The state commission of the Lewis and Clark fair expects to receive between 14 and 20 bids for the buildings at the 1905 exposition when it meets tomorrow afternoon. The commission has announced that no bid will be considered for an aggregate sum of more than $275,000, and special attention will be paid to the subcon-tracts, such as plumbing, wiring, etc., in which the commission expects to discover exorbitant charges, or at least ex-be compared with the estimates of ex-pert contractors, engineers and architects, and where the bids greatly exceed in any respect these specifications they will be rejected. The commission's po-sition is stated by its officers to be: "We are not imputing bad motives to Master builders are very wroth about the intimation that they are endeavoring to hold up the Lewis and Clark fair commission. They state that the controversy which has arisen between them and the commission has been wholly misstated. At the same time they be-lieve they have just cause for griev-ance, and they do not hesitate to say, so. Regarding his position, which he says is identical with that of every other master builder, President Bridges of the association today expressed himself in this wise:

"We do not complain about the plans or the specifications for the buildings, but we are strongly averse to the con ditions which are being imposed by the

Further than this he refused to talk for publication. When pressed for a statement, another member of the association said:

"Too much power has been given to the superintendent of construction. He is clothed with authority to make any changes that he sees fit in the plans and specifications as the work progresses. And his decision is final; there is no appeal from it. These changes may suggest will have to be made at the contractor's expense; no difference how large an additional outlay may be required, the contractor will have to foot the bills. This is unjust and provides sufficient grounds for us to have assumed the position we have taken all through the controversy."

President Bridges and A. McInnis say that they do not intend to submit bids for the contract, and give it as their opinion that there will not be more than two or three members of the association who will make an effort to get the work. The intimation that they are or-ganized for the purpose of putting up prices on the fair buildings they indignantly resent. They say that competition is just as keen among members of the organization as it is among the independent contractors.
