AS MINISTERS VIEW NEGRO QUESTION

Prominent Portland Methodist Pastors Write on Problem of Electing Negro Bishop—Church Law Must Be Changed First.

That no negro will be elevated to the Methodist episcopacy at the coming centennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at Los Angeles is the belief of two thirds of the leading pastors of this denomination in this city. Their views along some lines are similar. Rev. J. R. T. Lathrop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, believes that the white ministers would never take their appointments from a negro bishop, but indicates a willingness to allow the negro members of the church to either join the African M. E. church or form a new body.

Rev. W. H. Selleck, pastor of Sunny-side M. E. church, believes that the best solution of the problem is to change the church law so that a negro bishop would be assigned to a negro conference. Both have prepared statements of their opinions for The Journal, which are appended.

Rev. J. R. T. Lathrop, one of the best known pastors in the city, gave the following to The Journal, stating his position:

Cannot Avoid Color Line.

The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church convenes in Los Angeles this May, and among the questions which likely will be discussed, that of electing a negro to the episcopacy it is believed will appear. It is no new question though it is always fraught with interest. Heretofore the conference has refused to assume so grave a responsibility, and for the two-fold reason that the time had not come, and the present character of the episcopacy (which is a general superintendency) would have placed upon it, in case a negro was elected, a burden too great for it to bear. That is, unless a man is elected to the missionary episcopacy, which is a district episcopacy, he must be elected, if at all, to the general superintendency, and travel officially throughout the whole church holding conferences.

"White men would not submit to receive their appointments from the hands of a negro. It would be humiliating, unnatural, and altogether too extreme for a negro to preside with all the authority of a white bishop over the white conferences. It has been urged that he might be limited to the negro conferences, but in that case he would not be a general superintendent, and the present law provides only for the two kinds of bishops. There are a few white delegates who are always willing (so they say) to elevate a negro to that office, and of course, the negroes are anxious. Our Methodist has created a deep impression in that race, and has always sought to bless the negro by education and organization, but the church cannot remove the color line. Christianity cannot do that. Nature fixed that, and those who talk otherwise fail to appreciate natural race distinctions. A few great negro men have been developed, and one or two of these have been almost universally thought of as possible bishops, and surely would be, if they could command the votes. Personally, I believe the negroes should go to themselves, either into the African Methodist Episcopal church, which is a great church, having its own bishops, and its affairs well administered, or they should form a church of their own, and be assisted in the administration of their affairs, if they should need it, by a council or advisory board of the mother church.

"I look upon the solution of the negro problem as being largely in his own hands, and the race will never come to its feet until it depends upon itself. The greatest obstacle in the way of a union of the Methodist Episcopal church and Methodist Episcopal church south, is the negro. So, I say, if the negro would go to himself, and yet be kept sufficiently close to Methodist counsel and help, a union of the two greatest Methodist organizations would soon materialize. It is of the utmost consequence that they should unite. This twentieth century demands it. So far as I am concerned I should hold the hour when all the Methodisms should be organically one, and all the negro Methodist churches should be one. That would mean a vast saving of money, of physical energy, of spiritual power, and not only a saving, but a vast increase of power. My guess is a negro will not be elected to the episcopacy at this quadrennial conference.

Rev. W. H. Selleck of Sunnyside M. E. church, gave the following authorized statement of his views to The Journal:

Rev. W. H. Selleck's Views.

Should the colored membership, numbering over 300,000, in the Methodist Episcopal church, have a representative on the board of bishops? This is a question of vital interest to the entire church. It opens a large field for discussion. Never was the Methodist church more attached to its episcopacy than at present, but there is a wide difference of opinion among equally able and earnest men about some features of the general superintendency. Many of us believe the present system is costly and, with a constituency of 20,000 ministers and 5,000,000 members, unnecessarily taxing.

"At the proportionate number of bishops with membership with which the church began its existence with Bishop Asbury there would be over 4,000 bishops now instead of 16.

"Now a bishop may live in Portland and like Bishop Cranston hold conferences, in one year in Mexico, Porto Rico, Maryland, California and a half dozen lesser states. This seems to many of us very unwise but believe a bishop ought to stay for four years continuously in a district in the center of which he lives. Then have him assigned to a different field. This will give opportunity for his coming in touch with the local interests in his field and knowing the ministers personally, which except in the cases of the more prominent they cannot hope to do now, in so vast a ministerial body. Already bishops are being assigned for four successive years to the same conference in foreign fields. Instances: Bishop Vincent in Europe, and Bishop Moore in eastern Asia, and this plan is sure to be increasingly adopted. Under this plan there is no reason why colored bishop may not be elected to be assigned to the colored conferences in this country. We have some very fine cultured Christian ministers of the colored race—Prof. Bowen, Secretary Mason, Editor Scott, are examples of many that would bring the church honor and credit in the Episcopal chair. They are eloquent, strong and sensible. I do not think the time has arrived when a colored bishop would be acceptable to the white conferences but it is a restive feeling under the unwillingness to a colored man bishop for the colored conferences that is working harm to our interests among the black men. The colored Methodist bodies are saying to the colored men in our church: "Oh, they will never give you a bishop, and you better come with us," and many are going. Last year the African Methodist Episcopal church made immense gains in membership. I do not think our people would object but hail the election of a colored man to the episcopacy of the colored conferences as an act of justice and right. I trust this will be done."

