attorneys for the company.

The supreme court yesterday handed down decisions in four cases. The most important to Marion county was the de-cision in favor of the plaintiff in the case of G. D. Trotter, against the town of Stayton.

Trotter won in the circuit court, and the decision was yesterday affirmed. Trotter is awarded possession of the land and $275 damages. It is claimed that this decision will bankrupt the town of Stayton, on account of the great expense of conducting the cases, and now being compelled to pay costs of both actions through the highest courts. In the case of Florence Sheridan against Empire City, on appeal from Coos county, the decision of Judge Ham-liton was modified in a measure, but only is to the amount of land to be held by plaintiffs.

The famous elevator case of P. M. Massey against M. Seller & Co., of Portland was decided yesterday in favor of M. Seller & Co. This is the case wherein Massey walked into a dark room looking for a closet, and found it to be an elevator shaft. He brought suit for damages, but the court decided that he was guilty of contributory negligence, and therefore not entitled to damages.

The case against the Coos Bay, Roseburg & Eastern Railroad & Navigation company was reversed, and Judge Hamplaintiffs. company was reversed, and Judge Ham-fiton instructed to grant a new trial. This case was brought by W. E. Barnes to collect $4,000 on promissory notes.

The $5,000 damage suit of Oscar Johnson against Inman, Poulsen & Co. came to a sudden end today in the circuit court. When Judge George called the day's calendar, one of the plaintiff's attorneys asked that it be dismissed. He said that Anderson, shortly after leading his attorneys to have the case set for trial today, had come to them and represented that he was offered a very good job in a neighboring city and desired very much to accept it, but explained that he would be at hand when the trial of the case came on. With that he had bidden them goodbye. They now learn that he has gone to Florida.
