

DELEGATES DEPART FOR THEIR HOMES

CHICAGO WAS APPEARANCE OF DELEGATES CITY—UNCLE JOE' CAMERON, SUFFERING FROM MALARIA, GOES TO DANVILLE—CORTELYOU TO WASHINGTON.

(Journal Special Service.) Chicago, June 24.—Chicago has the appearance of a deserted city today. The delegates have for the most part left for their homes and the big Coliseum, in which but yesterday resounded the voices of noted orators, now stands silent, stripped of its furnishings. Speaker Joseph Cameron was taken to his home in Danville last night by his daughter in a special car. He is suffering from malaria and only the supreme determination of the man permitted him to preside over the national convention. If no further serious developments came an attempt will be made to have "Uncle Joe" take a voyage to the north cape.

Cortelyou leaves tomorrow for Washington. He will take no active part in politics till July 1, at which time he goes out of his present office as secretary of commerce and labor. He will establish temporary headquarters at Washington till August 1, after which time it is said he will divide his time between that city and New York, while engaged in his duties as chairman of the national committee.

About 1,000 of the delegates left after adjournment yesterday, for St. Louis to visit the world's fair.

1,000 VISITORS ARRIVE

(Journal Special Service.) St. Louis, June 24.—One thousand Republican delegates arrived this morning from Chicago to visit the fair. No set program is followed by the visitors, and singly and in groups they are visiting the beauties of the buildings and exhibits.

HARRIS MURDER CASE WILL OPEN TUESDAY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Spokane, June 24.—The trial of Mrs. Jeannette Harris, the Yakima woman who killed her grandchild, has been set for next Tuesday. She was arraigned in the Superior court on the charge of murder in the first degree. She entered a plea of not guilty.

When Mrs. Harris entered the courtroom she had the appearance more of a spectator than the prisoner at the bar. She appeared very composed and during the reading of the complaint by the prosecuting attorney not a muscle of her face moved. It is understood that the defense will be temporary insanity, induced by the fact that the woman was unable to find a home for the child.

Haly, secretary of the convention, delivered an address. About 100 delegates are in attendance upon the convention. SPOKANE CHILD IS KILLED IN COLLISION

(Journal Special Service.) Lima, O., June 24.—Laura Keppen, aged eight years, of Spokane, Wash., who was visiting with relatives here, was killed in a street car accident last night, and three other passengers were fatally injured.

Two cars of the Western Ohio traction line, while running at nearly full speed, collided at a point a mile south of this city, due to a failure in the block system, which governs the road. The cars came together on a curve in a cut, and before the air brakes could work crashed into each other. Several passengers received minor injuries from being thrown to the floors or out by flying glass.

CLASS DAY AT HARVARD.

(Journal Special Service.) Cambridge, Mass., June 24.—Today was class day at Harvard. At 9 o'clock the senior class assembled and marched to Appleton chapel, where a short service was conducted by the chaplain of the day. At the close of the services the seniors had about an hour and a half to themselves in which to look after their relatives and friends. Shortly after 10 o'clock Sanders' theatre was opened to the holders of tickets. At 11 o'clock it was closed to all but the seniors. The class day term exercises were given this afternoon, and were preceded, as usual, by the students marching round the yard and cheering the college buildings.

Special Notice.

Since we began manufacturing Elastic Pulp Plaster in this territory certain imitation goods have appeared on the market, just as we expected would be the case, and these imitations have in some instances been represented as being the same as Elastic Pulp Plaster. We desire to warn the public against these imitation goods.

These imitations will represent that their plaster contains wood fibre and that this is the distinctive feature of Elastic Pulp Plaster. This, we desire to emphasize, is one of the distinctive features of our plaster, and only one.

The incorporation of a coarse wood fibre into a mixture of lime, gypsum, sand or shale no more produces Elastic Pulp Plaster than does the incorporation of gold into a mixture of brass and copper produce 21k gold, and only one.

These imitations do not manufacture Elastic Pulp Plaster and they dare not make it, and we shall prosecute any party manufacturing or selling plaster representing it to be the same as ours upon the first evidence obtainable.

"Imitation is the sincerest flattery," but beware of the imitation.

CREDIT MEN IN MONTHLY SESSION

LOCAL ASSOCIATION NOMINATES OFFICERS AND DISCUSSES THE INSURANCE PROBLEM — MR. THOMPSON READS A VALUABLE AND INTERESTING PAPER.

It was a representative body of the credit men of Portland who gathered last evening at the Commercial club for the monthly banquet of the Credit Men's association. The occasion was one of especial interest, both because of the papers read and because officers were nominated for the coming year. The meeting was well attended, 41 members and a number of invited guests being present.