PORTLAND BOY WILL ENTER WEST POINT

PHILIP K. CARROLL WINS COVETED APPOINTMENT IN MICHIGAN IN COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION— WAS CAPT MAJOR AT BISHOP SCOTT AND POPULAR HERE.

Philip K. Carroll, cadet major at Bishop Scott academy, is a successful applicant in a class of 30 Michigan boys for appointment to the United States military academy at West Point. Mr. Carroll is 18 years of age and took the preparatory course for the examination under the tutelage of Superintendent Newell of Bishop Scott. His mother, Mrs. P. H. Carroll of this city, has just received word of the honors won by her son.

Young Carroll is now with his father at Grand Rapids, Mich., and will go to West Point June 15 for the purpose of taking the final examination. "For the boy's sake," said Mrs. Carroll last night, "I am overjoyed at this success. It speaks words of praise for Mr. Newell of the Bishop Scott academy. It has been my desire that Philip enter Harvard and he has already successfully passed the tests for admission. But his heart has been set on a military career."

"He entered Bishop Scott academy three years ago and would have graduated next June. Philip has been preparing for the West Point examination since last fall. Whether he will return to Portland or go to some eastern preparatory school, until time to enter the academy, we have not yet decided. The boy stood second in the examination. The first who secured first honors had his choice of the army or navy and chose Annapolis."

Young Carroll was born at Grand Rapids, Mich., and he was allowed to take the competitive examination in Michigan because his father resides there. He stands at the head of the Bishop Scott graduating class, and was elected valedictorian. The position of major is the highest office in the cadet corps of the local academy.

Among the faculty and students of the school he is very popular, and he has numerous friends in Portland. He is a nephew of William H. Hoyburn, president of the Oregon Water Power & Railway company.

JOE DAY TELLS OF DETECTIVES WORK

VETERAN TELLER—OCTOBER INDULGENCE IN REMINISCENCES— CELEBRATED CRIMINALS OFFEN TAKEN THROUGH ACCIDENT— NOW BURGLARS ARE TRACED.

"Did you ever do something and not know the reason why you did it. Well, that's just the way lots of criminals are captured," said Joe Day, the veteran detective of the Portland police force, when asked how noted thieves are caught. "I have made many just that way," he continued. "I recall the capture of 'Red' O'Brien, the bank burglar, at Vancouver, Wash., June 28, 1894, which illustrates my point.

"O'Brien, with a gang of other burglars, had perpetrated a series of bank burglaries through Missoula, and had been driven to distant parts of the country by the Pinkertons. O'Brien came west, and one Sunday when I was visiting in Vancouver, I saw a man on the street with 'Bob' Lucas and a man named John McGinnis. I knew O'Brien and McGinnis were friendly, and I felt sure he was with him. In company with the city marshal, I went to where the three were standing, and we placed them under arrest. They started to run and we had to fight. McGinnis and Lucas were easily pacified, but not so with O'Brien. He had a big gun, and was going to use it. I drew mine and struck him over the head with it. Then for the first time he turned and looked at me.

"I said: 'Why, upon my word, it's O'Brien.' He said: 'I know you better than you know me. Day, I saw you twice on a street car and jumped off for fear of arrest.'

"O'Brien was tried and got eight years in the penitentiary. He had many jobs to his credit and was accounted a desperate and cunning criminal. That accidental visit of mine to Vancouver led to his capture.

Burglars of Criminals.

"But different criminals have earmarks, and a great many times a certain crook may be known to the officers and may be detected by his work. I knew of one peculiar case. Harry Eldridge, a desperate burglar, and one of those who escaped from the Folsom penitentiary recently, was for many years a jewelry thief. His mania was to take jewelry from houses, but through means of identification of the plunder he was twice captured and sentenced to the penitentiary. He told a San Francisco detective that he was acquainted with a man who had quit the jewelry business and would never again take any.

"Later Eldridge came to Portland and entered on a series of crimes. He was after nothing but money, but so strong had the jewelry habit become with him that he could not resist. During that series of crimes several families who were robbed found the plunder lying at the gates of their homes. Eldridge remembered that the jewelry habit had caused his detection and arrest. Had we known at the time that he did later, we would have known for whom to look when we heard of the fact that he left the jewelry.

