

"ROOSEVELT, TYPE OF OUR NATION'S VIGOROUS YOUTH" BURSTS OF ORATORY

(Continued from Page One.)

where liberty was the word. That party needs no new name or platform to designate its purpose. It is now as it has been, equipped, militant and in motion. The problems of every age that age must solve.

"Great causes impose great demands, but never in any enterprise have the American people failed, and never in any crisis has the Republican party failed to express the conscience and intelligence of that people.

"The public mind is awake both to its opportunities and its dangers. No where in the world, in any era, did citizenship mean more than it means today in America. Men of courage and sturdy character are ranging the country and solving together with unanimity seldom seen. There is no excuse for groping in the dark, for the light is plain to him who will but rise his eyes.

"What American Wants. The American people believe in a man or party that has convictions and knows why. They believe that what experience has proved is ill to resist. A wise man is any fool about to die. But there is a wisdom which with good fortune may guide the living and the strong.

"The school springs from reason, observation and experience. Guided by these things is plain, and young men may rely upon it, that the history and purposes I have described, rising even to the ecstasy and aspirations of patriotism, find their best concrete example in the career and doctrines of the Republican party.

"But not alone upon the principles of the party are its actions to be judged. With the same devotion which has marked their adherence to those principles, magnificent and enduring as they are, they have already stung out the man to bear their standard and to lead the way. No higher badge was ever yet conferred. But great as the honor is, the circumstances which surround it make that honor even more profound.

"You have come from every state and territory in this vast continent, and the country and the town have vied with each other in sending their contributions to this splendid throng. Every highway in the land is leading here and crowded with the members of this great party, which since this splendid day the symbol of its rise and power. Within this unexampled multitude is every rank and condition of free men, every creed and occupation.

"Our Common Purpose. But today a common purpose and desire have engaged us all, and from every nook and corner of the country rises but a single choice to fill the most exalted office in the world. He is no stranger, therefore, who is about to be called suddenly into public light.

and which you have met again to decorate and recognize. His qualities do not need to be retold, for no man in that exalted place since Lincoln has been better known in every household of the land. He is not a conservative, if conservatism means waiting till it is too late. He is not wise, if wisdom is to count a thing a hundred times when once will do.

"There is no regret so keen, in man or country, as that which follows an opportunity unembraced. Fortune soars with high and rapid wing, and whoever brings it down must shoot with accuracy and speed.

"Steady Eye and Nerve. Only the man with steady eye and nerve and the courage to pull the trigger brings the largest opportunities to the ground. He does not always listen while all the sages speak, but every day at nightfall beholds some record which if not complete has been at least pursued with courage and intrepid resolution. He is no slender flower swaying in the wind, but that heroic fiber which is best nurtured by the mountains and the snow. He speaks little time in review, for that he knows can be done by the schools.

"A statesman grappling with the living problems of the hour he gropes but little in the past. He believes in going ahead. He believes that in shaping the destinies of this great republic, hope is a higher impulse than regret. He believes that preparation for future triumph is a more important duty than an inventory of past mistakes.

"A profound student of history, he is today the greatest history maker in the world. With the instincts of the scholar, he is yet forced from the scholar's pursuits by those superb qualities which fit him to the last degree for the greatest world currents now rushing past with larger volume and more portentous aspect than for many years before. The fate of nations is still decided by their wars.

"You may talk of orderly tribunals and learned professions, you may speak of the quiet life, you may strike from your books the last note of every martial anthem, and yet out in the smoke and thunder will always be the tramp of his boots and the silent, mighty, unarméd face. Men may prophesy and women pray, but peace will come here to abide forever on this earth only when the dreams of childhood are the accepted charts to guide the destinies of men.

"The nation's silent night, unarméd and no man can tell which wire runs around the world. The nation basking today in the quiet of contentment and repose may still be on the deadly circuit tomorrow, writing in the tolling of his bells and the anarchy of the great figures must be kept in front. If the pressure is great the material to resist it must be granite and iron.