W. H. Preston, who was the first president of the National Association of Credit Men and is now president of the Los Angeles Association of Credit Men, was one of the speakers of the evening, his theme being the credit indemnity bond.

Mr. Preston spoke upon a subject of which he has thorough knowledge, being the western manager of the bankers' department, Western Credit-Indemnity company of New York. He explained at length the nature of the credit indemnity bond and its value to the business man. He said in part:

"When your goods have gone from under your roof, and have passed out from that splendid protection that you place over them of fire insurance, they go upon your books in the shape of accounts and notes receivable, which amounts represent the original cost of the goods—which is all that was covered by the fire insurance—with the added expense of doing business, together with the profit. We therefore protect not only the value of your goods, but your profits and expenses as well. No one here can say that he does not have losses, and no one will attempt to affirm that some years his losses are not greater than other years.

"My experience as a credit man for nearly 20 years has also shown me that the losses usually occur where least expected; it is not the account which we lose so often as it is the account which, through familiarity, has caused us to be careless; and the frequent placing of O. K.'s upon the order has become so much a matter of machinery that the old friend we have sold so long has, unexpectedly because of our familiarity with his name, been drawn into deeper water and is unable to get out without invoking some form of administration. Not only that, our insurance strengthens confidence among business men. The firm carrying our bond will conduct its business in a more careful and businesslike manner; its collections will be better, and over-extension of credit guarded against."

Of especial value to the business men of Portland was the carefully prepared paper on fire insurance and its relation to credit and expense, read by E. L. Thompson, of Hartman, Thompson & Powers. Mr. Thompson has given much consideration to the importance of improving the fire risks in Portland and of lessening the danger of heavy and widespread fire losses. He said in part:

"It is a well-established fact that it is not the high-rated, unprotected risk that is desired by the fire insurance companies, but the low-rated risk, that, by reason of its cleanliness, proper construction, protection and honesty of the owner, is desired most by the insurer. Every well-regulated insurance company maintains a complete classification record of all buildings and contents, showing the percentage of loss and damage on each compared with the income, and on the general average they have a clear and positive guide in fixing rates. These records date back to the early history of the insurance business, and are carefully continued as improvements are being made and whenever these are found to be of an advantage, either to prevent or restrain fire, credits are promptly and freely given and rates reduced. In addition to the individual records maintained in the home office, traveling inspectors are employed by each company for the purpose of inspecting buildings and stocks, to avoid the company from being called upon to pay losses where such losses could be prevented by proper precautions and improvements. In addition to the company's own inspectors, general inspectors and surveyors are maintained by the pro rata contribution of all of the companies doing business in this territory. The duty of these general surveyors, working under the direction of an efficient leader and manager, is to aid as far as possible in bringing about improved conditions and to encourage the owners of buildings to construct a better class of risks and to protect it from the spread of fire.

"Not only do these surveys aid and advise individuals, but they bring their influence to bear on public officials and city councils to enforce and improve the building laws and are constantly urging upon them the necessity of maintaining adequate water supply, better fire departments, constructing fire escapes, fire walls, fire boats, regulating the storage of explosives and extending the fire limits; and let me say right here, gentlemen, the construction and maintenance of wooden buildings in the congested district is a constant menace to our city and should have the careful attention of every merchant and property owner. Not only are the adjoining buildings endangered, but the entire block, indeed, the entire city."

"I need only refer to the recent great conflagrations of Baltimore, Toronto and other cities to show how important this matter is to co-operate in our effort to prevent such catastrophes at home, and as far as possible, construct not only your own buildings, but interest yourselves in other structures to secure improved conditions and induce public officials to enforce existing building laws and to maintain and extend the fire limits. In this way your own property will be safer and in turn your rate will be lower. In brief, the hazard makes the rate."

The nomination of officers of the Credit Men's association, to be voted for at the next regular meeting, on the third Wednesday of July, resulted as follows: For president, C. W. Cottle, secretary of the Luckel, King & Calk Soap company; for vice-president, Paul De Haas, manager for C. Gottsman & Co.; for secretary, W. L. Abrams, bookkeeper for Allen & Lewis; for treasurer, J. L. Schultz, of Frazer, Hegels & Co.

BIDS OPENED FOR MARQUAM BRIDGE

Bids for the construction of the big steel bridge to be erected across Marquam gulch on Front street were opened this afternoon by the members of the street committee of the executive board. This will be the second of the new South Portland bridges, the first structure across the gulch being on First street. Work on the bridge will be commenced as soon as possible, and it is thought that the steel structure will be completed early next fall. The plans for the bridge were drawn by City Engineer Elliott.

Tomorrow morning the contract for the building of the new fire department station will be let by the fire committee of the executive board. The station will be erected near the corner of Third and Gileson streets, on the lot between the approach to the steel bridge and the Williams Iron works.

