

though away to render conversation inaudible, Miss Lormer called to him: "Wait a minute, please!"

He stood in the darkness waiting, and she fearfully went up to him. "I don't like to think of your going away without anything," she said.

"I have a rose here," she said, and she pulled a rose from her hair, thrust it into his hand, and ran back to her lover.

"Dick," said Mr. Emley to himself, "you have been awakened."

From the Chicago News. As the tall young woman entered the dining room, her friends and the little woman who was one of the party at a table near the door, called out admiringly:

"Oh, Miss Prinder, every time I see you come into the room I wish I were tall like you, so you can't say you're any better than I am!"

"This isn't her first offense, then?" "No, indeed; it's a habit of hers. Nature provides all small women with the method of attack to enable them to get the better of their larger sisters."

"What do you think of these new shoes of mine?" she demanded, eagerly. "Aren't they perfectly huge? But you know, I thought for one moment they would get shoes that wouldn't scuff out the first time I wore them, so I bought these in the boys' department."

BURGLAR'S ROMANCE BY R. L. SAUNDERSON.

Mr. Emley was a burglar. He was, however, a select burglar, an artist in his profession. On a very dark night one March he walked up the front steps of the finest house in Castletown.

and all Castletown turned out. The affair was one of great social magnificence. He had taken the precaution of having the silverware packed in small boxes, but even so he found difficulty in loading it onto the cart he had driven out upon the lawn.

Another universal trick of little women is to assume the helpless, dependent role, which, of course, appeals to all mankind. They have to have some one to check their baggage and buy their tickets.

From the Chicago Chronicle. Among the connoisseurs of precious stones the emerald is the most highly esteemed and prized. Although this gem has been discovered in almost every country in the world, there is not an emerald mine being worked today.

A good emerald is worth several times as much as a diamond of the same size. Gen. George W. Mirfield, precious stones expert for the United States at the Port of New York, says that fewer emeralds have come into the country during the past year than ever before.