"Whether we wish it or not, America is a school of the times, and the time is in every street, her name is on every tongue. Those interests so sacred and stupendous should be trusted only to the care of those whose power, skill and courage have been tested and approved.

"And in the man whom you will choose, the highest sense of every nation in the world beholds a man who typifies as no other living American does, the spirit and purpose of the twentieth century. He does not claim to be the Solomon of his time. There are many things he may not know, but this is sure, that above all things else he should be a man of courage and fair play, which are the synonyms of the American name.

(Continued from Page One.)

leries arose on chairs wildly yelling, waving hats, handkerchiefs and banners. For five minutes the cheering continued. Then when it seemed as though the climax had been reached, "Uncle Joe" Cannon advanced to the front platform waving a tattered old flag, a relic of the civil war, and the crowd became frantic.

"Some in Wild One. To add to the wildness of the enthusiasm, the New York delegation suddenly filed from its seats and commenced to march across the hall, waving the silken banners and shouting at the top of their voices. Other delegations joined in and again the Alaskan white eagles soared above the heads of the delegates, stirring the masses who had passed to a still higher pitch. Up into the air and stilling away toward the girders whirled the sombrero of the man from Oklahoma, and through it all the great world currents were playing away, completely unheard and unnoticed. But for the waving of the leader's baton it would have been unknown that the horns were adding their shrill to the tumult of the stadium at every state and territory appeared in the parade.

"Order restored, a call was made and the nomination of Roosevelt was made unanimous. At 11:25 Beveridge began his speech. His voice failed to carry in the opening, but later became distinct. His statement that no mystery should be placed in the nomination of Roosevelt, caught the crowd. As he concluded, 30 minutes later, there was another demonstration at the mention of Roosevelt's name.

"It remained, however, for George A. Knight, a lawyer who is known over the Pacific coast, and who has a western reputation as an orator, to surprise the convention with his force and eloquence. He is unknown to eastern audiences, hence there was no great ovation given him as he was recognized as seconding the nomination speech.

"His sturdy figure, crowned with white hair, almost concealing his eyes, swung forward on the rostrum and his first few words were uttered with a hum of subdued conversation was on. But only for the moment. His clear, strong voice rose to the uttermost of the great Coliseum with such startling directness that a man in the rear gallery surprised at the unusual distinctness, shouted in an astonished tone of delight, 'No more talk! The remark brought down the house.'

"Knight's speech was ripe for the real Americanism and that the liberty for which the minute man fought and the liberty of Lincoln should be taught the people. 'To teach this,' he said, 'is the world that the Republican party was the first organization that made the laboring man a true quality in himself. 'Socialism,' he exclaimed, 'can never win in this country until we have men at home with us. Follow the light of our Washington for its purity of purpose, of Jefferson, Lincoln, McKinley and all the patriots of old. We want a president who will fight the wrong.'

"Theodore Roosevelt, thou art the man! The party needs him more than he needs the party. Dishonesty, duplicity and cowardice are never impulsive. Roosevelt is impulsive. The Democrats who opposed him in the Panama canal negotiations have been quietly laid aside in Democratic graveyards. Roosevelt stands as the representative of a type that is not to die out for some time. After he has given the best years of his life to our people he will take the flag, still pure and unsoiled, and hand it to the American patriot who is next in line."

"Every Vote for Roosevelt. Knight's eloquence held the convention spellbound. His denunciation of socialism and anarchy could not come home in America as warmly applauded. At the conclusion of his speech, which was brief, the entire California delegation proceeded to the platform and escorted him to the center of the hall. Undoubtedly one of the best, if not the best, of the day.

"Harry Stilwell Edwards of Georgia was next introduced. Cannon making an error in the introduction referring to him as 'Mr. Edwards.' Former Governor Bradley of Kentucky was introduced by Chairman Cannon as coming from the state 'where Republicans take their politics like their whiskey straight.' Bradley concluded with an eulogy of the president and gave way to Joseph B. Cotton of Minnesota, who was recognized and warmly applauded.

