

A COSACK. OUTPOST IN MANCHURIA.

A snapshot of one of the numerous Russian Cosack outposts in Manchuria. The Cosacks have hailed the war with delight, and as soon as the retreating Russian armies have entered the Japanese in Manchuria, as Napoleon was enticed to advance into Moscow, tens of thousands of these daring horsemen, whom the Japanese dread, will cut off their lines of communication.—Copyright, 1904, by W. FULTON ALMOST A TOTAL LOSS

CAPTAIN HARDWICK OF ALLIANCE VIEWS WRECK AND REPORTS THERE IS LITTLE HOPE OF SAVING HER—HIS ENGINEERS WILL NOT JOIN STRIKE.

"Excepting the machinery, tools and a part of the rigging," says Captain Hardwick, master of the steamer Alliance, which reached the harbor last night, "the steam schooner Fulton, which went ashore about a month ago at Port Orford, will be a total loss. She has been driven 30 feet further on the beach, and during the recent storms the vessel has been badly damaged. She is gradually breaking up, and the probabilities are very strong that any attempt to take her off will prove futile."

While coming up the coast from Eureka Captain Hardwick put in at Port Orford for the express purpose of viewing the wreck, and ascertaining what damage had been done. He went aboard the Fulton and found that she is in worse shape than had previously been supposed. Captain Lee, her commander, is the sole occupant, having remained by her since the day of the wreck. The Fulton is owned by the California & Oregon Coast Steamship company. While en route from Portland to San Francisco about a month ago she got caught in a storm, and after battling with the waves for almost a week the supply of fuel oil became exhausted and an attempt was made to effect a landing near the point where she is now lying. The attempt proved unsuccessful, the storm driving her ashore on the rocky beach.

Captain Hardwick says there is not the slightest danger of the Alliance being tied up at Portland on account of the marine engineers' strike at San Francisco. He states that the engineers on his vessel have no grievance, and could not be induced to walk ashore. The steamer is scheduled to sail on the return trip tomorrow night, and if a walkout occurs, which is now not considered likely, it will hardly take place before that time.

On this trip the Alliance brought about 50 passengers and a big cargo of general freight, consisting principally of lumber, shingles, handles and scrap iron. Included in the list are 14 carloads of lumber and shingles for reshipment to eastern points.

BERLIN HERE TO LOAD.

The American ship Berlin arrived in Portland this afternoon in tow of the Harvest Queen and tomorrow will begin loading supplies for the numerous Alaskan salmon canneries. Since the close of the salmon season last fall the Berlin has been laid up at Clifton, where she has been given a thorough overhaul and will enter the northern trade this spring in "ship shape and Bristol fashion." Owing to the close approach of the fishing season the work of loading the Berlin will be pushed rapidly and it is expected that within a short time she will be under full sail for the north.

EXAMINE JAMES TUFT.

Inspectors Edwards and Fuller are making an examination today into the seaworthiness of the American barkentine James Tuft, which is lying at the Inman-Poulsen mill. Tomorrow they will leave for Newport, Idaho, to inspect a small steamer known as the Columbia, which is operated on the Pen d'Oreille river. From now forward the local inspectors of steam boilers and hulls report that they will be kept busy making the rounds in their district. They are not only required to cover all of Oregon, but big portions of Washington, Idaho and Montana as well. Spring is the commencement of their busy season.

SCHOONER JACKSON ARRIVES.

The schooner E. B. Jackson, one of the best known lumber carriers out of Portland, arrived this morning from San Francisco. She was at once moored at the Inman-Poulsen company's docks.

EFFORTS TO END BAKERS' STRIKE FAIL

EMPLOYERS ARE WILLING TO CONSIDER AN ADVANCE OF WAGES, BUT WILL NOT ENTER INTO A WRITTEN AGREEMENT—FOUR-BETTERMEN WILL NOT BOYCOTT.

As yet no settlement of the bakers' strike is in sight. The conference between the two factions arranged for yesterday afternoon did not materialize, the employers failing to show up as they had agreed to do. It is now believed at union headquarters that the difficulty will not be settled for some little time to come.

