LAURA M. CLAY COMING TO FAIR

NOTED DAUGHTER OF FAMOUS KENTUCKY STATESMAN WILL VISIT EXPOSITION—WELL KNOWN AS WOMAN SUFFRAGE ADVOCATE AND SPEAKER.

Among the distinguished people who will visit the Lewis and Clark centennial will be Miss Laura M. Clay, of Lexington, Ky., a daughter of the late General Cassin M. Clay, one of the most eccentric characters in American history. Miss Clay has just written that she will visit the fair in company with a number of other Kentuckians and plans are under way for her entertainment.

Miss Clay is famous throughout the country as an advocate of women's suffrage. She came from a famous line and is probably one of the foremost women orators in the country. Her father was at one time ambassador to Russia and was the leader of the abolition party in Kentucky before the civil war.

A few years before his death he wrote a history of his life. The story is filled with incidents of national importance and has been widely circulated. It was years ago when General Clay was a young Kentucky planter that he made a trip to Cincinnati for the purpose of selling a crop of tobacco. It is told that he disposed of his crop on the day of his arrival, depositing several thousand dollars in one of the banks.

Early the following morning he called at the bank and found a long line of people at the door, anxiously awaiting its opening. A placard announced that the bank had been closed temporarily pending the appointment of a receiver. Women were weeping and men swearing when Clay arrived.

Realizing the situation in a moment, he did not join the crowd of depositors, but made his way to the rear of the building. There he raised a window and leaped into the room. A number of men with carbons in their hands surrounded a table. The Kentuckian discovered that a meeting of the directors was in progress. Without pausing an instant he drew his two revolvers and covered the directors.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I am Cash Clay, and I guess you have all heard of me. I deposited a large amount of money here last night and want it at once. I will give you five minutes to get it," and he laid down the deposit slip. He got his money and the bank became insolvent.

Before the opening of hostilities in the war of secession he was addressing a crowd in Louisville in denunciation of slavery. Two brothers, representing one of the most prominent families in the state, took occasion to interrupt him and jeered at his remarks. He promptly closed the address and publicly challenged both of them to a duel. They were ready to fight, they said, but would be courteous enough to wait until the following day and permit him to conclude his address.

"No, you will fight now," said Clay from the rostrum. "I'm going to get married tomorrow and don't want to be interrupted by any duels." In the fight which occurred that night the two brothers were killed. The wedding was not delayed by the incident.

In his will General Clay donated the whole of his magnificent farm to the federal government to be used as a park.

We are Crowded for Space

And want to make room for the new goods that are still coming in. Yesterday two carloads arrived, and for the present must be stored somewhere in the city. Our storehouse is already full and all the floor space in our store is occupied. To get rid of many of the goods on the floor we will reduce in price all these goods.

Here's an opportunity to furnish that spare room economically

You may need an extra chair for the parlor or a table of some kind. Here's your chance.

FOUR JUDGES DRAW HIGHER PAY NOW

The bill increasing the salaries of the judges in the state circuit court went into effect Wednesday. The jurists affected in this county are John B. Cleland, presiding; Arthur L. Frazer, M. C. George and Alfred Sears Jr. Formerly the judges drew $3,000 a year; their salaries, dating from yesterday, will be $4,000.

When the bill was passed by the last legislature an emergency clause was tacked on making the law operative from the time it received the signature of the governor. The governor signed the bill on December 24. It is provided that the extra $1,000 shall be paid by the county.

L. R. Webster, the county judge, was of the opinion that as the constitutional provision had not been adhered to in the case of the emergency clause the bill would not be operative until 90 days from the date on which it received the gubernatorial signature. This was agreed on generally. Some question arose as to the constitutionality of the provision that the additional $1,000 should be paid by the county, as the four judges are crystallized into a legal action.

MINISTER FORGOT TO SIGN HIS NAME

A marriage certificate without the signature of the officiating clergyman does not certify very strongly so far as the county clerk's office is concerned. Rev. William S. Gilbert forgot to affix his signature to the certificate of R. E. Mason and Eva Greenwalt, after filling the body of the document with the necessary information, and in endeavoring to discover who united the two young people, Harry V. Bamford, deputy county clerk, did more work in an hour than on any previous day of his life in twice that time. Incidentally he placed himself in line for honors only accorded disciples of Sherlock Holmes.

A license to wed was issued to Mason and Miss Greenwalt on March 7. They were wedded on that date at 663 Tillamook street, R. S. Durham and Miss Allice Greenwalt being the witnesses. The certificate was returned for record to the county clerk by mail.