"When at 1:03 o'clock Harry S. Cummings, the negro orator of Maryland, was introduced by the nomination committee. The new Jersey delegation interrupted with a motion that the nomination be made by acclamation, but from every part of the hall cries of 'No, no!' showed the temper of the delegates, and the roll call was ordered. Every vote in the convention was cast for Roosevelt and he was declared the nominee. The announcement brought the convention to its feet once again with waving of flags and terrific shouting.

These possibilities are not exhausted; we have hardly passed their boundaries. The American people are not exhausted; we have only tested our strength. God's work for us in the world is not finished; His future missions for the American people will be grander than any He has given us—no grander than we can now comprehend.

"And these tasks, as they come, we will accept and accomplish as our fathers accomplished theirs. And when our generation shall have passed and our children shall catch from our aging hands the standard we have borne, it will be the old flag of Yorktown and Appomattox and Manila bay; the music to which they in their turn will then move onward will still be the strains that cheered the dying Warren on Bunker Hill and inspired the men who answered Lincoln's call; and the ideals that will be in their triumphant, as they are in us, will still be the old ideals that have made the American people great and honored among the nations of the earth.

"This is the Republican idea of the American people; this thought we have when we nominate today our candidate for the nation's chief; this the quality of the Americanism of the standard-bearer must have. And this is just the Americanism of Theodore Roosevelt.

"Full of the old-time faith in the republic and its destiny, charged with the energy of the republic's full method; cherishing the ordinances of the republic's fathers and having in his heart the fear of God; inspired by the sure knowledge that the Republic's splendid day is only in its dawn, Theodore Roosevelt will lead the American people in paths of safety to still greater welfare for themselves, still broader betterment of the race, and to the added honor of the American name."

lately after the adjournment of the convention and unanimously elected Cortelyou chairman. There were but few formalities attendant upon the choice, as, like the convention, all opposition had been crushed out before the meeting took place and the result was a foregone conclusion.

"Popular opinion, which has given the Republican party the platform upon which all Republicans stand, with no dissenting voice here or anywhere, has long since anticipated the action of the convention in electing to the national Republican ticket the name of Senator Fairbanks of Indiana.

"I take pleasure in presenting this name, honored everywhere throughout the United States, as our candidate for vice-president."

"Dolliver concluded and the mention of Fairbanks' name was loudly cheered. Before Dolliver had taken his seat, Dewey was on his feet to make the seconding speech, which was accomplished in his usual, but more than usually, forceful style of oratory. He was followed by Forsaker, who in turn was followed by Pennsylvania, and former Senator Carter, of Montana.

"Before the roll could be called, Dewey moved that the roll call be suspended and the nomination be made by acclamation. A demonstration scarcely less than that which greeted the nomination of Roosevelt followed.

"When quiet was restored Dolliver offered a resolution appointing Cannon as chairman of a committee to notify the president of his nomination, and Root as chairman of a committee to notify Fairbanks of his honor. Roosevelt will be notified July 31, and Fairbanks August 8.

"Senator Nelson offered a resolution for the publication of the official record of the convention, which was agreed to. Senator Heyburn of Idaho offered a resolution thanking the officers of the convention for their efficient services and Governor Murray of New Jersey for making the city of Chicago for its courtesies and excellent arrangements.

These possibilities are not exhausted; we have hardly passed their boundaries. The American people are not exhausted; we have only tested our strength. God's work for us in the world is not finished; His future missions for the American people will be grander than any He has given us—no grander than we can now comprehend.

"And these tasks, as they come, we will accept and accomplish as our fathers accomplished theirs. And when our generation shall have passed and our children shall catch from our aging hands the standard we have borne, it will be the old flag of Yorktown and Appomattox and Manila bay; the music to which they in their turn will then move onward will still be the strains that cheered the dying Warren on Bunker Hill and inspired the men who answered Lincoln's call; and the ideals that will be in their triumphant, as they are in us, will still be the old ideals that have made the American people great and honored among the nations of the earth.