A meeting was held by the association yesterday afternoon, and it was decided not to grant the demands of the union. While many of the employers expressed a willingness to pay the men the amount of wages which is being asked, they are opposed to entering into a written agreement with them.

The striking journeymen are putting in their time visiting the other unions in the city and explaining the situation as it exists. So far, they say that no plan of campaign has been mapped out, and consequently it is not known just how the fight will be conducted. But they declare that they are opposed to boycotting any of the shops, and will endeavor to get along without doing so. They seem confident that the strike will not last any great length of time, believing that the employers will shortly decide to sign their agreement.

WILL KEEP RECORDS OF WORKING MINES

The Oregon Miners' association is to establish a file of records of the condition of all working mines in the state. There are 100 place claims and about 28 quartz properties now in operation. The association will endeavor to secure reports from all the mines and the data will be kept in the office of the secretary for inspection by those interested in minerals.

The association will soon begin the collection of minerals for a display at the Lewis and Clark exposition.

Secretary Irwin Mahon of the American Mining congress expects to open his headquarters in the Stearns building before the end of the week. Judge J. H. Richards, president of the congress, returned to Boise yesterday. Col. Thomas Ewing, first vice-president, departed last evening for San Francisco.

NEWSBOYS HARASS A WOMAN RIVAL

Warrants are out for the arrest of John and Ed Powah and Tom Brown, newsboys, 8 or 10 years old, on the charge of assault and battery. Mrs. Rebekah Robinson, who also sells papers, is the complainant.

"I have to sell papers to keep my family," said Mrs. Robinson, "and these boys have harassed me for more than a year. They double themselves up and run against me just as hard as they can, whenever they see me selling papers. Yesterday they knocked me down at the corner of First and Washington streets, and I cannot stand the treatment any longer. They do not want me to sell papers, but I have to do so in order to support my children."

PAUL FREDERER HONORED.

Paul Frederer, one of the best known veterans of the civil war residing in Oregon, was last night elected as one of the three delegates from this state to be sent by the G. A. R. points to attend the next national encampment of this order. This encampment will be held in Boston, beginning August 15.

where she will load lumber for the B. City. The officers of the schooner report rough seas and a few heavy gales on their recent trip up the coast, although the passage is said not to have been marked by any very great storms.

BARK ARMEN IS LOADING.

The French bark Armen was moved this morning from the Mersey dock to Montgomery dock No. 2, where she will begin loading her cargo of grain for the United Kingdom. The bark will be loaded as quickly as possible, it being thought that she will be able to proceed down the river the middle of next week. The Armen arrived in port February 16 with a general cargo from Antwerp. The bark is in command of Captain Leroux.

OIL FOR PAPER MILLS.

The river steamer Glenola had the honor of carrying the first cargo of oil to the mills of the Crown Paper company at Oregon City, the oil having been taken to the Clackamas county capital this morning. The paper mills today began using oil. The first cargo, which was carried by the Glenola this morning, consisted of 1,800 barrels, which will be poured into the great tank erected near the paper mills for the purpose. This tank will contain 10,000 barrels of the fluid and the Glenola will continue carrying oil to Oregon City until the tank is filled.

LA BRUYERE REPAIRED.

The repair work on the French bark La Bruyere was completed yesterday afternoon and the vessel is now about ready to receive outward cargo. She is under charter to carry wheat to the United Kingdom.

STEAMSHIP OREGON SAILS.

The steamship Oregon sailed for San Francisco last night with 1,123 tons of general cargo.

PROPERTY OWNERS ESTIMATE LOSSES

With the exception of a small body of water which is lower than the sewer, the muddy waters from the Tanner creek sewer have completely disappeared and the damaged portion of the sewer is being mended. Sufficient progress has been made to prevent further flooding of the stream and no additional damage is likely to result. A large force of men from the city engineer's office is engaged in repairing the sewer, while the property-owners in the vicinity are engaged in preparing an estimate of the loss which was sustained by means of the flood.

