HELLO MAIDENS CAN STILL FEAST

PRESIDENT SABIN OF PACIFIC STATES TELEPHONE COMPANY SAYS THE CENTRAL GIRLS WILL NOT LOSE THEIR LUNCH—BUSINESS VERY PROSPEROUS.

"We have no idea of abolishing our dining room in Portland or any other city and the rumor that we did has no foundation in fact," said John I. Sabin, president of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph company, prior to his departure for San Francisco. "We have found that the system of furnishing our central girls with all they eat at the lunch hour is the most popular thing ever introduced into the telephone business, and we propose to continue it as long as the girls want it. Ours is the only company in the world that provides lunch for its employees on such an elaborate scale; other firms furnish the dining room and perhaps some articles for lunch, but we provide everything. I have heard that some one had started the rumor that we intended discontinuing the service, but this is untrue."

"How do you find conditions in the northwest?" was asked. "Very encouraging," replied Mr. Sabin. "Everything is prosperous. We are at peace with the world and our lines are being extended as rapidly as the growth of the country demands." In answer to a question, Mr. Sabin stated there are no immediate improvements contemplated for the Portland service, except that the rapid increase in the city's population demands the installing of large numbers of telephones in all sections.

"How did the big strike of linemen along the coast effect business?" was asked. "It merely delayed our extensions, and impeded improvements," replied Mr. Sabin. "But we have no trouble anywhere on our lines, and things are in the end condition. I have found prosperity abounding all along the route, and Portland especially is forging ahead splendidly. In Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma the same conditions prevail."

President Sabin, accompanied by E. J. Zinner, auditor of the Pacific States company, and J. P. Robinson, traffic manager, left on the night train for San Francisco, having completed the tour of the northwest. At the meeting held in the company's home here yesterday afternoon the following directors were elected: E. P. Fish, also president of the Bell Telephone company of Boston; John I. Sabin, San Francisco; Louis Glass, San Francisco; E. S. Pillsbury, San Francisco; F. W. Eaton, San Francisco; J. C. Poole, Portland; J. J. Thacher, Portland; F. R. Strong, Portland; P. Bacon, Portland.

"SMASHA GARIBALD?" SMASHA DA ST. PAT!"

His name is Antonio Perocchi. His occupation is selling small bisque statues, which he carries in a basket. This son of Italy entered Arata's saloon, 104 Third street, and began crying his wares.

"A-a-h, gentlemen! Buva da bisca stat! Gotta da stat' of da fina da man. Buva da Parnell, da Abraham Lincoln, Napoleon—grea da man! Sees da Garibaldi, who sava his countree?" Three men were lined up at the bar, including one of Hibernal ancestry. At the name of Garibaldi the last suddenly turned and inquired the price of the Italian patriot's statue.

"Two na half—cheaps." The Irishman handed over the money, then held the miniature figure before him, addressing it with the solemnity of tone and expression he would have employed if it had been a human being. "So you're the man that fought the pope? Well, Garibaldi, you should be ashamed of yourself—sure, I said ashamed of yourself, you bitherin' little blatherskite! An' it's you that fought the pope an' caused all the trouble, is it?"

"With these words the loyal Irishman smashed the figure on the floor and ground it beneath his heel. The Italian vendor stood in amazement while the monologue was going on, but when he saw the miniature of the patriot of his countree thus maltreated his anger knew no bounds.

"Whata for?" he loudly demanded. "Whata for you smash da greata Garibaldi—da man who sava his countree?" "Frind," slowly answered the son of Erin, "that is the man who fought the pope of Rome." "Ha! Garibaldi!—grea da man, grea da patriot, sava his countree, Smasha da Garibaldi? Smasha da St. Pat!" And, suiting the action to the word, he caught the figure of the saint from his basket, and breaking it upon the floor excepted a short dance on the pieces. But he was not satisfied with that.