BODIES OF FORTY ARE UNIDENTIFIED

TOTAL NUMBER OF CORPSES RECOVERED FROM SLOCUM DISASTER HAS REACHED 900—LATEST ESTIMATES SHOW THAT DEATH LIST WILL BE MORE THAN 1,000.

(Journal Special Service.) New York, June 24.—The total number of bodies of the Slocum disaster recovered has reached 900. Forty of these remain unburied and unidentified. The work of pumping out the hull of the Slocum will be completed today, but it is not believed that any more corpses will be found there.

From visits made by the police to 1,100 families estimates of the dead and missing are now fixed at a little more than 1,000 persons.

A monster benefit for children who are sufferers from the disaster will be given in the Grand opera house tonight. Inquiry into the Slocum disaster so far shows that the life preservers crumbled like ashes when attempts were made to release them from the wire fastenings that held them when not in use.

Although Captain Vanschaek has expressed a willingness to testify, owing to his weakened condition, it has been ordered that he remain in the hospital, and his appearance before the coroner has been postponed until next week.

In many instances persons who have been officially reported missing have been found alive and well at their homes by the police.

THE SOCIAL SECRETARY.

A New Office Created by Department Store.

From the New York World.

In these modern times business concerns have become so great that the employer's time is completely absorbed and he cannot give to matters relating to the welfare of his employees the attention they merit. These conditions have created a new need, and the need a new profession—the social secretary throughout the establishment.

The first representative in this new profession in New York is Mrs. Isabelle F. Nye, who for two years has held the position in one of the largest of New York's department stores.

The social and moral conditions and influences in the store are the chief concern of the secretary, and while Mrs. Nye does not profess to be a "mother" to the girls employed, she is their friend, their counselor and benefactress. She is never too busy to listen to their business and personal affairs of whatever nature, and to give them the benefit of her best judgment and advice. She strives to make the high ideals of life attractive, and to inspire in them noble aspirations and to reveal to them the beauty and satisfaction of pure living.

Many temptations assail young women and girls in business life, and these tend to lower their mental and moral standards. Through love of dress, also, many girls are led to take the first false step. These dangers are of the most insidious character, and the secretary strives to exert a strong influence against harmful allurements and tastes beyond their means. She warns them against indulging a desire for admiration, also against flirting and against allowing men to be familiar. She teaches them that modesty and simplicity are a girl's greatest charms, and that true womanliness commands the respect and reverence of men who are worth knowing.

The secretary inspects the lunch-room and sees that the proper standard of food is maintained. She has charge of the library and reading matter in the girls' rest-room. She acts as president of the girls' club also. In cases of illness or trouble the secretary visits the absent employee and provides little delicacies and comforts, or necessary aid.

The secretary is the editor of a monthly publication which is devoted entirely to the interests of the employees. It is called "Thought and Work."

The secretary co-operates with the officers of the Employees' Benefit association and attends to the details of securing the amounts due to those who are absent through illness. This benefit association provides a fund for emergencies of every character. The tax on each employee is trifling, ranging from 10 to 40 cents a month. From this fund, during illness, half the patient's salary is paid, and in case of death $100 is allowed for funeral expenses. Loans are also made from this fund, and repaid, without interest, at the convenience of the borrower.

A physician is in constant attendance from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. each working day, and he also visits the employees who are ill at home. The physician's office is fitted up with modern electrical and surgical instruments, and also a complete stock of drugs and medicals.

A pleasant infirmary adjoins the physician's office, where a nurse is in attendance to care for girls who are indisposed. Should an illness prove serious the patient is sent home by car, and the necessary arrangements are made for the disposal of the firm where girls who are out of health or overtired are sent for rest and recuperation. They may remain for any length of time necessary for their recovery, and they may go at any time of the year.

During the past year and a half more than 50 girls have been restored to health by a sojourn at this country retreat. The association owns at Long Branch, N. J., a large, roomy, homelike cottage where, from 50 to 60 girls are accommodated for vacation each week during the summer season. This cottage is furnished with every comfort and convenience, the rooms being much superior to those in a majority of the summer hotels. Provisions and supplies are abundant here, and are of the most superior quality.

Invitations of the most approved form are sent to the girls who become the guests of the firm during these vacations. The social secretary becomes the hostess of the cottage, planning and managing the programs providing for the recreation and entertainment of the guests. Here the mornings are devoted to ocean bathing and walks on the beach. Coaching parties, sailing parties, trolley parties, lawn and house parties follow in succession each day of the week. Games on the lawn are also a healthful and favorite pastime with the girls. A library of good books is furnished as well.

What Did He Mean?

Wife—"But doesn't it cost an awful lot of money to send me to the seashore for three months every summer?"

Husband—"Oh, yes, of course. Money is certainly a great blessing."