"This is the Republican idea of the American people; this thought we have when we nominate today our candidate for the nation's chief; this the quality of the Americanism of the standard-bearer must have. And this is just the Americanism of Theodore Roosevelt.

"Full of the old-time faith in the republic and its destiny, charged with the energy of the republic's full method; cherishing the ordinances of the republic's fathers and having in his heart the fear of God; inspired by the sure knowledge that the Republic's splendid day is only in its dawn, Theodore Roosevelt will lead the American people in paths of safety to still greater welfare for themselves, still broader betterment of the race, and to the added honor of the American name."

lately after the adjournment of the convention and unanimously elected Cortelyou chairman. There were but few formalities attendant upon the choice, as, like the convention, all opposition had been crushed out before the meeting took place and the result was a foregone conclusion.

"Popular opinion, which has given the Republican party the platform upon which all Republicans stand, with no dissenting voice here or anywhere, has long since anticipated the action of the convention in electing to the national Republican ticket the name of Senator Fairbanks of Indiana.

"I take pleasure in presenting this name, honored everywhere throughout the United States, as our candidate for vice-president."

"Dolliver concluded and the mention of Fairbanks' name was loudly cheered. Before Dolliver had taken his seat, Dewey was on his feet to make the seconding speech, which was accomplished in his usual, but more than usually, forceful style of oratory. He was followed by Forsaker, who in turn was followed by Pennsylvania, and former Senator Carter, of Montana.

"Before the roll could be called, Dewey moved that the roll call be suspended and the nomination be made by acclamation. A demonstration scarcely less than that which greeted the nomination of Roosevelt followed.

"When quiet was restored Dolliver offered a resolution appointing Cannon as chairman of a committee to notify the president of his nomination, and Root as chairman of a committee to notify Fairbanks of his honor. Roosevelt will be notified July 31, and Fairbanks August 8.

"Senator Nelson offered a resolution for the publication of the official record of the convention, which was agreed to. Senator Heyburn of Idaho offered a resolution thanking the officers of the convention for their efficient services and Governor Murray of New Jersey for making the city of Chicago for its courtesies and excellent arrangements.

"The Store noted for the Best Goods at Lowest Prices."

BATHING SEASON

Is here and we have an elegant line of well tailored garments in

Swell Bathing Suits

for women, misses, children, men and boys.

Women's and Misses' Bathing Suits

In mohair, alpaca, in black-blue, red and white, with or without collars, sailor collars, collarless, fancy braided trimmed, well tailored and made to fit perfectly. We have them from

$1.50, $1.85, $2.00, $2.25, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.50 and up to $7.50.

For Men and Boys

Swell Suits, all colors, woolen knit, cotton and woolen, from

50c TO $3.50 A SUIT

MEN'S AND BOYS' BATHING TRUNKS, 10¢ and 15¢. Bathing Caps and Shoes, in every variety and quality.

McAllen & McDonnell

WE ONLY EXCLUSIVE BEST GOODS STORE IN THE CITY.
CORNER 10 AND HOBBINS.

HIGH SCORES BEING MADE AT PENDLETON

(Special Dispatch to the Journal.) Pendleton, June 23.—Fifteen squads of five each are taking part in the shooting tournament today. The weather is fine and more than 100 spectators are present. High scores are being made. The averages will not be known till the end of the day.

CHAUTAUQUA PLANS ARE COMPLETED

The eleventh annual assembly of the Willamette Valley Chautauqua association will hold its coming session at Gladstone park, July 13 to 14 inclusive. The program this year is more elaborate and interesting than any of the preceding ones. Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson will deliver lectures on "America's Mighty Mission" and "America, Mistress of the Sea." Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, successor to Henry Ward Beecher in the famous Plymouth church in Brooklyn, will deliver several lectures. The musical department will be under the direction of Martin E. Robinson. On Saturday evening, July 16, the cantata, "Queen Esther," will be given by picked voices from the state and a chorus of 100 singers. The same talent will render "Selskammer" on the opening of July 23.

