between the two youngsters seemed to be that one had escorted a young lady, also a visitor in the neighborhood, to a social once or twice, when the other, J. J., broke in on the first boy's "right of way." During the quarrel the young lady in question passed by with another miss. The boys caught their breath and stopped their quarreling. The main reason was that the two girls looked exactly alike, and

NOTICE—The Vancouver agency of The Oregon Daily Journal is located at 603 Main street, John P. Lundberg, agent.

The two J.'s were unable to tell which was his particular friend. The girls were afterwards found to be twins.

Work Stopped at Barracks.

Work has been stopped on one of the buildings that is in course of construction at the Vancouver barracks. The building is one of those that is being erected on the south side of the present parade grounds. The trouble lies in the specifications. It seems that the specifications for the building were made without consideration of the slope of the grade, and now the building must be made higher on the parade grounds and be leveled down. The latter course would cost considerably more than the rectifying of the building. But before any change made in the structure arrangements must be made and sanctioned by the authorities at Washington. Until this is done further work on that particular building will be at a standstill.

Revival Services.

Rev. Berry of Portland is holding revival services at the Christian church this week. The first of the services were held last night which was well attended and most enthusiastic interest manifested. A well selected choir furnishes music which is not only very appropriate but aids greatly in holding the audience, especially those who are averse to sermons and have a fascination for music.

SALEM

SALEM'S WAR ON WIDE OPEN TOWN

(Journal Special Service.)

Salem, Or., Feb. 8.—In all of the Salem churches yesterday copies of a petition addressed to the city council were presented, asking that body to close the saloons of the city on Sunday and to suppress gambling. In the churches the pastors of who are members of the Ministerial union these petitions were read and voters in attendance were invited to sign the petitions. Copies of the petition being circulated on the streets today and a good many signatures are being received, though the full extent of the movement will scarcely be disclosed until the next meeting of the council, a week from tomorrow evening.

The wide-open policy of the city government was an issue in the last city campaign, when the Anti-Saloon league was organized and all the nominees on the Citizens' ticket were endorsed by that organization, while only two of the Republican candidates for the council, out of 10 named, were endorsed. Only two men so endorsed—one a Republican, the other the only Citizens' nominee elected—were chosen at the polls, and the only Republican defeated was one of those endorsed by the league. The mayor, who was bitterly fought on the very issue of an open town and was opposed by a minute who headed the Citizens' ticket. Since the campaign closed the organizers for the Anti-Saloon league have gone into the near by towns and boldly proclaimed that they elected their entire ticket. Captain Mahone, one of the men who came here to stir up the fight, recently made that statement at Jefferson and alleged that the mayor was the only official chosen in Salem who was not endorsed by the league.

Saloons here keep their rear or side doors open on Sunday. There is some gambling. With a population of 14,000 the city has a police force of only three men. There has not been a holdup for years and but one burglary in several months, and the culprit in this case was behind prison bars within 18 minutes from the time he entered the house he robbed.

Postmaster's Barn Acre.

The Salem fire department was called out last night, just as services in the several churches commenced, to quench

ALBANY

CHILD UNDEARHS HUMAN BONES

The 7-year-old son of John Stout, owner of the Salem Bash & Door factory, was digging in the back yard of his home last Saturday when he turned up a human skull. The lad, frightened, called his mother. Further investigation revealed a large quantity of human bones including several skulls. All the bones were lying in a pile and had not been covered very deep.

The city authorities made inquiry. The indications are that the bones are from a collection from the dissecting room of a physician. The house was formerly occupied by Mrs. Plamondon and her son, Dr. Dillon Plamondon, who was for several years a student of the local medical school, leaving here after his graduation a few years ago.

ALBANY

PLANTER'S HEIR DIES IN ALBANY JAIL

Albany, Or., Feb. 8.—Henry Hart, a tramp tourist, died in the city jail early yesterday morning of heart disease. He was about 30 years of age and was well dressed. He arrived in the city on the midnight south-bound Overland and was traveling with a companion named Wolf. About 1:30 a. m. Officer Castin found them at the depot and suggested that they might occupy one of the rooms at the jail until morning, as they had a few dollars in money but wanted to save it. Shortly after the officer left the jail Hart, who had been complaining for several days, fell dead. The body is at Portmuller's undertaking shop, where it is held awaiting instructions from Hart's relatives. Hart has a brother in Dillie, Or., and two other brothers in San Francisco. The elder Hart was a wealthy planter in Honolulu and died about three years ago, leaving about $30,000 to be divided among four sons. Wolf says that Hart lived a reckless life and soon squandered his share and was now working as a laborer for some time past.