NEW VAUDEVILLE THEATRE PLANNED

The store at 125 Sixth street, now occupied by the Narragansett billiard hall, has been leased for a term of years from the present lessee, Charles L. Brown, and will be immediately transformed into a family theatre presenting vaudeville. The plans have been drawn and the contractors will start in a few days to build a theatre which will seat about 600 people. The new Bijou theatre, as it will be called, will book all the attractions used on the Edison circuit, which has houses in Seattle, North Yakima, Butte, Spokane, Victoria, Vancouver, Tacoma, Walla Walla and Aberdeen. The theatre's front entrance will be on Sixth street and the exit on Alder street.

DOCTORS DISCUSS TYPHOID FEVER

FOOD AND WATER NOT ONLY MEDIUM FOR TRANSMISSION OF DISEASE—FLIES OFFER CARRY GERMS—DR. CARDWELL URGES SANITATION IN SCHOOLS.

Typoid fever is the most important factor we have to consider in the case of preventive diseases," said Dr. Elmer Hag of Seattle in his paper read this morning at the session of the state conference of the health officials of Oregon.

Typoid fever and the water supply occupied so much time that there was none left for other topics scheduled on the program, including "Compensation of Health Officers" and "Full Return of Vital Statistics." About 40 physicians, many of whom are from out of the city, were in attendance.

"Food and water products are not the only means of carrying disease. Typhoid originates where food and water have nothing whatever to do with it," said Dr. J. C. Smith of Pendleton, who opened the discussion. "I have in mind a certain portion of Pendleton where the people were afflicted with typhoid. It was found that water was not the cause because people in other portions of the city who used the same water were not afflicted. It was proved that flies were the cause of the trouble. As soon as cold weather came the flies died off and the disease subsided."

"The fly is admirably adapted to carrying the typhoid germ because of his industrial habits," said Dr. Cardwells. "The fly has actually been caught with typhoid germs in the pads of his feet." Dr. Woods Hutchinson gave out the information that 90 per cent of all the cases of typhoid fever have been traced to water or milk, and maintained that flies are the cause of the per centage it has been impossible to locate.

Dr. J. R. Young of Tacoma opened the afternoon discussion on the "Prevention of Tuberculosis." Dr. Mae H. Cardwell read a very interesting paper on "School Hygiene." She showed the need of three things in the schools: That teachers shall pass an examination in sanitation, that the position of janitor shall be held by civil service examination and that the schools shall have medical inspectors. She said in part:

"The three great factors in the comfort of school children—light, heat and ventilation—have been gone over again and again and are as yet far from being perfected, but the construction of the school building, the architecture and the material have received but a minimum consideration."

The profound lack of the knowledge of sanitation and hygiene among educated people is one of the most astonishing facts of our new century. Indifference, born of ignorance still reigns over the entire land—yet when we realize that the last United States census reports 28,000,000 and more persons between 5 and 24 years of age, which are the school years, and that 15,000,000 children were actually in school it would seem a matter of national importance to attempt to maintain their normal health and prevent the dissemination of disease.

"The aim of education is the development of the strongest mental, moral and physical life of the individual. Making one composite child of a class of 40 individuals will never produce the best education nor the best citizen." "Portland's milk is good or bad according as we view it from a commercial or sanitary standpoint," said Dr. Woods Hutchinson at last night's session of the health officers of Oregon. "The quantity of butter fat is the most important factor from a commercial standpoint, but from the sanitary point of view it is the least important. If milk is of poor quality or watered, a baby may have to drink a little more to get the proper amount of nourishment, but if it is impure, if it contains the germs of diphtheria or typhoid, for instance, it is so much more dangerous."

Dr. Hutchinson has been making a careful analysis of milk taken at random from passing wagons and has found that it contained 4 per cent of butter fat, 20 per cent of mud and cow hairs, 25 per cent of disease cells and 51 per cent of assorted microbes. "No other fluid contains such swarms of bacteria as does milk," continued Dr. Hutchinson. "I mean it when I say that city sewage contains fewer bacteria than ordinary milk. In a teaspoonful of what we would call pretty good milk there are about 400,000 bacteria. Some findings homes have such pure milk that there are only about 40,000 in a spoonful. In Portland milk there are about 1,200,000 in every teaspoonful."