"Smasha da Garibaldi? Smasha da Georga da Wash!" "Smasha da Garibaldi? Smasha da Parnell!" "Smasha da Garibaldi? Smasha da Cristofa Colomb!" When his basket was emptied of figures, each of which furnished part of the pedestal of patriotism constructed beneath his feet, the Italian vendor threw his basket into a corner and the money he had obtained for Garibaldi's statuette on the floor. With head erect and shoulders thrown back he marched from the saloon minus figures, basket and money. For two seconds after his departure a pin could have been heard to drop. Then one of the bystanders drew a deep breath. "Well, well!" he remarked, "when one o' them fellers throws money away I guess he's interested, all right."

OPERATIONS A FAD.

Public Gradually Awakes to the Fact. The latest fad in operations has been the appendicitis fad; (before that the fad for neuralgia, neuritis, etc.) and it is said that hundreds of patients were frightened and hurried into hospitals, operated upon and robbed of their last dollar, when the trouble was a simple case of hemorrhoids or piles only, easily cured at home with a simple remedy costing but fifty cents a box.

"I procured one fifty-cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure of my druggist, with the intention of buying a larger box later, but was happily surprised when I found that it cured my piles and still have six 'pyramids' left out of the first and only box. I have not had the least sign of piles since I used this one box, which has been about two months; previous to using Pyramid Pile Cure I had the worst kind of bleeding and protruding piles for over thirty-one years, and no one knows, except those who have had the piles, the pain and misery I suffered."

"I am a poor man, but have often said I would give a fortune, if I had it, to be cured of the piles, and now I have been cured for fifty cents. I should be very ungrateful if I did not thank you and give you every privilege to use my name and this letter, when I know there are so many who suffer as I did." J. A. Welschler, 1100 Bladensburg Road, Washington, D. C.

RIVER STEAMERS HAVE FOGHORNS

LAW RECENTLY PASSED BY CONGRESS BEING ENFORCED BY LOCAL INSPECTORS EDWARDS AND FULLER—ALL EQUIPPED WITH CHEAP TIN HORNS.

Shrill notes of foghorns are now heard up and down the waterfront, every steamer on the river having been equipped with an ear-piercing trumpet during the past few days. To test the noise-producing properties of their toy-like possessions, the officers and crews have put in their spare moments tooting indifferent refrains, keeping time to the gentle waves that sweep the rocking crafts. "It is all darned foolishness," said Captain Graham of the Oregon City Transportation company's line, "for the government to require us to carry such toys." Then he took another toot and continued: "Talk about music having charms to soothe the savage beast. This would drive the wild men of Borneo to hard drink. It would strike terror to their hearts. Armed with horns of this kind a dozen Japs could stampede an entire regiment of Russians."

"I wonder if central ever heard a voice like this," remarked a first mate as he took down the receiver and began to blow. "That will scare her out of year's growth," he concluded. "I'll bet she is screamin' yet."

Congress passed a law during the present session compelling all the steam vessels plying in American waters to carry foghorns. Inspector Edwards and Fuller are enforcing the law, and all the steamers now have horns. They are common tin arrangements, only costing about 75 cents each at retail. The steambot men say they are not needed, but owing to the small sum for which they can be procured it was not thought worth while to test the constitutionality of the law.

The captains say that the boat whistles answer the purpose for which the horns are intended and the latter will never be needed. They believe it was the intention of the legislators to make it compulsory for only sailing vessels to carry fog horns, but in the rush a mistake was made and steamers were included in the list.

"But what's the difference," philosophically declared one of the steambot men, "these little toys may come in handy sometime. They will be all right to amuse the children who are taking trips with us."

"Who ever saw a steambot with horns?" chimed in another. "It is not natural, and what is not natural is not right. I think the constitutionality of this law ought to be tested. It is a blasted outrage."