Daniel McDonald died at his residence in this city yesterday morning, aged 26 years. He had been suffering with tuberculosis for about a year. He came from Michigan about two years ago and leaves a widow.

WASHINGTON COUNTY

FRUIT TREES FOR WASHINGTON COUNTY

Hillsboro, Or., Feb. 8.—Washington county is to have great orchards. A fruit grower near Dillie has planted 200 acres in apples. One nursery firm, by its agent here states that he has sold in the county fruit trees to the value of $2,000. The varieties planted are generally Spitzenberg, Yellow Newtown pippins and a few red cheeked pippins. Fifty thousand apple trees out of the same nursery are going to eastern Oregon this spring. All these are of yearling size.

Another industry that is exploiting in this county is hewing ships' knees lumber. A gang of men is in the timber north of Glencoe, this county, grubbing up fir trees suitable for boat knees and hewing the roots with a part of the upright stem into lumber for the boat builder.

The Truce of the Bear

Yearly, with tent and rifle, our careless white men go By the Pass called Muttianee, to shoot in the vale below. Yearly by Muttianee he follows our white men in— Matun, the old blind beggar, bandaged from brow to chin.

Eyeless, noseless and lipless—toothless, of broken speech, Seeking a dole at the doorway he mumbles his tale to each— Over and over the story, ending as he began: "Make ye no truce with Adam-zad—the bear that walks like a man!"

"There was a flint in my musket—pricked and primed was the pan When I went hunting Adam-zad—the bear that stands like a man. I looked my last on the timber, I looked my last on the snow When I went hunting Adam-zad fifty summers ago!"

"I knew his times and seasons as he knew mine that fed By night in the ripened matzefed and robbed my house of bread— I knew his strength and cunning, as he knew mine that crept At dawn to the crowded goat pens and plundered white I laid."

"Up from his stony playground—down from his well-digged lair— Out on the naked ridges ran Adam-zad the bear, Groaning, grunting and roaring, heavy with stolen meals, Two long marches to northward and I was at his heels!"

"Two full marches to northward, at the fall of the second night, I came on mine enemy, Adam-zad, all weary from his flight. There was a charge in the musket—pricked and primed was the pan— My finger crooked on the trigger—when he reared up like a man.

"Horrible, hairy, human, with paws like hands in prayer Making his supplication rose Adam-zad the bear! I looked at the swaying shoulders, at the paunch's swag and swing, And my heart was touched with pity for the monstrous, pleading thing.

"Touched with pity and wonder, I did not fire then. I have looked no more on women—I have walked no more with men. Nearer he tottered and nearer, with paws like hands that pray— From brow to jaw the steel-shod paw, it ripped my face away!"

"Sudden, silent and savage, searing as flame the blow— Faceless I fell before his feet fifty summers ago, I heard him grunt and chuckle—I heard him pass to his den. He left me blind to the darkening years and the little mercy of men.

"Now ye go down in the morning with guns of the newer style, That load (I have felt) in the middle and range (I have heard) a mile! Luck to the white man's rifle, that shoots so fast and true! But—pay, and I lift my bandage and show what the bear can do!"

(Flesh like slag in the furnace, knobbed and withered and gray— Matun the old blind beggar, he gives good worth for his pay.) "Rouse him, men, in the bushes, follow and press him hard— Not for his raging and roarings flinch ye from Adam-zad."

"But (pay and I put back the bandage) this is the time to fear. When he stands up like a tired man, tottering near and near, When he stands up as pleading, in monstrous man-brutal greed, When he tells the hate and cunning of the little swinish eyes.

"When he shows as seeking quarter, with his paws like hands in prayer, That is the time of peril—the time of the Truce of the Bear!"

Eyeless, noseless and lipless, asking a dole at the door, Matun, the old blind beggar, he tells it o'er and o'er; Fumbling and feeling the rifles, warming his hands at the flame, Hearing our careless white men talk of the morrow's game;

Over and over the story, ending as he began: "There is no truce with Adam-zad, the bear that looks like a man!"

STAND BY THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

DOWNFALL OF EVERY GREAT NATION HAS BEEN BROUGHT ABOUT BY DISOBEDIENCE TO THEM. SAYS REV. DR. MOWRE URGING SUNDAY CLOSING OF FAIR.