"There is no question that the milk is dirty," said Dr. Harry Lane. "You can smell our milk a quarter of a mile away. But I'll tell you something else. You can see your dear little baby down in the front yard under the spreading chestnut tree and leave him alone, and he will be all right in an hour than he'll find in all the milk in Portland. And he won't die."

But this theory was not generally accepted by the physicians present. W. W. Cotton told of some model dairy he has been in Illinois. Mr. Cotton also described a model dairy, which is regarded as a model one.

"In Illinois milk retailed at 12 cents a quart, but the public here will not pay any such price. I do not find that there is a popular demand for better milk, and the supply is better than the town deserves, taking into consideration the price. The public must be educated to demand and pay for better things."

was very indignant to think that she was held on such a charge and remained by her side through the trying ordeal in the courtroom. When she cried, he wiped away her tears, and placed a loving hand about her to console her.

The formal charge was read to her by the deputy district attorney, but she paid no heed to its legal phraseology, not understanding one word of it. It had to be explained to the child that she was accused of stealing a ring, and she then denied it strongly.

Inasmuch as neither Detective Hawley or Mr. Wolfe were present to testify or make an explanation of the case, Judge Hogue continued it until tomorrow. The girl was allowed to go home with her father.

RUNAWAY WIFE COMES BACK HOME

MRS. MANTELLO, WIFE OF HER ESCAPEE, RETURNS TO THE HUSBAND WHOM SHE HAD DESERTED AND THE COUPLE AGREE TO FORGET THE PAST.

Having grown weary of living alone and of being hunted as a runaway criminal, Mrs. Rosa Mantello, who deserted home and husband and babe here on the night of March 7 and went to Seattle the next night with Frank and Joseph Mantello, returned to Portland last night. Upon her arrival at the Union depot she asked to be taken to the city jail, a request which was readily granted. In the municipal court this morning the troubles between Mantello and his wife were forgotten, and the twins left the halls of justice again repeating the old, old story of a love that must never die.

Mrs. Mantello said this morning that she did not know where the Mantellos, uncle and nephew, were. She said that she had accompanied them to Seattle on the night after she left her home, 187 Lincoln street, but that she soon left the sound city to visit in Tacoma and that she had not seen the men since. The returned wife denied that she had taken $48 in gold, the savings of her husband during the past few months, but she admitted having taken $325, and that sum she brought back with her.

A warrant had been issued for the arrest of the Mantellos, and it was reported that Mantello would issue one for the arrest of his wife charging her with larceny. If he ever had such an intention the idea quickly left his mind this morning when he faced his wife in the municipal court. The memories of courtship days took the place of his hope for revenge for her leaving him so quickly three weeks ago and the Mantellos agreed to settle their troubles between themselves. They left the courtroom together.

POLYGAMY MUST STOP

These promises were solemnly made by the highest authorities of the Mormon church and by a great number of their followers. The members of the Mormon hierarchy have confessed that these promises, given eight years ago, have been ruthlessly broken. They have confessed also that they intend to continue to violate the sacred oaths taken by them when they applied for statehood."

Is Out of Politics.

There can be no question that this is the feeling of almost every member of both houses of the national congress, and it has reached a point where party politics are forgotten. It has become almost the sole topic of conversation in the hotel lobbies and now that the question has been so widely thrown open it promises to become a political topic of no more insignificant dimensions.

President Roosevelt's campaign managers have prevailed upon him to withdraw from congress his request for an appropriation of $50,000 for building a stable for his horses. The president has done so with much reluctance but has been assured by the Republican leaders in congress that his pet scheme

A BEAUTIFUL TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Kellogg—When I sent to you for treatment two weeks ago I was suffering from kidney trouble and neuralgia, so that I could not sleep over in bed or move without pain, and was suffering great pain. I was worn out and nervous and had not been able to sleep well for at least a year. I have taken two weeks' treatment and feel completely cured of my kidney trouble, and am now able to sleep soundly. The nervousness and other troubles brought on by suffering have also disappeared. I am, STOCKTON, CALIF.

will go through right after election if he will only wait.

It has been intimated that the president was practically coerced by his campaign managers, who told him that if he would wait they would see that no miserable $50,000 stable would be furnished the White House but that he could expect something that would be more like a real royal palace for his hunters and jumpers.
