Weather conditions and general forecast for Oregon, Washington and Idaho;
During the last 24 hours showers have occurred generally in the north Pacific states and in northern California. They were especially heavy in the Walla Walla and Palouse regions and in the Bolse basis. It is cooler this morning in western Oregon and western Washington, but the temperatures west of the Rocky mountains are yet everywhere above normal and the snow in the foothlik continues to melt very rapidly.

The indications are for fair and cobler weather Wednesday east of the Cascades and for partly cloudy weather with showers in western Oregon and western Washington.

The river at Portland at 7 o'clock was 12.6 feet, which is a rise of 0.6 of a foot since yesterday morning. It will go but little higher before it will fall again. No reports have yet leen received from up-stream points, but they will come in later, and all interested in this point are requested to telephone this office, for information at any time during the day up to 6 p. m.

Maximum temperature in the last 24 hours.