Children's "No Mend" STOCKINGS

The construction of these Children's Stockings show a radical departure toward betterment. They are "strongest where stockings are usually weakest," as they are reinforced in their most vulnerable parts with STOUT IRISH LINEN. Linen being the strongest fabric known, the "No-Mend" Stocking assures supreme wearing qualities. The No-Mend linen knee is knitted by a "patented" process into such a shape as to follow the lines of the knee like a "foot-form" shoe follows the lines of the foot, taking the strain off the fabric where otherwise same would be the hardest, thus decreasing the probability of tearing in case of sudden jerks, etc. We Recommend "No-Mend Stockings" as something new and better in Children's Hose, costing no more than the other kinds.

Decanting Champagne. From the London World. "Some people recommend the decanting of champagne into a crystal jug instead of pouring it into the glass direct from the bottle," writes H. P. M. "After considerable cost has been incurred in order to generate the gas which gives the wine its distinctive character, to adopt such a course would be like warming an ice before eating it. The better plan is to go to the other extreme and have at hand a wedge-shaped cork with which to close the neck of the bottle the instant the glasses are filled."

DOCTOR FORGETS AND MAY SUFFER

HEALTH BOARD LEARNS THAT A FATAL CASE OF MEASLES WAS NOT REPORTED, AND AN INVESTIGATION IS BEING MADE—MAY PROSECUTE. Though measles is said to have developed in the home of Lewis Brooks, living near Holbrook, almost a month ago, resulting in the death of his wife two weeks later, not a single person, it is understood, made a report at the county health office. Dr. Evans has reported the affair to the state board of health and an investigation will be made. Brooks' family lives on the line between Multnomah and Washington counties. No report of the measles was made at the county health office here. That the same is true of Washington county is deduced from the fact that the place was not quarantined. No report of the woman's death was made in Multnomah county, though it may have been made in Washington county. Reports of deaths in the various counties do not have to be filed with the state board some time after death, usually on the 10th day of the month following the death. No report of Mrs. Brooks' death has reached the state board. The law provides that the failure of a physician, the head of a family, or any other person attending anybody suffering from an infectious or contagious disease, to report the same to the county health office, if proved in court, shall constitute a misdemeanor and be made punishable by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100. An incomplete list gives about 70 cases of contagious disease in the county in the last three months, including smallpox, chickenpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria and measles. The authorities are satisfied that many cases of measles have not been reported, and say that their efforts at stamping out the disease have been accordingly handicapped. It is thought the number of contagious cases mentioned would have been lessened by half if prompt reports had been made, and in the future all violators of the law will be prosecuted. The person reporting the Brooks case to the health office said Dr. Linklater was the attending physician. In Zululand. In Zululand hairdressing is an important matter with both bride and bridegroom. A woman's glory may be her hair, but a Zulu bride has to have it all shaved off except just what is required in the formation of the cone-shaped erection which, with her people, is considered the wife's proper coiffure.

NO FREE RIDES TO WORLD'S FAIR.

(Journal Special Service.) St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 19.—The roads which will control the joint validating ticket offices in St. Louis during the world's fair this summer are the Pennsylvania, Big Four, St. Louis & San Francisco, Missouri Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, and Chicago & Alton. It is proposed to establish five or six such offices and have a central telephone bureau, which will be connected with the validating headquarters of the St. Louis lines. The officers of the various lines entering St. Louis are inclined to shut down completely on "deadhead" travel during the exposition period. It is pointed out by the railroads that they will have all the passenger traffic they can handle during the fair, and that it is not reasonable to ask for free transportation when the rates will be as low as are anticipated. The question will be definitely settled by a special committee which is to meet here next week.

SENATOR 100 YEARS OLD.

(Journal Special Service.) Fredericton, N. B., Feb. 19.—Senator Wark, the oldest member of the Canadian parliament, celebrated his 100th birthday today, having been born February 19, 1804. Despite his great age the senator is still in the full possession of his mental faculties, and enjoys fair bodily health. For several days he has been receiving congratulatory letters and messages from many parts of the Dominion.