Bamford consulted Frank S. Fields, county clerk and an ex-officio Multnomah county agent of Hymen. Fields suggested the directory. No information could be discovered from that source, except the address of the bride. It was decided that a messenger should have to be sent to her residence, or former residence, to learn the name of the clergyman who officiated, when another search discovered that Miss Allice Greenwalt's name appeared in the directory as "Greenwalt." From Miss Greenwalt it was found that the Rev. Mr. Gilbert was the object of all the search. He was notified and today affixed his signature to the certificate.

AGAIN THEY BREATHE THE AIR OF LIBERTY

"Tis a fearful thing in winter to be shattered by the blast," remarked a man with hard hands and a soft heart this morning as Chief Justice Hunt bestowed upon him a motherly smile and a fatherly blessing. The man who received these kindnesses from the head of the local police department was one of nine prisoners released at this morning's session of the kangaroo court—the court that made the city jail's breakfast food famous.

It was 8:30 a. m. before the chief had fully made up his mind about what prisoners to free. After he had completed his list of the men to receive free exit from the jail, it was decided to release the favored ones in military fashion. During the dark days of the civil war Charles H. Hunt was one of the boys who fought under the stars and stripes. This morning's release of prisoners was done in strictly military style.

A skirmish line of one man sallied from the cells, looked about and reported, "All's well." He received the blessing and left. Within a few minutes the main army appeared, five strong. They were told that the chief had decided that they should be as free as the birds of the air; the men hoped that the air would be pure and not the sort allowed them in the jail. After the five had disappeared the reserves were brought into action and the same welcome story was told them.

Thus closed another chapter in the history of the "court" conducted by "His Honor," Judge Hunt.

At an early hour this morning Patrolman Myers, who has an east side beat, discovered a large colony of various sorts and conditions of men who had just arrived in Portland via the brake-beam route. The men were clustered in the east side O. R. & N. yards and seemed to have nothing to do. The patrolman at once placed the crowd under arrest and six of them were brought to the city jail and kept under lock and key until Chief Hunt arrived at the station. He quickly released the men on "the no questions asked" plan.

HIGHJINKS BRINGS TO GRIEF TWO STUDENTS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash., March 24.—As a result of the high jinks three nights ago in Billings hall two Pendleton boys, William Kennedy and Orny Williams, will not come back to school after the Easter holidays next week.

The fracas consisted in tying a large tin wash tub inside the door of Edward's room and causing it to slam against the door with a crash by means of a long string which was operated from the floor below.

Edwards, who is an academy student, was down town at a show without permission of the dean of the hall and Kennedy and some other college boys climbed into his room and constructed the apparatus. The noise soon attracted two members of the faculty who were in the third floor, and one of them, Professor Kohlen, loudly rapped on the door of Edwards' room and demanded to be let in. Upon getting no answer he summoned his fellow Professor T. W. Horn, and they both demanded to be let in. Upon receiving no reply, Kohlen stood upon Horn's shoulders and looking over the transom located the difficulty. During this performance the other boys in the hall came out from their rooms and chaffed the professors on the joke.

An examination was made the following day. Edwards and H. Brown, another student out without permission, were placed on probation and the case of Kennedy, a college student, was taken up separately by the committee on discipline. Kennedy declares that he was not suspended, but had been intending to quit school and study engineering for some time.

The other participants in the scrape have not been located yet, although the authorities are doing all in their power slavery. Two brothers, representing one of the most prominent families in the state, took occasion to interrupt him and jeered at his remarks. He promptly closed the address and publicly challenged both of them to a duel. They were ready to fight, they said, but would be courteous enough to wait until the following day and permit him to conclude his address.

"No, you will fight now," said Clay from the rostrum. "I'm going to get married tomorrow and don't want to be interrupted by any duels." In the fight which occurred that night the two brothers were killed. The wedding was not delayed by the incident.

In his will General Clay donated the whole of his magnificent farm to the federal government to be used as a park.

VICTIM OF SPOKANE COLLISION IS DEAD

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Spokane, March 25.—Without ever regaining consciousness since the street-car and railway accident of last Sunday morning, George Jenkins, son of Col. D. F. Jenkins, has died at the Sacred Heart hospital in this city. This is the first and probably the only fatality due to the attempt to take a Hilliard electric car across the railroad in front of a switch engine and nine cars running at a high rate of speed on the old S. F. & N. track in this city.

Four people were injured, and the other three are on their way to recovery. Coroner D. L. Smith, in conference with the prosecuting attorney's office, has decided to hold an inquest, and the witnesses are now being looked up.

Attention Ladies!

The display of new spring dress skirts and waists at the Boston Store, corner of First and Salmon, and the moderate prices asked for the same, is respectfully called to the attention of the ladies. The window display of dress skirts is certainly one of the best ever seen in Portland.