(Journal Special Service.) St. John was on fete today in celebration of the 300th anniversary of the discovery of this section of the American continent by the French explorer, Champlain and De Monts. The anniversary is being celebrated also this week at Calais, Me. and at various points in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

GET THE PIANO

You can get it if you will try. You can get it without an effort.

A $350

Instrument delivered free to your home. A Kingsbury Piano. You can see it in the show windows of the Allen & Gilbert-Ramaker Co.

TICKETS with each and every 50c purchase.

25 Tickets with one of our great

$12.50

Men's Suits

Famous

CLOTHING CO.

Morrison and Second Sts.

DECIDE TO BUILD ON THE PENINSULA SITE

MAENNERCHOR HAS A LETTER FROM KAISER

(Washington Bureau of the Journal.) Washington, D. C., June 23.—The Government exposition board today decided to locate the Government buildings at the Lewis and Clark Exposition on the peninsula site. This conclusion was reached after hearing Director-General Goods, of Portland, who explained in detail the fair ground conditions.

Although expected, still the news of the government's acceptance of the peninsula as the site for its buildings, was gratifying to the management of the 1905 fair, as any other site would have involved an entire change of plan and would have resulted in the government's exhibit being lost amid the other buildings, while on the peninsula the government display will be alone and its surroundings will be in keeping with the exhibit. Addition to the officers of the corporation, the government's surveyor found that there were 33 acres on the peninsula above the highest water ever known in the state, and a government building will be erected on four or five foot foundation, the alleged danger of overflow was soon discovered to be merely a theory.

In the plans of the corporation the peninsula will be approached by a "bridge of nations," which will be rather a highway than a bridge, on which will be many exhibits. The government buildings will be placed together, no other structures will be permitted on the peninsula, and a fair within the fair will be shown, the peninsula being entirely under the charge of the government's commission.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO MEET.

(Journal Special Service.) London, June 23.—The theatrical benefit given at His Majesty's theatre this afternoon for Clement Scott, the dean of English critics, proved to be one of the most notable benefit performances since that given some years ago for the late Nellie Farren.

Nearly every actor and actress of note now in London took part; the number including Sir Henry Irving, Arthur Bourchier, George Alexander, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Mrs. Langtry and Beer-holm Tree. Mr. Tree appeared in a new and entertaining monologue specially written for the occasion.

Col. H. D. Loveland of San Francisco, who is chairman of the executive committee of the Knights Templar, concludes to be held in that city from September 5 to September 11, in Portland and will meet with the Oregon commandery this evening for a friendly conference and to discuss arrangements for the convocation. Colonel Loveland is a member of the staff of Governor Pardee of California.

THE GENTLEMAN FROM INDIANA

Who and What Charles Warren Fairbanks Is.

A PIONEER ENGINEER GOES TO LONG REST

The funeral of the late Eliza Kellogg took place from the family residence at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and the interment was in Greenwood cemetery. The deceased was 78 years old and a native of Canada. He crossed the plains with his brother, the late Captain Joseph Kellogg, and located on a donation land claim at Milwaukee. He was one of the builders of the old Standard flouring mill at Milwaukee, and assisted his brother, Joseph Kellogg, to build the first locks at Oregon City. Later, he was manager of the Muckle sawmill at St. Helens, and served as a marine engineer on the Willamette and Columbia during the past 20 years.

CYCLONE IN HUNGARY BRINGS DEATH TO 43

(Journal Special Service.) Vienna, June 23.—Twenty-three persons were killed by lightning and 20 drowned in a terrific hail storm of cyclonic proportions in Moravia, Hungary. The storm is described as being like those in America, a true cyclone with accompanying electrical disturbances.