At the M. E. church, South, yesterday the pastor, Rev. E. H. Mowre, preached from Prov. 14:14, "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." During the discourse Rev. Mowre took occasion to give his opinion of the Sunday closing of the Lewis and Clark and Clark exposition. He said in part:

"The downfall of every great nation has been brought about by a disregard of sin, or a lack of the Ten Commandments. The Jewish nation went into captivity because they would not keep the commands of God. Rome fell through her disregard of the moral law. France did away with the Ten Commandments. Following out of this was the result. He took twice as much time and space for the one concerning the sacredness of the Sabbath as he did to any other one. He made it very emphatic, making it binding on man and beast, so there can be no doubt that the author of the moral law wants the Sabbath kept holy. Then, how can a people who make any pretension toward Christianity openly advocate Sabbath desecration? It is the principle of disobedience to God's commands which has and will bring reproach upon us as a people and a nation. When men profess God's name, it then becomes easy to disregard the Sabbath. From Sabbath-breaking all other vices will naturally follow. By so doing we will create an underlying principle which will finally predominate in all our deeds, if allowed to continue. We find already brazen faces in the streets of our city, in this disposition to disregard God's moral law. Among them we find legalizing the saloons and gambling dens, looking with complacency on prostitution, a disregard for the laws of the land, and offenses whose business it is to enforce them. Out of these evils come all other crimes. With a saloon in the national capitol the open desecration of the Sabbath day, prostitution flaunting brazen faces in the streets of our city, and the history of the downfall of mighty nations staring us in the face, is it any wonder the Christian people of Oregon are making an effort to have the exposition closed on the holy day?"

"We want the fair to be a perfect success in every particular, but men differ as to what makes success. Will great crowds, with all financial claims met, make it a success? If we rightly understand the object of the exposition, it is many sided. First, it is to show the world the wonderful resources of this beautiful state. Second, as has already been expressed, a means of education. Third, that it may be a financial success in every particular. Lastly, that all these taken together may be a means of drawing to our coast a desirable class of homeseekers, and interesting capitalists so our vast resources may be developed and walk right over you."

"And not be afraid of head winds. They are often your friends. Gibbons said: 'Winds and waves are always on the side of the ablest navigator.' Aesop has a fable of a traveler who was pelted by a wind and he was defeated, wrap their determination and perseverance about them and grow strong. Head winds have resulted in men bringing the

ACTIVITY OF CRIMPS DECREASES SHIPPING

GERMAN CONSUL LOHAN REPORTS TO BERLIN ON PORTLAND MANUFACTURES AND COMMERCE—DEPRESSED FREIGHT RATES ALSO DIMINISHES NUMBER OF SHIPS.

Oswald Lohan, the imperial German consul for Portland, will soon forward his annual report to the German government at Berlin. In addition to his annual report, Herr Lohan sends special reports during the year, as occasion may require. This report reviews the conditions of trade, traffic conditions, the amount of the mineral output, that of the fishing industry and yearly review of Oregon manufactures, the status of shipping, etc.

Herr Lohan notes the decrease in foreign shipments. These have been occasioned, he finds, by a previous larger amount of flour being manufactured and sent to Japan, China and other Orient countries. Heretofore grain shipments have been larger to European ports, but the demand of the Orient for Oregon flour has decreased the grain cargoes to Europe and deflected them in the form of the manufactured product to the Orient. He finds, also, that depressed freight rates and the activity of crimps have seriously affected shipping. His records show that in 1901, 36 German ships visited Portland. In 1902 there were 25, and in 1903 there were but 12. He finds that English and French shipping fell off in the same proportion, on account of the same causes.

Herr Lohan reports that there are three German vessels now on route for Portland—the Madeline from San Francisco, and the Amelia and Alfreda from Europe.

The German consul states that Germany has sent a war vessel to Alesand, Norway, which was recently destroyed before May. The newly created posts will be at Emperor William, who annually cruises in the Hohenollern in Norwegian waters, takes great interest in the people there.

The interesting information is given by Herr Lohan that Germany is to establish four more paid diplomatic consulates in the United States this year. The appointees will be confirmed by the reichstag in April, and will be installed before May. The newly created posts will be at Seattle, Wash., at Atlanta, Ga., St. Paul, Minn. and New Orleans, La. In addition to these Germany already has paid consuls at New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Portland. Germany also has 14 honorary consulates in the United States, whose incumbents serve without pay.