"The way a criminal enters a house, and the time of night, signifies a whole lot. Take William Dean and Harry Lot. The man who admitted they stole the diamonds from the Cary residence recently. They deny taking stuff from other houses here, but there is no doubt in the minds of the officers that they committed the recent burglary. They had a habit of breaking into houses in the early evening, and at a time when they knew no one was home. All of the jobs recently turned were done in this way, and we firmly believed that one or two criminals were doing the whole series of them. We still believe for their work in every instance bore the same earmarks. They took jewelry or money, or anything that could be sold.

"There are burglars who enter houses at midnight, and who hold people up in their own homes at the point of a pistol, robbing them of valuables such as rings, jewelry and money. These are generally men who hold human life in contempt.

The Masked Burglar.

"Then there is the burglar who masks and enters houses at night. This class is the worst, most desperate and cunning of all. They take no chances of being identified, for their features are always obscured behind their masks. There are different types in this class. The most difficult to capture is the burglar who takes nothing but money. His mask and failure to take anything that might be identified make detection next to impossible. The only way they can be caught, unless taken in the act, is by obtaining information from some of their friends.

"There are times when criminals work in pairs or more deviate from their usual line of work. I have known of cases where criminals would be out together with no particular job to perform. Suddenly they would be seized with a desire to commit some crime, and would hold up the first person they met. Criminals who jump by spells are of a changeable disposition and frequently confess their guilt when caught.

"Not all criminals stick to one line of work. I have known pickpockets to go out with burglars, and burglars to take a change by picking pockets or awfully. It requires but little nerve to pick pockets, for all a man needs to do when caught is to steadfastly deny he is the man, should the victim discover a hand in his pocket.

"There is a man working in Seattle now who is giving the police much trouble. He enters houses at night, taking nothing but money. The detectives are baffled, for there is no clue, and they do not know the name or description of any man whose habits and mode of operations in the past correspond with the troublesome burglar.

"What are known as two-story men are those who climb porches while families are below at dinner, and take money and valuable jewels. The recent robbery of the Sigmund Frank residence is an example of this. It takes a good climber to work at this branch of the criminal business, and a man must be young and strong to do it.

"Crime is pretty much of a study, but an officer cannot be sure of his man until he is convicted. It may seem to be absolutely certain that a given criminal is doing a particular series of jobs, and by mere chance or some clue furnished by some one, it may be discovered that a crook unknown to the police is the real culprit. Still, while men innocent of certain jobs may sometimes be falsely accused or suspected, it is more frequently the case that where the police know a criminal is in the habit of committing crimes similarly each time, they get the right one when an arrest is made."

HOLD WAR CLAIMS AGAINST THE STATE

Survivors of Indian Wars Half Century Ago Ask Appropriation of One Million—Anniversary of Massacre of Volunteers.

Forty-eight years ago yesterday the massacre of volunteers by the Indians occurred at the Cascades. Thirty-five were killed. Claims of the veterans who served in that war, aggregating more than $1,000,000, still remain unpaid. James McDonald, one of those in the service of the country and state, has undertaken to collect not only his own claim, but desires to take up those of others. In an interview last night he said:

"It was just 48 years ago that the massacre occurred at the Cascades, when 35 pioneers of the district were slaughtered. More than $150,000 worth of property was destroyed.

"At that time I lost nearly $25,000, consisting of pack trains, equipment and supplies. Not one cent of it has ever been paid to me by the government.

"I consider that the legislature that appropriated $100,000 to pay the Indian war veterans a portion of what was due them for their services, had no legal or moral right to insert a clause in the bill to deny the widows, orphans or assignees of the veterans from collecting all or portions of the various claims.

"If the widows, orphans and assignees will assign their claims to me, I will begin suit, pay all the costs and make a test case of the action of the legislature.

"The original bill prepared for the legislature carried an appropriation of $300,000, but it was clipped to $100,000. It has now been exhausted, but I received only $32. I enlisted November 2, 1855, and served in various capacities until February 4, 1856—a total of three months and six days. I served a portion of the time with a pack train, and was informed that my time for that service did not count.

"My purpose is to get all the claims I can together and go to Washington and present my cases before the court of claims.

"The volunteers were told at the time of enlistment that if the government would not recognize their claims the state would, and I think the state ought to keep its word. My claim alone now amounts to about $100,000, for I think I ought to be entitled to interest on what I lost at the rate of 6 per cent for the 48 years."

Mr. McDonald is over 80 years old. He has been a resident of Oregon for 55 years, and is one of the best-known pioneers of the state.
